OAS Ministers Vote To End Dominican Diplomatic Ties

CONGO CRISIS DEEPENS

Soviets Demand U.N. Withdraw Canadian Forces

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Russia Saturday denounced the United Nations plan for rehabilitation of the Congo as being designed only to please the United States and its allies.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov in a protest to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold also demanded the immediate withdrawal of all Canadian troops from the Congo because Canada is a NATO ally of Belgium.

Kuznetsov refused to tell a news conference whether Russia would offer at a Security Council session called for 12:30 p.m. EDT Sunday a resolution calling for an end to Hammarskjold's policies in the Congo.

AGAINST PROGRAM

However, he did say that if the issue came to a vote Russia would vote against the program followed in the U.N. Congo operation.

As delegates gathered for the emergency Sunday council session the Soviets sought to espouse the cause of the Congolese government by accusing the U.N. forces of "unlawful actions" in the Congo.

Kuznetsov told Hammerskjold in a private meeting that Russia "strongly objects" to the fact that U.N. forces were ordered to open fire if necessary at the Leopoldville airport in the Congo.

He accused Canadian troops at the airport of "launching an aggression" against the Congo and demanded that they be "immediately withdrawn" from the country.

Kuznetsov, in a 30-minute session with the U.N. chief, insisted that the Congolese government must have control over all airports in the country. He said that attacks against Congolese forces by U.N. troops "contradicted" the Security Council's order that U.N. forces "render military assistance to the government of the Republic of Congo."

Congo May Request Aid Outside U.N.

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo, (AP)—Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba said Saturday his government has authorized him to seek military and other aid outside the United Nations if his demands are not satisfied by the U. N. Security Council Sunday.

Lumumba said his Cabinet has authorized him to "make contact for direct aid from any country in all fields as from tomorrow."

GETS APPLAUSE

Government supporters attending the news conference and one or two Communist correspondents applauded when the Premier made this statement.

"That," said Lumumba, "is the applause of 14 million Congolese."

Asked where he would apply for aid if the Security Council did not agree to send the African-Asian observer group he has requested and meet other demands, Lumumba said: "I don't think it will be necessary. And anyway it is an affair of state."

Correspondents asked whether he would apply to African countries or white nations and he replied: "I do not make any distinction."

Lumumba said he called his news conference to "clarify international opinion."

"We can always tell the United Nations to withdraw," Lumumba said. "The United Nations came here at our request and we can ask them to leave."

But the Premier went on to say he knows "the United Nations understands its role here."

He took pains to repeat he had confidence in the United Nations, it he had lost confidence in Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold.

"We do not want to replace the Belgian occupation with a United Nations occupation," he said. "The United Nations task here is limited."

U.S. Excludes Buying Of Cuba Sugar In Loan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has refused to allow Morocco to buy Cuban sugar with American loan dollars, it was disclosed Saturday.

An official told United Press International that, depending on future developments, the action might be the first step in a general policy of forbidding other countries to use U.S. loans to trade with Cuba.

An International Cooperation Administration (ICA) official confirmed that a $10 million U.S. loan made to Morocco for the purpose of buying sugar was rewritten this week to exclude Cuba as the source.

He said there were two reasons for the action.

—Under normal conditions, Morocco would order the sugar through a commercial broker in New York. The broker would import the sugar from one of the American - owned Cuban sugar firms. But now that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's pro-Communist government has seized all the sugar firms, the broker must make his payment directly to the Cuban government. Officials and sugar industry executives felt this would constitute implied recognition of the expropriation of American property.

—Under the terms of U.S. loans half the goods purchased must be shipped in American flagships. The ships have run into difficulties in Cuban ports. Some have been detained long after the normal loading time. Hence, U. S. shipowners have been reluctant to send their vessels to Havana.

Officials said they felt the best way to get this country out of both problems was to remove U.S. loans from any transactions involving Cuba.

The action was confined to Morocco because it was the only country with an outstanding sugar loan authorization which probably would use the money in Cuba.

Still Chance Of Rain Here

Skies will be partly cloudy through tonight and there is still a chance of an afternoon thundershower in the area, so predicts the weatherman.

Little temperature change is expected with the high around 92 and the low near 72. Temperature range yesterday was 91 to 72 and there was .13 inches of rainfall recorded at Selman Field by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Mostly southerly winds will range from 5 to 15 miles per hour, except higher near any thundershower activity.

SOVIETS REPORT

Dogs Survive Trip In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Saturday its dog-carrying space ship has been returned to earth with its live cargo safe.

The Soviets triumphantly announced the historical first of orbiting living creatures into space and returning them alive.

The dogs, named Arrow and Squirrel and about the size of large fox terriers, were whizzed around the globe at a height of 198.8 miles at a rate of 227 miles a minute. They circled the earth 18 times before they were landed at a predetermined spot, Tass said.

CLAIM FIRST

While the United States has recovered vehicles from outer space, it has not returned a living being from beyond the earth's atmosphere.

The Soviets said they brought back to earth both the space ship and "the capsule with the experimental animals detached from the ship."

Radio Moscow said in addition to the two dogs, the 4½-ton space ship carried several rats and mice, flies, plants, fungi, microscopic water plants and some seeds. It also carried television cameras to observe the dogs' behavior and a raft of scientific instruments.

It was launched Friday just in time for the feat to be announced at the height of excitement over the trial of the American U2 plane pilot, Francis Gary Powers.

FOR SENTENCE CUT

Wife Of Powers Planning Appeal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Barbara Powers said Saturday night she would appeal to the president of the Soviet Union on Monday to reduce the 10-year sentence of her confessed American spy-pilot husband and "do everything in the world" to help him. But she sadly admitted her husband doubted her chances.

The 25-year-old brunette from Milledgeville, Ga., who was "all cried out" after the strain and tension of the three - day trial of her husband, Francis Gary Powers, told newsmen in a trembling voice that she never would give up trying to win leniency for him.

In addition to her appeal to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, who heads the 14-member Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament), attorneys for the Powers family planned a separate desperate appeal to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev—although by law any clemency can come only from Brezhnev.

TELLS OF REUNION

"I told him I would try to do everything in the world I could," she said in her soft drawl. "he didn't think anything would help."

There were "hardly any words," when she, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Powers of Pound, Va., met him in an anteroom of the court Friday.

"As Gary walked into the room he stretched out both arms and was crying," she said. "I went to him. Then we had a conference around a large table."

She said firmly that he was "quite definitely" the husband she had known, emotionally and mentally.

Her father-in-law, a shoemaker,

Sicily Island Negroes Drown In Catahoula

HARRISONBURG (Special) — Three Negro boys from Sicily Island drowned late yesterday afternoon in the Ouachita River at the locks and dams near Harrisonburg.

The dead were tentatively identified as brothers, Duke Jones, 15, James Jones, 13, and Cordell Jones Jr., 11, by another Sicily Island Negro, Albert Mickens.

Mickens said that they were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Cordell Jones, of Sicily Island.

DRAGGING

The rescue squad from the Natchez, Miss., fire department, along with Catahoula Parish Sheriff George McGee and his deputies, began dragging operations for the bodies immediately.

According to witnesses, the accident occurred about 5 p.m. when the boys were either wading or fishing on the south side of Lock No. 2, about 175 feet from the lock which is located about one-fourth mile from Harrisonburg.

Two of the witnesses, Paul Rodriguez and W. A. Porter, both of Monroe, working with the U. S. Corps of Engineers, were fishing in a small boat just north of the dam and saw the three boys go under, but were unable to reach them.

They told Catahoula officials that the trio were approximately 175 feet from the dam itself, on the south side, and about 200 feet from the west bank of the river. They said that evidently the three got into a deep hole, and that the current there was very swift.

Another witness, H. N. Sutton

UNDER NEW EDICT

Desk-Bound Pilots Face Financial Clip

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Several thousand desk-bound pilots of the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine Corps are about to get their financial wings clipped, Defense Department officials said Saturday.

Their flight pay, which runs as high as $245 a month, is to be cut off at the end of this year under a congressional edict limiting to 99,046 the number of officers the armed services may keep on flying status.

The Air Force Friday issued detailed criteria for selection of its share of the cut. It has notified 3,799 potential victims that they will be screened by a review board Oct. 10-21.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Air Force pilots will be cut off flying status. An Air Force spokesman said the exact number will not be known until the Defense Department fixes the break-down of the total cut among the services.

Navy and Army spokesmen said they expected fewer of their pilots would be affected. The Navy already has trimmed the number of its fliers in non-flying jobs who draw flight pay, and it is reactivating two air groups.

An Army spokesman said he expected that the Army would not have to take any immediate action to reduce the number of its officers in flight pay status. But final allocation of the cut among the services has not yet been made by the Defense Department.

The order will be a sharp blow to officers who have based their living standards on the assumption of continued flight pay.

Pentagon corridors this week were full of talk about sending wives to work, selling that second car, and moving out of homes that were being bought through mortgage installments covered by flight pay.

Nixon Splits With Ike On Medical Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon split with the Eisenhower administration's proposal on medical care for the aged Saturday and endorsed a new plan featuring a broader program of "preventive" care.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., presented the plan in a Senate speech and later claimed Nixon's support at a news conference. A Nixon spokesman then confirmed that the GOP presidential nominee had worked in the preparation of the plan and favored its adoption.

BILL APPROVED

The Senate Finance Committee has already approved a bill that would provide medical care of persons over 65 under public assistance machinery administered by the states. A similar bill was approved by the House.

The Eisenhower administration has indicated it would accept either approach but has served notice that it opposes any move to finance medical benefits by increasing Social Security payroll taxes.

Democrats are backing a measure to provide medical care at age 68 under the Social Security system.

Richard Bean, Nixon's assistant press secretary, told newsmen that Arthur S. Flemming, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, also had worked on the Javits proposal. That statement suggested the administration may be ready to shift its position, but Javits made no such claim.

Among co-sponsors of Javits' proposal, however, was Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., who had offered the administration's "medicare" program. Aides said Saltonstall will support the new plan instead.

Javits offered his proposal as an addition to the plan approved by the finance committee as the Senate began debate on the controversial questions. Committee Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., opened debate with an endorsement of the committee bill.

Although it presents three alternative plans, the Javits proposal

Pressure Of Sun Forcing Echo I To Destruction

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say the infinitesimal pressure of sunlight is forcing the Echo I balloon satellite toward destruction in the earth's atmosphere.

Every 24 hours the giant balloon's orbit drops 2.2 miles closer to earth at its perigee, the lowest point. After it was launched Aug. 12 the perigee was 945 miles. Now it's down to 930 miles.

"At this rate," said Duane Muhleman, research group supervisor at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, "it would hit the ground 450 days after launch—if you discounted the effect of the atmosphere."

But the atmosphere is what will keep the 100-foot balloon from hitting earth. As it sinks lower into the thin borderline of earth's atmosphere, the friction will mount—finally turning Echo I into a streak of flame like the flash of a falling meteorite.

"We don't know enough about the upper atmosphere to know just when this would happen," a Caltech spokesman said.

The balloon's vast size and small weight—about 80 pounds—makes it susceptible to the slightest pressure, Caltech experts said. The force of solar radiation at 1,000 miles is .0000001 pounds per square feet, enough to nudge Echo earthward.

Suspect Held In Bomb Hoax

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The FBI Saturday night announced the arrest of a 29-year-old railroad employe at Ft. Worth, Tex., on charges of making a false report of a bomb aboard a commercial airliner.

The FBI office here said James Vander Waddle of Pine Bluff, Ark., was taken into custody by agents at Amon-Carter Airport, Ft. Worth, after he reportedly told an airport guard:

Waddle, described as a car man with the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt Railroad in Pine Bluff, was the 30th person to be charged under a new federal law making false bomb reports a crime.

Agents here said as a result of Waddle's statement to a guard, one flight which already had departed was called back and another flight delayed for a search.

ORLEANS SCHOOLS

State Officials Spin Legal Web

BATON ROUGE (UPI) — With Gov. Jimmie Davis providing an entertaining diversion, state officials moved this week to further tangle a legal web they hope won't be unraveled until after New Orleans schools open on a segregated basis Sept. 8.

Attorney general Jack Gremillion was reported in Montgomery, Ala., to study Alabama's pupil placement law-model for a similar law adopted in the Louisiana Legislature this year.

The state sovereignty commission planned a meeting in New Orleans Monday to add whatever complications it is empowered to do, accompanied by a platoon of experts on law and opinion-forming.

Gov. Davis' own skirmish—or rather, disappearance act while federal marshals tried to serve him summonses may further complicate matters. Aides of the governor claimed—in addition to Davis' claim that he was not served legally—that as governor of a state he cannot be hailed into court.

Davis' move to seize control of the New Orleans schools from the school board came as several members of the board wavered uncertainly between a maze of federal court orders and state laws in direct conflict.

But Davis has apparently turned to the pupil placement law as the mainstay of his fight for segregated classrooms. Act 492 of 1960 would bar any wholesale integration, and measure Negroes against a yardstick elastic and elaborate enough to bar practically all applying individually for admission to white schools.

Space Capsule Instruments To Receive Study

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP)—The capsule of Discoverer XIV, snatched out of the skies near Hawaii Friday, will be studied at the Lockheed laboratories here and not be flown to Washington.

The capsule arrived Saturday aboard an Air Force C130 from Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii. This was only 11 hours after the crew of a C119 Flying Boxcar achieved a historical first by snatching the parachuting capsule at 8,500 feet, 390 miles southwest of Hawaii.

Instruments will be removed and their recordings evaluated by scientists at Lockheed's space and missile division Sunnyvale. Lockheed builds the Agena orbiting vehicle used to put Discoverer aloft.

Discoverer XIV was launched at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Thursday and on its 17th trip around the earth it ejected the capsule over Alaska.

The Air Force happily called the recovery another step toward the solution of the problem of bringing man back to earth alive and well after outer space travel.

It materially advances the space efforts of the United States," said Reginald R. Kearton,

AT CONGRESS MEET

Rumors Of Manned Space Flights Buzz

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Rumors of impending manned space flights by the Soviet Union and rockets to Mars and Venus buzzed Saturday among delegates at the International Space Congress. These came on the day the Soviet Union reported it had brought its space menagerie safely back to earth.

Prof. Leonid I. Sedov, space committee chairman at the Soviet Academy of Science, renewed an assertion that rockets to Mars or Venus ought to be possible "in the near future."

But he said automatic space vehicles — such as the one launched Friday and brought back Saturday—are the first and major means of cosmic research.

Dr. Juri A. Barinov, assistant to the Soviet Union's top rocket expert, Prof. Anatoli Blagonravov, said: "The Soviet Union does absolutely not intend to send a man into space until a 100 per cent safe return to earth can be guaranteed. This assurance has been given by the academician, Blagonravov."

An American rocket propulsion expert at the congress estimated that the Soviet rocket needed to get the Soviet five-ton flying menagerie into orbit Friday had a thrust of 800,000 pounds.

Congress highlights included German rocket pioneer Dr. Werner von Braum's illustrated report on the progress of the American Saturn project, and pictures and a map of the moon's reverse side shown by Prof. Alexander Mikhailov, head of the Pokovo Observatory near Leningrad.

Asked what was new to him in the Von Braun report a Soviet delegate said "the illustrations."

Embargo On Arms Also Is Declared

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Western hemisphere foreign ministers in an unprecedented action voted Saturday to break off diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic and embargo all arms shipments to its strongman

Dominican delegates walked out of the meeting as the ministers forwarded their resolution to the Organization of American States for its certain approval.

Dominican Foreign Minister Porfirio Herrera Baez refused to comment on the condemnation of his government. His departure does not necessarily mean Dominican withdrawal from the OAS, however, as all Latin-American states and the United States have automatic membership.

CUBA CASE NEXT

The strong action against the Dominican Republic was without precedent in Latin-American history and diplomatic sources said the mood of the ministers spells trouble for leftist Cuba when its case comes up next week. Cuba's charges of U.S. aggression got a cool reception when first voiced earlier this week.

The foreign ministers convicted Dominican strongman regime of aggression against Venezuela. Venezuela accused Trujillo officials of backing a recent plot to assassinate President Romulo Betancourt and to overthrow his Venezuelan government. The Dominican Republic denied the charges.

In agreeing with Venezuela, the ministers passed over a U.S. suggestion that the OAS appoint a special committee to assure an orderly transition to a new regime in the Dominican Republic.

Former Official Predicts Revolt Against Castro

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fall of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and his government within six months was predicted Saturday by a former prime minister of the island republic.

Dr. Manuel Antonio De Varona, here to rally support for his revolutionary Democratic Front, said that the days of Castro's rule are numbered.

"The people realize that Castro's promises are all lies," he said. "Each day we gain more and more support from Cubans on the island and those that have fled to other American nations."

He said that even Castro's troops who fought with him on the Cuban hillsides for six years are now deserting him and that a revolution could break forth at any time.

Pressed for an estimate on the remaining time of the Castro regime, Varona said "not more than six months."

The 51-year old Varona served as prime minister of Cuba under President Carlos Prio from 1948 to 1952. He was ousted when Fulencio Batista assumed the dictatorship of the country on March 10, 1952.

He said that he joined forces with Castro after the latter began his revolutionary movement in Oriente Province.

"But I disagreed with Castro after he gained control," he added "because he didn't carry out his promises of free elections."

He said that Castro has turned Communist and that the people of Cuba are basically anti-Communist.

"The people are being denied their freedom of expression. They have even less rights than they had before Castro came to power. They are losing their jobs and their rights to protest."

confirmed that he was "the same old boy that I raised. He has not been brainwashed."

But physically, Powers showed the effects of 108 days in solitary confinement since his U-2 plane was shot down over Sverdlovsk on May 1.

He lost "quite a bit of weight," Barbara said, and was "very, very nervous."

Nevertheless, he "looked very good" to her.

Apparently, Powers had been kept in the dark about everything going on outside his prison cell. Barbara said he received one magazine, just last Wednesday, and he did not even know she and his parents and sister, Mrs. Jessica Hileman of Glass Manor, Md., were in Moscow until he saw them at the trial which opened Wednesday.

"I had sent him a telegram when I arrived in Moscow but he said he had not received it," his wife said.

She repeated that her husband "felt badly" because his court-appointed defense lawyer Mikhail Grinev, had attacked the United States during the trial.

Grinev Saturday advised the family to make their plea to President Brezhnev in non-legal, informal language and deliver it in person to his Kremlin office.

American attorneys Alexander Parker and Frank Rodgers, advisers to the family, said such petitions usually take a month to reach the president himself, but this time "it might be handled sooner."

The lawyers said they learned that the three years in prison to which Powers was sentenced might be reduced to 18 months for good behavior.

Assuming that the seven years "deprivation of liberty" in the sentence meant a term in a penal colony, Parker said he asked whether this meant Siberia and was told "Oh, no, there are labor camps in this (Moscow) area."

Barbara has said she wants to remain in the Soviet capital, perhaps working at the U.S. Embassy, so she can be as near as possible to her husband.

Some Soviet prisons permit wives to visit husbands for as much as two days a month and wives may live with husbands at some prison farms.

Barbara said defense attorney Grinev told her that Powers could receive gifts in prison, now, according to Grinev, he was smoking Russian cigarettes and reading "Gone With The Wind" and "Moby Dick."

Barbara was expected to be permitted to see Powers again on Monday.

The flier's parents and sister planned to leave Moscow Wednesday for home. Barbara was to remain behind.

mittee over to a second meeting Monday on foreign threats to the hemisphere, where U.S. charges of Communist penetration in Cuba will be considered.

Some Latin-American delegates were said to feel that to give a special committee the powers outlined by the United States would be intervention in internal affairs. Latin-Americans are traditionally opposed to such intervention.

The application of sanctions, or penalties, comes under the 1947 Treaty of Rio de Janeiro and the charter of the OAS, and hence is not considered intervention.

The ministers were not swayed in their voting by a Dominican report that the new president, Joaquin Balaguer, announced new general elections would be held in 1962. Balaguer said his government agreed in principle to permit an OAS committee to observe the voting.

The United States, while voting with the other nations for sanctions, expressed fear that unless the OAS committee entered the Caribbean nation after sanctions are applied, Communist or other leftist groups might take over. Other foreign ministers apparently did not share this fear.

Eight Latin-American nations already have broken relations with the Dominican Republic.

The first speaker at the plenary session, Roa said Herter's comments Thursday on the Cuban's attack on the United States were "Hitlerite." Herter had arisen in reply to Roa and said the Cuban's speech reminded him "of a direct parallel of speeches I have heard coming from representatives of the Soviet Union."

In Saturday's speech, Roa protested because Herter had been allowed to make a short rebuttal. Roa said Cuba was no satellite of anyone but "a small planet making a historical orbit."

Eleven Sitters Face Charges

HOPEWELL, Va. (UPI) — Eleven Negroes were arrested Saturday night when they refused to leave two downtown drugstores after being turned down for service at the lunch counters.

All 11, including one juvenile, were charged with trespassing under a new Virginia law enacted to curb sit-down protests against segregation. Additional charges of resisting arrest and conspiring to violate the law were placed against Lee Roy Wyche, 35, of Hopewell.

The sit-down was the second move against segregation in Hopewell in as many days.

"It is the first time in history that living beings safely returned to the earth after covering over 700,000 kilometers (437,500 miles) in outer space.

"The apparatus and the braking worked well and provided for the landing at a predetermined point."

The launching and the return to earth of the cosmic satellite space ship created by the genius of Soviet scientists, engineers, technicians and workers is the forerunner of man's flight into interplanetary space."

The announcement did not say where the landing point was. It said that planes and helicopters delivered medicine for the dogs. It said scientists are now checking all the animals which underwent the space flight.

Tass said the deviation from the calculated point of landing was less than seven miles. Earlier Saturday it was announced that the flying menagerie had completed its 16th revolution at 10:30 a.m.

The first Soviet satellite was launched in October 1957. Soon afterwards the Soviets rocketed the dog Laika out of the atmosphere but that dog died in orbit.

The Soviet Union has given this account of the so-called space menagerie: The two dogs were kept in separate compartments. They could see one another through a glass partition. Scientific instruments attached to them connected with electronic devices which transmitted to stations in the U.S.S.R. their pulse rate, breathing rate, blood pressure and temperature. They were able to lie down and move forward and backward somewhat.

Their cells were equipped with chemicals to absorb moisture and purify the air, just as on an atomic submarine. They were fed with an automatic device which they were trained to use before being launched into space.

Their movements were televised periodically and pictures were transmitted to the scientific academy here which analyzed the moves. White dogs were chosen because they show up better on TV.

Arrow's breathing rate was more moderate and as the hours wore on established a rate of 30 pants per minute. Normal breathing for dogs ranges from 20 to 40.

The dogs were trained to wear space suits and live in cramped quarters.

The original announcement said the Sputnik was launched as part of an experiment testing how to bring a living being back alive from the cosmos.

The statement announcing the launching said the ship's cabin was equipped with everything necessary for a future manned flight. It said several medical and biological experiments were planned during the flight.

features a broad program of "preventive" medical care which would be avilable to all persons over 65 who had an annual income under $3,000 a year ($4,500 for a couple).

The "preventive" alternative of the Javits plan could finance, for example, the regular periodic visits of a physician, laboratory and X-ray services, home nursing care and a relatively small period of hospital treatment. The catastrophic illness programs are designed to finance long hospitalization periods of perhaps six months, a surgical expenses, constant home nursing and such results of crippling illness.

The administration plan is designed to underwrite only the major costs of catastrophic illness.

On the overriding issue of the medical care controversy, however, the Javits proposal goes along with the approach favored by President Eisenhower, the finance committee and the House-approved bill. It would be financed by federal and state matching grants rather than through higher payroll taxes under Social Security.

Major showdown on the bill is expected early next week when a group of Senate Democrats, led by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, N.M. and supported by Sen. John F. Kennedy, Mass., the Democratic presidential nominee, try to add to the committee-approved bill an addition which would finance a board range of medical benefits for the elderly under Social Security.

Soviets Demand U.N. Withdraw

from the Congolese as well as from the Soviets.

The Soviet statement presented to Hammarskjold charged that on Thursday Congolese troops clashed at the airport with Canadian forces "as a result of the unlawful actions of the latter."

On that day Congolese troops attacked a group of 14 Canadians, beating at least three of them so severely with rifle butts that they were taken to a hospital. Congolese officials said the Canadians were mistaken for "Belgian spies."

Russia's efforts to woo the government of Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba deepened the crisis which led Hammarskjold to call together the 11-nation security council Sunday for a session on the Congo.

Ghana, a key unit in the U.N. Congo force and an avowed friend of all other African nations, meanwhile reaffirmed full support of the U.N. in the Congo and proposed that the world organization's troops be permitted to attack to restore order.

With permission to open fire as warranted, said Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's contingent in the U.N. force alone "can bring the situation in Leopoldville back to normal within one week."

Nkrumah's pledge and recommendation came in response to a message from the hard-pressed Hammarskjold stating that actions of Ghanian troops in the Congo were questionable and demanding from Ghana "full and unconditional support" of the Congo, actions decided upon by the Security Council.

Nkrumah said in reply that he was "only too pleased" to give the assurances Hammarskjold requested, and attached a report from British Maj. Gen. Henry Templre Alexander, commander of Ghana forces, which was highly critical of the failure of the U.N. command to use force.

ans schools, may allow transfers of students based on these factors:

—The effect the new students will have upon the academic programs;

—Adequacy of the new students' academic preparation;

—Scholastic aptitude and relative intelligence of the new students;

—Possibilities of disorder among pupils, breaches of the peace, and economic retaliation within the community.

For practical purposes, the words "new students" may be translated as "Negro students." Such a law in Alabama has been declared constitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court as long as it is not abused.

A Baton Rouge disc jockey entered the act, dedicating the tune "maybe you'll be there" to the governor in behalf of the marshals.

Davis' statement that he would do anything—"including going to jail"—to keep the state's schools segregated appeared to be coming true to one worried state worker, but another assured him it was a safe, calculated remark, considering the nearing presidential election.

Crocodile Bites Man On Thumb

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Thomas O. Jones, 23, had the perfect answer Saturday for friends who asked about his bandaged hand: "I got bit by a crocodile."

It happened Friday night as Jones and other Forest Park Zoo employes moved 600 reptiles from temporary quarters into the zoo's new reptile house.

Jones leaped into the crocodile pit and grabbed a six-foot resident. He hopped back out with a bitten thumb.

Hospital attendants treated him for two crocodile tooth marks.

Demo Revises Vote Kickoff Drive Plans

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy switched Saturday the formal full-scale opening of his campaign for the White House from Hawaii to Alaska.

The Democratic campaign still will have a double kickoff Sept. 3—Kennedy at Anchorage, Alaska, and his vice presidential teammate, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, on the same day at Honolulu. Originally they had planned to launch their "New Frontiers" campaign together in the newest state.

This had to go by the board when it became apparent that Congress will run on beyond Sept. 1. Kennedy had planned to go to Hawaii, Alaska and then get to Detroit by Labor Day, Sept. 5. The senator still hopes to work Hawaii into his campaign itinerary later on.

The first big swing of the Democratic presidential nominee is being expanded to at least eight days, five states and 11 cities. More may be added later. It will cover something like 10,000 miles.

The states: Alaska, Michigan, Washington, Oregon, California, with a total of 70 of the 269 electoral votes required for victory in November.

The schedule still is dependant on a congressional adjournment by Sept. 2. The Democratic national chairman, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, said the chances of an adjournment by then are looking better.

Jackson announced the general outlines of the trip aboard Kennedy's plane en route from Washington. Kennedy flew west Saturday for a political reconciliation with former President Harry S. Truman at nearby Independence.

Saturday, Sept. 3: Kennedy takes off from Washington, flies nonstop to San Francisco for a two-hour politicking stop at the airport, and on to Anchorage for the night.

Sunday, Sept. 4: The Massachusetts nominee will deliver the party's traditional Labor Day speech in Detroit's Cadillac Square.

Tuesday, Sept. 6: Kennedy lunches in Spokane and ınes in Seattle, Wash., at political gatherings.

Billings, Mont., originally on the schedule, now is out. But Kennedy still hopes to get in a Montana visit. He will spend the night at Seattle.

Wednesday, Sept. 7: The Democratic nominee flies into Oregon for barnstorming at Salem, Eugene and Portland, and spends the night at Portland.

Professor Says Soviets To Put Man In Space

LONDON (AP)—Prof. Bernard Loveil, Britain's leading authority on space satellites, said Saturday night he expects the Soviet Union to put a man into space "at any time—perhaps within a couple of months."

He added: "It shows that the Russians are on the verge of sending a man into space. The progress over the past few weeks has been tremendously dramatic.

"First the Americans successfully recovered a space capsule from a satellite, and now the Russians have accomplished this.

"It is a tremendous feat of 20th century technology—and not least a tribute to the cooperation of Soviet and American scientists in this field."

SURVIVES DEADLY BITE

Tiger Snake Helps Man Quit Smoking

Kenneth Earnest, 22-year-old reptile curator who recently became one of the few persons to survive a bite from the snake with the deadliest venom in the world, said he couldn't smoke while hospitalized because he couldn't breath without the aid of an iron lung.

"When I got out of the hospital, I decided I'd give it up," he said. "I'd already gotten over the rough part."

"We didn't give him much chance," said Dr. Findlay E. Russell, who specializes in snake bite cases at Los Angeles County Hospital.

Earnest, now back at work at his father's California alligator farm, rattled off these figures scientific detachment:

"It takes about two milligrams of tiger snake venom to kill a human being weighing 150 pounds; 20 milligrams from an Indian Cobra, or 140 milligrams from a western diamond back rattler."

Two milligrams isn't even a drop, no more than you would get by dipping the point of a needle into the venom.

"Drop for drop, the tiger snake has the most toxic venom of any known land snake," Earnest said in explaining that the seriousness of a snake bite also depends upon how much venom a snake can inject into its victim. "A tiger can inject about 20 lethal doses, and a western diamond back about two," he continued. "If you get a full bite, with both fangs, you get a good injection.

Earnest demonstrated by holding up the three-foot snake that bit him on the hand when he reached into its cage last May 17.

Ken blamed himself for the near-tragedy: "Anybody who gets bitten by a snake in captivity is a darned fool, and that includes me."

He has been bitten before, once by a rattler and another time by a cottonmouth moccasin. He thinks he may be bitten again.

Soviet Union Protests Act Of U.S. Ship

TOKYO (UPI) — The Soviet Union accused the U.S. Navy Saturday of taking "provocative action" against a Soviet scientific survey ship 100 miles off the coast of Japan.

Radio Moscow, in a Japanese language broadcast, said that a U.S. Navy cruiser approached a Soviet ship and radioed it for identification and details concerning its crew and destination.

When the Soviet ship replied, the broadcast said, the cruiser disappeared. But it soon reappeared and launched a helicopter which flew over the Russian vessel at an altitude of from 10 to 70 meters (33 to 228 feet) and took photographs of the Soviet ship.

The broadcast, beamed to Japan, said the U.S. helicopter circled the Soviet survey ship about 10 times before flying back to the cruiser.

The Soviet broadcast did not identify the American warship nor did it give the exact position of the Russian ship when the alleged incident occurred. The name of the Soviet ship was given (phonetically) as the "Shokarisuky."

Radio Moscow also said an unidentified warship trailed the Soviet vessel for about six hours on the same day as the "alleged provocative action" by the American cruiser.

(In Washington, a U.S. Navy spokesman said no dispatches on the reported incident had been received from the Seventh Fleet, the American naval command in the Western Pacific.

He said it is common practice to maintain aerial surveillance over unusual Communist bloc shipping which comes near South Korea or U.S. naval bases, but he doubted that a Navy helicopter would have flown so low over the Soviet ship as the Moscow broadcast stated.)

Long, McSween Launch Final Vote Appeals

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP)—Rep. Harold B. McSween and his rival for the Eighth Congressional District seat, former Gov. Earl K. Long, Saturday began their final week of campaigning for the Aug. 27 Democratic runoff primary.

McSween, high man in the July primary, has the support of former State Rep. Ben Holt of Alexandria who ran third.

McSween repeated his challenge to Long to explain how his net worth rose from $150,000 to $275,000 during his last term as governor.

Long continued to ask McSween to explain an affidavit by Mrs. Mary Helen Foster that she was on the congressman's payroll last year but never performing any services for him. This affidavit has been repudiated by Mrs. Foster.

Meanwhile, Richard Davis of Alexandria announced he had quit as Long's chauffeur and bodyguard.

"I am sick and exhausted," Davis said. "I am through."

Davis said in Lake Providence that he quit because his mother insist that he break away from Long and also because the former governor tried to persuade him to sign an affidavit that he had taken money from Mrs. Foster and given it to McSween.

FPC To Rule On Natural Gas Question

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Can an interstate pipeline company legally ignore home and commercial consumers and arbitrarily sell natural gas to more profitable industrial customers?

The Federal Power Commission will rule on this question soon.

FPC examiner Francis L. Hall said "no," emphatically, in a July 29 decision against the Mississippi River Fuel Corp., St. Louis, Mo.

The company had claimed the so-called "grandfather clause" of the natural gas act gave it the right, "without FPC regulation," to service industrial buyers if it saw fit.

The clause was written into the act Feb. 7, 1942. It gave the commission blanket authority to issue certificates for continuation of all services existing the day the clause became law.

Hall firmly rejected Mississippi's argument. He reminded the company that it was brought under commission control when Congress passed the gas act in 1938 and hence its plea "for self-regulation of all aspects of its industrial business is wholly untenable."

"Moreover," Hall added, "No public utility may pick and choose customers it finds more profitable, without regard to the overall public interest."

Hall's decision, subject to commission approval, directed Mississippi to begin service to Red Bud, Ill., "even if it necessitates curtailing service to industrial customers."

Mississippi had contended that it would either have to build new facilities or cut its industrial sales. Hall countered that this was not so.

Young Mother, Two Children Die On Highway

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — A young mother and her two small daughters were killed and two men injured critically Saturday in a highway collision five miles west of here on a rural paved road.

Mrs. Lewis' husband, Bill Lewis, 22, was in critical condition at Parkview Hospital here. Also in "very critical" condition was the driver of the other car involved, Clarence Kimes, about 25.

Kimes was driving a car, a 1957 Ford, with Arkansas license plates and was believed to be from Arkansas. The Lewis family was in a 1958 Chevrolet with a Memphis tag.

The accident occurred near the Lenox community five miles west of here on Tennessee 20. The road is near the Mississippi River and there is a ferry crossing to Caruthersville, Mo., and the Missouri-Arkansas side of the river a few miles from where the accident occured.

Demos Claim Farm Belt For Kennedy

The rally, they said, grew largely out of producers' demands to be heard on their woes.

Farmers and their leaders from 14 states lined up to tell a panel of party officials about rural conditions, which most described as being economically depressed. Most of them urged bolder federal efforts to improve farm income.

This demonstration came a day ahead of the appearance of Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the party's presidential nominee, and Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, his running mate.

They will give their first major talks on the farm issue here Sunday afternoon. Kennedy has said the farm issue is the major domestic one of the campaign.

Saturday's session originally had called for a series of conferences with farm and party leaders from the farm belt. These were designed primarily to set up regional, state and county campaign units for the Kennedy-Johnson team.

But the original program was changed, said Iowa Gov. Herschel C. Loveless, because he was flooded with requests from farmers asking that they be given a chance to appear individually and speak out on the problem.

"This in itself testifies to the troubles farmers face and to the favorable prospects for the Democratic ticket," Loveless said. "If farmers had been prosperous, they wouldn't be here."

Active in the rally were officials of the National Farmers Union, an organization which, in recent elections, has been closely associated with the Democrats.

On hand Sunday to help bring the gathering to a climax will be such big party names as Sens. Stuart Symington of Missouri, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

It will be Kennedy's first opportunity to stand before a farm audience on a party platform which promises greater federal aid for agriculture—a promise which is in sharp contrast to policies of the Eisenhower administration designed to get the government out of agriculture.

U.S. Employes' Link With Drug Firms Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charles H. Kendall, head of a special unit investigating the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), said Saturday there is a "possibility" some of the agency's employes may have been too closely associated with the drug industry.

Kendall said in a UPI interview that "it is still too early to say" what the result of his inquiry would be but that he had the impression the FDA staff in general "is a pretty good crowd of people who have done a pretty good job."

Kendall is general counsel of the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization. He is on loan until Oct. 1 to health and welfare secretary Arthur F. Flemming to examine congressional charges the FDA has been lax in regulating the drug industry and that its employes have been too closely influenced by it.

Flemming named Kendall to head a special three-man investigative unit following the dismissal of Dr. Henry Welch, chief of the FDA division which passes on antibiotics. Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate drug investigators turned up the fact that Welch had earned more than a quarter of a million dollars from his side work for two antibiotics magazines.

WARY OF POLLS

Undecided Voters Worrying Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign strategists Saturday viewed with a wary eye national polls showing Nixon running well ahead of Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy. They said they felt the number of undecided voters is greater than the latest major poll shows.

Robert H. Finch, Nixon's campaign director, told newsmen he felt Nixon is "ahead at this point," largely as a result of the Republican National Convention, the vice president's acceptance speech and other factors. But, Finch said, he was not taking undue comfort from the latest national poll showing Nixon running 50 to 44 ahead of Kennedy, with six per cent of the voters undecided.

"I still think the large group of undecided voters is higher than the six per cent that shows in the poll," Finch added.

Nixon has taken the position all along that about 10 per cent of genuinely independent voters may decide the election by making up their minds in the closing days.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, said that while the GOP presidential nominee is "optimistic over progress made" since his nomination, the Nixon camp "still feels the election will be very close."

Also, Klein said, he expected the poll ratings of the two candidates would "change from time to time" as the campaign progresses. The Nixon forces, Klein added, still feel "that the election will be decided in the last three weeks."

Finch said the factor apparently working in Nixon's favor so far is lack of enthusiasm in some Northern states for Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), Kennedy's vice presidential running mate. The Nixon campaign director said this opposition is particularly strong in New York and Michigan.

Also, he said, the GOP now feels that Henry Cabot Lodge, Nixon's vice presidential candidate, is adding more the Republican slate than originally anticipated.

Finch enthusitiastically termed the Nixon - Lodge lineup "about as close to a dream ticket as we could have hoped for" to combat the Kennedy-Johnson combination.

Nixon passed up the campaign trail this weekend to remain here. He spent much of the day at his downtown campaign headquarters, meeting among others with the 19-man team assembled to do the advance work for his tours.

The so-called "Frog Men"—because of their leap-frogging schedules ahead of the candidate—are being trained under the leadership of Harry R. (Bob) Haldeman, 33-year-old New York advertising man on leave to work with the Nixon forces. Haldeman is a veteran advance man from Nixon's 1956 and 1958 campaigns.

Both Nixon and Lodge will use the same pool of advance men. They make all detailed arrangements for the candidates, local stops.

The Nixon forces are expected to rely heavily on the "National volunteers for Nixon - Lodge" organization in seeking to woo independent and "swing" voters whom the vice president feels will decide the election.

They give themselves privately, a fighting chance in some Southern states, mainly Texas, Virginia, Florida and North Carolina and feel they have an outside chance in Missouri.

Paris Carriages

PARIS (AP) — What gondolas are to Venice, horsedrawn carriages used to be to Paris. There are only 10 carriages still operating, compared with 170 in World War II times. The eldest coachman is 76, the youngest, 60, and no new licenses are issued.

Kennedy's Farm Parley Assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican National Chairman Thruston B. Morton Saturday labeled as "a transparent political gimmick" the Democratic farm conference arranged by Sen. John F. Kennedy.

Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee and his running-mate, Senator Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas meet with party farm leaders in Des Moines, Iowa, Sunday.

Morton said in a statement that the Democrats "propose to ratify publicly the agricultural policy decisions which have already been reached a b o a r d the Kennedy yacht at Hyannis Port, Mass."

"Sen. Kennedy is no friend of the American farmer," the Kentucky senator said. "His voting record shows he has flipped and flopped on the issue and is without a basic philosophy of sympathy for the farmer."

Kennedy's rival for the presidency, Vice President Richard M. Nixon, held a conference here Friday with top leaders of the National Farm Bureau Federation, the Farmers Union, and National Grange. Nixon said he is still gathering ideas for solving the farm problem and will be ready to make public his views toward the end of September.

Kennedy announced formation of a "Farmers for Kennedy-Johnson Committee" headed by Gov. Herschel C. Loveless of Iowa. Claude Wickard, former secretary of agriculture, will head an executive committee and Stephen Pace, former Georgia congressman, will serve as vice chairman.

Kennedy said the newly formed committee will send representatives "from farm-gate to farm-gate" throughout the nation seeking support for the Democratic ticket.

Sen. Morton fired a series of questions at Kennedy.

"What happened to your grandoise promise to lead the fight for an 'emergency' farm bill during the August session of the Congress?" He asked.

He said Kennedy was quoted as saying at the Los Angeles nominating convention that farmers "cannot afford to wait until next year for legislation."

"Now your spokesmen announce that there will be no drive for a farm bill, even though you and your party control the Congress by 2-1 majorities," Morton said.

The GOP chairman said Kennedy seemed determined "to boost already inflated farm costs further by increasing minimum wages and covering millions of additional workers."

"Are you fully aware of the disastrous results, the harsh controls and regimentation which would immediately follow enactment of the major proposals set forth in the farm plank of the Democratic platform?" Morton asked Kennedy.

Morton said the Democrats pledged to reinstate price supports at 90 per cent of parity but Kennedy had said in 1955 that farm prices had declined under such a program.

FOR FACTORY FOREMAN

Dialing Error Pays Off With Vacation

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — "I'll go along with a gag—and it looks like I'm going a long way," says Melvin Miller, 40, genial tractor factory foreman.

He thought a minute. "Those take charge characters! Well, I just have to meet them."

Miller chuckled Saturday about an all-expense one-week California vacation arranged for him by a group of Marines of Camp Pendleton and El Toro Marine Air Base.

Miller's life with his wife, Sally, and their three children—Bob, 10, Don, 9, and Judy, 7—was moderately predictable until last Labor Day.

That's when Marine Capt. Joe Gestson of Camp Pendleton picked up a telephone at a bar in Laguna Beach, Calif., to call a friend.

Gestson's finger dialed into the long-lines system and by some quirk spun out Miller's Peoria phone number instead of a buddy he was trying to reach in California.

"I was out in my front yard painting when I heard the phone," Miller said. "Some guy wanted to know if I knew where his car was."

"It sounded like somebody I knew, so I tried to help him out. Things were a little complicated, though. Seemed like he though he was in California.

"He called me back later to tell me he had found his car all right."

Miller said Gestson phoned several times thereafter. Sometimes he put a fellow Marine on the line for a few words, sometimes he talked to Mrs. Miller. The Millers thought their callers were idling in some Peoria oasis.

Gestson sent post cards from Laguna Beach to prove his whereabouts. Then, as Christmas approached, he handed out Christmas cards to airmen and sailors who wree shipping out, making sure they were addressed to the Millers. So, the Millers got a shower of Yule greetings from various corners of the globe.

The Mel Miller legend grew in Laguna Beach, and a movement was launched by Gestson and bartender Grant Maxwell to bring Miller to California.

Maxwell ket a 120mm shell casing on the bar for the collection, and the money mounted up.

Miller explained to Gestson that he had already taken his vacation from his job at Caterpillar Tractor Co. and couldn't get away for a visit.

"That Gestson! He called up my boss. Before I knew it, they had plane reservations made for me to leave O'Hare Airport in Chicago Aug. 31. The plant community relations manager called me in and told me."

Sally and the youngsters won't go along, but Mrs. Miller understands.

"I just told those boys to send my husband back in one piece," she said. "They told me, 'Sure, in one piece, but badly wrinkled.'"

The Marines say Miller's going to get VIP treatment such as has never been accorded any visitor before.

Miller knows Marines, and he trembles a bit when he thinks what the shindig could involve.

"Those El Toro guys who want to give me jet plane rides worry me the most," he said.

Taxpayers Shell Out $100 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans paid a record total of 100 billion dollars in taxes to Federal, state and local governments in 1959, the Census Bureau said Saturday.

The payments, which compared with $98,400,000,000 a year earlier, were made during the fiscal years which ended at different times during 1959, varying with the government concerned.

On a per person basis, taxes totaled $567.04. This was less than the 1958 level of $567.86 because the population grew a bit faster than tax collections.

The record for collections per person—$579.19—was recorded in 1957.

Federal tax collections per person during fiscal 1959 amounted to $331.35. State and local governments collected $165.69.

The biggest revenue producer was, as usual, the federal individual income tax. It brought in $208.20 per person. At the state and local level, the biggest taxes were property levies, $87.03 per person; sales taxes, $59.18; and income taxes, $11.31.

Federal tax revenues declined from 68 billion dollars to $67,300,000,000 in fiscal 1959 because of the delayed tax effect of the 1958 recession. However, the drop was more than offset by an increase in state and local tax collections from $30,400,000,000 to $32,700,000,000.

The three levels of government spent $124,800,000,000 during fiscal 1959, or considerably more than they received from taxes. The difference was financed through non-tax revenues and borrowings.

Federal spending totaled $75,300,000,000, while the states spent 17½ billions and local governments close to 32 billions.

On a per person basis, the biggest single item was federal defense spending at $274.37. State and local spending of $99.13 for education and $54.59 for streets and highways ranked next.

Lumumba's Actions Ire Africa Bloc

PARIS (AP)—Premier Patrice Lumumba of the Congo appeared Saturday to be antagonizing more and more African leaders with his attacks on U. N. authorities.

The most open signs of discontent appear in Arab North Africa, some former French states of Africa, and in Liberia, where President William V. Tubman acknowledged being "perplexed and frustrated" by Lumumba's remarks.

There was no evidence, however, that anyone was getting ready to disclaim Lumumba. The general feeling seemed to be discontent over how Lumumba is conducting his afaifrs, not over his basic policies.

The first open African affront to Lumumba came last week when the French Congo, just across the river from the Belgian Congo, proclaimed its independence. Lumumba was pointedly left off the guest list, although Congo President Joseph Kasavubu was invited and turned up in a general's full uniform.

The French Congo probably accurately reflected the views of leaders in other former French areas of Africa. These men, many once ardent nationalists, have made their peace with France and now want stability and French economic aid in large quantities to build up their countries.

Premier Ahmadou Ahidjo of the rewly independent Cameroon has shown signs of irritation with Lumumba. It is reported from his capital of Yaounde that he has sent cables to African leaders suggesting a postponement of the Lumumba-inspired inter-African conference scheduled at Leopoldville later this month.

Tunisia and Morocco, both with troops with the U. N. forces in the Congo, have shown concern over Lumumba's actions.

It was reported in Rabat that pro-Western King Mohamed V of Morocco had exchanged notes on the congo situation with president Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic and premier Sekou Toure of Guinea, both of whom have expressed support for Lumumba.

In Tunisia, the newspaper of President Habib Bourguiba's Neo-Destour party pointedly took issue with Lumumba's contention that U. N. troops should restore Congo government control over secessionist Katanga Province.

The ties between provinces of the Belgian Congo are a matter for the Congolese themselves, the paper said, "and the United Nations has no right to intervene, and the Congo government has no right to ask for such intervention."

This is the view taken by U. N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in rejecting Lumumba's demands. As a result, Lumumba has made Hammarskjold his chief target in assailing U. N. action in the Congo.

Bourguiba himself, in a radio speech Friday, said "There is a limit to how far Tunisia will go along with the Congo...Tunisian solidarity is not unconditional."

Lumumba's strongest African support has come from Premier Toure of Guinea and President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana. Both have pledged troops to help Lumumba subdue Katanga.

COURSES GET TOUGHER

Schools In Nation 'Beefing Up' Studies

By G. K. HODENFIELD
Associated Press education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's public schools may be soft, as many critics contend, but they are moving toward toughness.

Across the country the school day is being lengthened, courses in both the sciences and the humanities are being beefed up, and more attention is being paid to both the gifted and the dullard. The teaching of foreign languages is spreading. In at least one city it starts in the kindergarten.

A cross-country survey made by the National Education Assn. showed new programs and developments as the 1960-61 school year approached.

In Denver, Colo., 35 minutes a day has been added to the elementary school program, the equivalent of three weeks additional instruction time for the school year. Thirty minutes has been added to the junior high school day, and 15 minutes to the senior high program.

In Elizabeth, N. J., a new arithmetic course, developed at the University of Illinois, is to be offered in the first grade, with one grade to be added each year. The aim is to teach in six years what is now being taught in eight. In Ridgewood, N. J., the University of Illinois' new algebra program will be offered in the eighth and ninth grades. A new math program also is being started in East Baton Rouge, La.

The use of TV as a teaching tool is spreading. In New York City it will be used in workshop programs for teachers of English and science, reaching them at school half an hour before they leave for the day. Dallas, Tex., has scheduled a series of 10 half-hour TV shows before the opening of school aimed primarily at the 13,000 six-year-olds due to enroll this year.

Miami, Fla., has scheduled "early-bird classes" at 7:30 a. m. for students who want to work extra courses into their schedule. Syracuse and White Plains, N. Y., and Wichita, Kan., also have scheduled a longer school day.

In Atlanta, Ga., particular emphasis is being placed on the humanities, in an effort to restore history, the fine arts, literature and ethical and esthetic values "to a position of fundamental and basic importance." A new course in social studies, kindergarten through high school, has been developed in St. Louis, Mo.

Gifted students will be offered advanced physics and electronics in Oakland, Calif. Across the bay in San Francisco a new biochemistry laboratory has been established and plans are under way for special courses in astronomy, biology, geology, mathematics and chemistry.

In Erie, Pa., there will be special classes for gifted high school students who will do college-level work. In Newark, N. J., an accelerated mathematics course will give college work to high school seniors. Mineola, N. Y., goes into the final year of a controlled experiment to see if able students, attending school 11 months a year, can do four year's work in three.

In Columbus, Ohio, junior high students will be given remedial reading classes on early morning TV in the elementary schools with courses in art, foreign languages, music, physical education and science. Biology, geneal science, and U. S. history will be telecast to high school students. In Kansas City, Kan., a new educational TV station will go on the air four hours daily, programmed primarily for elementary school children.

Beverly Hills, Calif., will start daily instruction in French and Spanish to all pupils in the first, third, and fifth grades. The second, fourth and sixth grades will be added next year, and the seventh and eighth in 1962. The goal: a 12-year sequence in foreign languages. In Highland Park, Ill., Spanish instruction will start in kindergarten.

In Hawaii, five specialists have been hired to teach Chinese, Japanese and Hindi to classroom teachers as well as their pupils.

In Akron, Ohio, an eight-year program in French and Spanish will get under way, starting in the fifth grade and continuing through high school.

There are other developments.

Chicago is undertaking a major study on why students drop out of school. Yonkers, N. Y., has a special program for emotionally disturbed children. Special programs for culturally deprived children, seeking talent and curbing delinquency, are being sponsored by the Ford Foundation in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

In Knoxville, Tenn., there will be a pilot experiment with students in the 80-90 I. Q. class—100 is considered average—in junior occupational training school, aimed at preparing them for such jobs as nurses' aides, waitresses, retail clerks and shop workers.

In Birmingham, Ala., blind children will be taught alongside those with normal vision in one elementary school. In Tacoma, Wash., three new elementary schools will combine regular facilities and those for the handicapped so that students who need physical occupational or other therapy may spend part of the day in regular school attendance.

WINDSOR, N. S. (AP) — John Crossley of Boston found the Nova Scotian memory long and true on his return to his boyhood home for a vacation. Mrs. Walter Salter handed him a check for $60 and said, "My father borrowed it from you 50 years ago."

IN NEW ORLEANS

Archbishop Asks School Prayers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel will tell Roman Catholics of the New Orleans archdiocese Sunday there is "danger of chaos and moral irresponsibility" in efforts to prevent federally-ordered integration of public schools here.

A pastoral letter to be read to all 182 Catholic churches in the Archdiocese described as "a flagrant action" the proposal to close all public schools "rather than integrate them even on a moderate installment basis."

U.S. Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright last May 16 ordered public schools to integrate the first grade next month. Under state law, the governor is authorized to close every public school in the state to prevent any of them from being integrated.

Gov. Jimmie Davis took over control of the 100 million dollar Orleans Parish public school system last Wednesday. Davis said the schools would open Sept. 7 on the traditional segregated basis.

A three-judge federal court next Friday will hold a hearing on a motion by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People to bar the state from interfering with the federal order of May 16. At the same time, the court will hear a suit by 31 white parents seeking to prevent closure of public schools. About 41,000 white pupils and 50,000 Negroes attend public schools.

The archbishop's letter was for the guidance of the Catholic parents of the 15,000 to 18,000 children in the public school system here. About 46,250 white and Negro students are enroled in the Catholic school system which is segregated. The archbishop recently said no definite date has been set for the integration of the Catholic schools.

"The private school plan, like the 'close our school' plan is no solution but dissolution, offers no constructive prospect of a 'dream come true' but only a dull grey dawn of illusion and frustration," the pastoral letter said. "Both plans have been tried and found wanting elsewhere."

The letter closed with a notice that Sunday would be ordained as a day of prayer throughout the archbishop for Catholics to pray for "an early solution of the race problem in our midst" and "a propitious response to the challenge for compliance with the ruling on the integration of our public system of education."

During the last few weeks, groups of Protestant ministers have adopted resolutions urging preservation of the public school system here.

Federal marshals finally left Baton Rouge after four days of attempts to serve the governor with a notice of the Aug. 26 court hearing. A. P. Tureaud, Louisiana attorney for the NAACP, said personal service on Davis was not required.

Davis planned to make a statewide television appearance next Thursday night. The subject was not announced but it was assumed he would discuss the school integration problem.

The governor said Friday the time had come for a showdown between the federal and state government on the question of states' rights and that segregation is just one of the issues.

Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans said he thought the question of state sovereignty had been "settled in the Civil War."

Morrison also said the city's attorney, Alvin Liska, had grave doubts that Davis could keep the public schools open and segregated.

Truman 'Buries Hatchet,' Pledges Kennedy Support

By ALVIN SPIVAK

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI)—Former President Harry S. Truman greeted Sen. John F. Kennedy like a long-lost son Saturday and vowed all out support in the presidential campaign Truman once tried to keep Kennedy out of.

The 76-year-old former chief executive didn't take back any of the things he said about Kennedy July 2 at the Truman library when he said the Democratic convention had been "fixed" for Kennedy and suggested Kennedy was too young to be president.

But joining the 43-year-old nominee on the same platform where he had made those statements, Truman told a news conference that the Democratic National Convention had nominated Kennedy and that was good enough for him.

"It's the law of the Democratic party, and I'm a Democrat," Truman said. "I follow their law."

In a session marked by much smiling and laughter by Kennedy and Truman, and a number of quips by the former president, Truman was asked point blank if he still felt the convention had been "fixed" by Kennedy backers.

"I did not say that," Truman replied. "I said it looked to me as if the convention was already made up the way it was supposed to go, and that is what the trouble was. And it was, and it has been done all right, and they nominated this man, and I am going to support him. What are you going to do about that?"

Truman gave Kennedy a warm reception from the moment the nominee entered the door of the library building. They met privately for about a half hour in Truman's office, held their joint news conference and afterward Truman personally gave Kennedy a guided tour of the library. On Kennedy's last visit to Independence Nov. 19, 1959, Truman had delegated the tour job to library director Dr. Philip Brooks.

Entering the auditorium with a broad smile on his face, Truman held out a chair for Kennedy and they sat side-by-side to answer questions from newsmen. They were flanked by Democratic National Chairman Henry M. Jackson and by Sen. Stuart Symington, (D-Mo.), who had been Truman's choice over Kennedy for the Democratic nomination.

The warmth of their meeting had been apparent from the start when Truman, after clasping hands with Kennedy at the library door, ushered him inside and said, "Come on in here, young man, I want to talk to you alone and then we'll go out and talk to all of them."

Truman said the only date firmly set so far was for him to speak at a Labor Day meeting at Marion, Ind. Kennedy said Truman also would visit New York City later, among other points on a court-to-coast speaking tour.

Truman predicated Kennedy would carry Missouri by a "overwhelming majority" in the November election, but he would not get specific about other states.

"I don't have any faith in political prophets or pollsters," Truman said. "That's all there is to it."

As for polls, Truman laughingly said "they don't mean a thing" when a newsman asked his opinion of a recent Gallup poll giving Kennedy's rival, vice president Richard M. Nixon, a 50-44 per cent advantage.

Truman said he could remember a Gallup poll that gave Republican candidate Thomas E. Dewey a victory edge over him in 1948.

Kennedy said he planned to use Truman as "a source of advice and counsel on all issues, including foreign policy."

Truman said the overriding 1960 issues are what he called "destruction of foreign policy," along with agricultural programs and what he described as "operation of the national debt and handling of finances which are a disgrace."

Truman was asked how he now feels about his July 2 question of whether Kennedy was too young for the White House. Truman snapped back that "the Democratic National Convention solved that, and that's all there is to it."

Kennedy, who flew here from Washington Saturday in his private twin-engine Convair, went with Truman from Indepedence to nearby Kansas City for a luncheon with Missouri political leaders.

From there, Kennedy's schedule included:

— A flight late Saturday afternoon to Offut Air Force Base at Omaha, Neb., for an inspection tour of Strategic Air Command headquarters and an overnight stay as the guest of Gen. Curtis Lemay, Air Force vice chief of staff.

—Participation Sunday in a farm conference at Des Moines, Iowa, with Midwestern Democratic and farm leaders. Kennedy's vice presidential running mate, Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, also will attend.

Kennedy plans to fly back to Washington from Des Moines, arriving about 1 a.m. (EDT) Monday, to attend next week's Senate session.

Religious Issue Divides Family

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Knoxville housewife has charged in a separate maintenance bill that her husband refused to let her take their 3-year-old son to the Baptist church because "Baptist preachers are against" Sen. Jolm F. Kennedy for president.

Loretta Smith Clotfelter, 38, filed the bill in Domestic Relations Court Friday against Joe Lafayette Clotfelter, 46, a Tennessee Valley Authority carpenter.

In her petition, Mrs. Clotfelter said that an argument arose Thursday over the question of going to church and that he struck her and told her "to get out of the house and leave him."

Robber Copping Top Art Prizes

Joseph Calderon of Phoenix, Ariz., won four first prizes, one third prize and best of show honors at the exhibit which opened today.

He's sulking because he set low prices for his award winning works and can't increase them. The prison won't allow it.

WHITE HOUSE TRAIL

Both Sides Woo Southern Votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats made it clear last week there's room for all in their campaign tent: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi came in.

Republicans weren't turning anybody away either, whether they be conservatives who admire Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona or union members who think well of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

And both sides wooed the South while accusing each other of playing politics for Negro votes in the North on the matter of transporting African students to the United States.

Democratic presidential nominee John F. Kennedy went to Hyde Park, N. Y., to talk things over with Mrs. Roosevelt, who had tried to block him from the nomination.

Kennedy reported afterward: "I asked for her help, and she said that she would help."

Eastland's support for Kennedy was volunteered in a statement at Washington.

But the senator, who fights civil rights bills as vigorously as Mrs. Roosevelt demands them, stopped abruptly short of swallowing the Democratic platform.

Anyhow, it was a rare example of togetherness.

During the Republican convention that rominated Richard M. Nixon for president and Henry Cabot Lodge for vice president, some fears were expressed that conservatives might sit out the election this year.

But Goldwater, whom some have come to regard as the noblest conservative of them all, reported last week: "Conservative leaders from all over the country have been writing me, volunteering to do what they can for the ticket."

And further in the Republican version of togetherness, Mitchell predicted the rank and file of union labor will vote Republican in 1960. Just as it did in 1956, he added.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa) charged that a Kennedy family foundation used its tax-exempt funds to pick up the $100,000 tab, for "blatant political purposes."

Not so, retorted Kennedy. He said the foundation acted with the stipulation that it not be identified as the donor, and only after the State Department had refused to help the students.

Democrats demanded that the department say whether a Nixon campaign aide engineered a switch by which the department offered to pay the $100,000 after all.

Nixon found reason, in the hearty cheers of a big crowd at Greensboro, N. C., to believe he might do quite well in the South this year.

He said he was encouraged to hope that North Carolina, which came close to going Republican in 1956, would make it all the way over this time.

President Eisenhower didn't hurt the Republicans down South, either, with a tribute to Robert E. Lee as "one of the supremely gifted men produced by our nation—noble as a leader and as a man."

But in Atlanta, Matthew McCloskey of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, declared confidently: "The Democratic party will carry every state in the South in November."

The religious issue took two roads.

Dr. Ramsey Pollard of Memphis, president of the nine-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, predicted that most Baptist preachers in the South will use their pulpits to argue against the election of Kennedy because he is a Roman Catholic.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY), a Jew, reported a campaign is under way to charge Nixon, a Quaker, with anti-semitism. Javits denounced this as "a vicious canard about which there is not and never has been the slightest shred of truth."

Special campaign groups:

A Gallup poll showed Nixon with 50 per cent of the vote and Kennedy with 44 per cent, with 6 per cent undecided.

Nixon's people said they were encouraged but not complacent; Kennedy's camp said he was not disillusioned, that he "has always felt it would be a tough, hard fight."

Ransom Elected Cotton Contact Committee Head

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Paul Ransom, Monroe cotton grower, has been re-elected chairman of the Louisiana Cotton Contact Committee, an industry-wide group devoted to more efficient cotton growing and to promotion of agricultural research. The committee selected officers for the coming year at a meeting held at Louisiana State University in conjunction with Farm and Home Week.

Charles Roemer of Bossier City was re-elected vice-chairman of the contact committee and Dalton Gandy of Ruston was again named secretary.

The Cotton Contact Committee named a 16-man steering committee which includes, in addition to the three officers, Sam Thornton, Boyce; James Parrish, Girard; Roane Hathorne, Alexandria; Harvey Grant, Delhi; Archie Manuel, Eunice; Dan P. Logan, Gilliam; Phillip Wemple, Cheneyville; Richard Sanders, Morrow; Jack Dillard, Shreveport; Jim Henry Gilfoil, Lake Providence; Charles Grayson, Fort Necessity; Joe Mott, Oak Ridge; and Adrian Land, Natchitoches.

At its meeting during Farm and Home Week the committee heard talks by Dr. J. Norman Efferson, dean of the LSU College of Agriculture, and Dr. J. J. Mikell, assistant director of the LSU Agricultural Experiment Station, and received reports on cotton research now bieng conducted by the University.

FLEES STRONGHOLD

Armed Man Eludes Police After Siege

TULARE, S. D. (AP) — Police broke into the stronghold of a heavily armed farmer Saturday night to find him gone.

Police first used a loudspeaker urging Blume to come out. They fired sporadically around the farm buildings but there was no return fire or other response.

Officers then lobbed gas cartridges into the building with no reaction before they inaugurated a through search of the shed and surrounding buildings.

State's Atty. Richard Battey said an alert was sent out to law authorities over the state, warning that Blume, a former mental patient, apparently was still armed with a rifle and shotgun. Some weapons were left behind in the shed.

The siege force was dispersed and no active pursuit of Blume was planned. Battey said the large force used to surround the farm was needed because of Blume's "very dangerous propensities."

Police records showed Blume resisted arrest one month ago when an officer tried to pick him up for drunken driving. He also menaced a sheriff by pointing a rifle at the sheriff as he drove by recently, and had a reputation for carrying a rifle with him most everywhere.

Police fired from behind the home of Russell Harms, about 500 feet across the road from the Blume place. Blume was thought to be armed with two rifles and a pistol.

Harms was the complaining witness in a case that brought on the siege.

He reported Blume took a shot at him as he drove into his driveway Wednesday night. A charge of assault to kill was issued and Sheriff Curtiss Buss, with supporting officers, took it to the Blume farm.

Reportedly, a shot was heard when the officers drew near the farm. Reinforcements were called and 19 officers ringed the Blume home until late Friday night. Several persons were reported unsuccessful in attempts to get Blume to give himself up.

Blume, described as a dark-haired, good-looking man who keeps to himself, was committed for a short time in 1958 at Yankton State Mental Hospital.

Neighbors said animosity built up between Harms and Blume and that Harms once reportedly shot Blume's dog years ago.

Harms also was a witness seeing commitment of his neighbor to a mental hospital.

War Exercises Fatal For One, Others Injured

FT. BRAGG N.C. (UPI)—More than 7,100 paratroopers playing the role of friendly forces in a mock war staged the largest single day Army airborne assault exercise since World War II Saturday.

One trooper was killed and five others hospitalized with jump injuries. Fourteen others suffered minor injuries but joined their units in the Pine Woods Battle Ground after emergency treatment.

The name of the trooper who was killed was withheld pending notification of next of kin. He died of multiple injuries, including fractures of the skull, arms, leg and spine.

The maneuver, called Exercise Bright Star-Pine Cone III, was designed to test the ability of units of the Strategic Army Corps to handle limited "brush fire" wars.

Using a script patterned after several recent international incidents the Army set up aggressor forces in the mythical nation identified as a satellite of an aggressor state.

The paratroopers in the mass drop were members of the 101st Airborne Division from Ft. Campbell, Ky., carrying out the type mission envisioned when STRAC was established more than two years ago. They were rushed here to repell the invaders from Platka's soil and restore peace.

The script called for them to win in about a week.

Snake Handler Bitten By Cobra

MIAMI (UPI)— Bill Haast, director of the Miami Serpentarium, was bitten by a poisonous snake for the 64th time Saturday.

Haast, 49, was struck on the right thumb by a four-foot Indian Cobra from which he was attempting to extract venom.

The veteran snake handler, who has built up considerable immunity to poisonous bites over the years, said he took some anti-venom injections, but didn't plan to enter the hospital.

"My thoart's a little hoarse," he said, "and my hand is swollen to the wrist. But those are the only effects."

He said it was the 30th time a cobra has bitten him. He was last bitten about three months ago, by a rattlesnake, and was hospitalized for several days that time.

Pair Charged With Thefts

Monroe police arrested two men yesterday, charging both with theft and one of them with disturbing the peace.

Arrested late yesterday afternoon was Leon Brewster, 42, no permanent address. He was charged with theft, item valued at more than $20, and with disturbing the peace. He is being held on a $350 bond.

Also charged with theft and placed on $350 bond was George Dyer, 39, of 617 Wood St. He was arrested at 9 p.m.

Editor Horace Greeley, nominally a Republican, was the Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1872. He lost to Ulysses S. Grant.

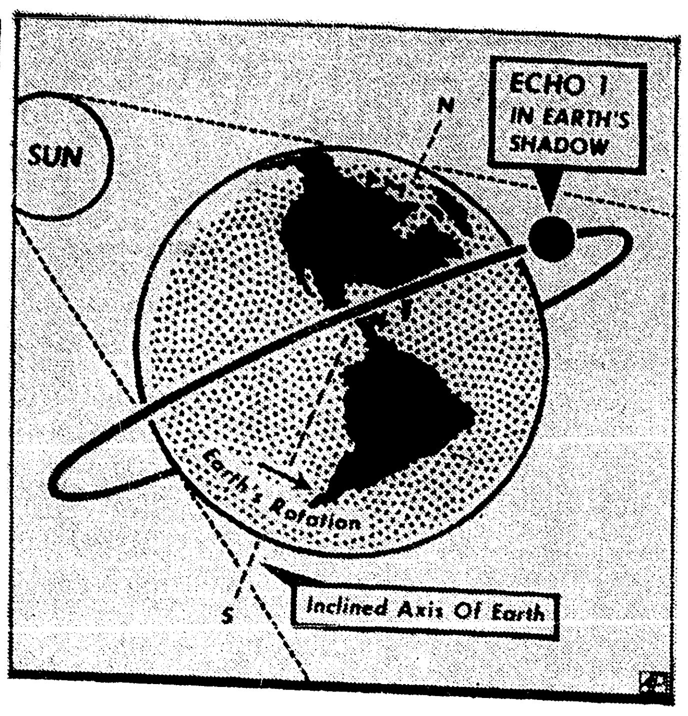

DIAGRAM SHOWS how Echo I communications satellite will be in earth's shadow for first time Sunday night. Although it will be in shadow only briefly the first night, dark periods will increase until satellite spends 60 per cent of time in darkness, then pattern will be reversed. The reason for the change is due to tilt of Earth's axis in relation to its plane of orbit around the sun. Since satellite's orbit is at constant incline in relation to Earth's axis it shifts in and out of full sunlight as Earth moves around sun. (AP Wirephoto)

FULFILLS STRANGE VOW

Dancer Drives Car Into Stone Bridge

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

ATLANTA (UPI) — Striptease dancer Chilli Evans slammed her new car into a stone bridge abutment on an Atlanta expressway early Saturday and fulfilled a strange and lonely suicide vow made in the dim lights backstage.

Two other exotic dancers and a burlesque band trumpet player tried to prevent the attractive redhaired performer from carrying out her vow. But no one in the audience at her last show knew of the dancer's despair. Her routine was daring and gay.

Before the last show at the Atlanta's Harem Club, Chilli sobbed in her dressing room and told another stripper, Peggy Jones, that "I have nothing to live for.

"I know a beautiful brick wall that I'm going to drive my car into at 90 miles an hour — 90 miles. Hell, I'm going to cram into that wall at 120."

Police estimated she was driving at least 100 m.p.h. when her car hit the abutment.

Miss Evans, 30, was the mother of four. Her real name was Marguerite Suzanne Galento, the estranged wife of a Memphis, Tenn., wrestler.

She had just bought a new home in Forest Park, an Atlanta suburb, and last week was as gay and happy buying furniture and making plans for the house and sending the children to school as she was in her exotic routines behind the footlights on the uptown show club.

"She was always dramatic, and often despondent," Peggy Jones said. "She would look in the mirror and say 'You're no good. You're no good.' She was moody, but not hard to get along with. She had a boyfriend and had even talked about marrying him."

The house buying was an interlude, her friends said. Friday night, she telephoned someone and told them "she was leaving. This was it, and she mentioned Highway 41," stripper Myra Lane, who overheard the conversation, said.

"She kept saying she couldn't make the next show—but she did, and put it on beautifully. She was always saying she couldn't go on, but she would, and she was a good dancer and usually received or shared top billing." Her last routine was an oriental-tye dance.

After the last show Chilli broke down. Myra, Peggy and trumpet player took her to a restaurant around the corner, and she drank four cups of coffee. "We didn't want to leave her or let her get in that car alone. Don (the trumpet player) asked her to take him home, and we followed them downtown," Peggy said.

"She let Don out, and he talked to her for a long time. We stayed behind but kept her in sight. Then she tore out the expressway. We ran one red light trying to keep up, but we lost her. She was just around the bend. She went into that wall without a waver."

"Before she left the restaurant, I hugged her and talked to her but she was crying and had been crying for hours...it was after 2 a.m. I talked about her fine, beautiful children, and she said they'd be better off without her. I told her 'You don't mean it. I don't believe it."

The dancer's body was wedged in the crushed wreckage of the car and she died in route to a hospital.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

SENATOR FROM ARIZONA

Recently a thoughtful reader addressed the following letter to this column:

"I think your column this morning is a false fingerpost directing us toward national, if not global, obliteration. I do not question your good faith when you write, 'I am not suggesting preventive war or war of any kind involving shooting or bombing,' but none the less, that is exactly what your article, taken as a whole, does suggest — not advocates, but suggests.

"Is it not a fact that your proposals for the conduct of the cold war actually call for the following ultimatum from our government to the world's two most populous nations?: 'Quit being communist, get "democratic" — or fight.'

"Could there be any course more suicidal thus to force into each other's arms those two powerful potential foes instead of cannily seeking to promote the mutual jealousy and mistrust now evident between them?"

I appreciate the concern expressed by this writer. Apparently, the column which aroused this response failed to clearly express my intended meaning.

Since the end of World War II we have, through our various programs of foreign aid, attempted to inspire many countries to remake their political structure in the pattern of the United States of America. It is obvious from one glance at the world situation today that our efforts have been a failure.

I did not and do not advocate preventive war. My position on foreign policy does not suggest such action. I do not propose that we issue an ultimatum to any other nation: "Quit being communist, get democratic or fight!"

What I am advocating is this: we should make it clear that we have no intention of becoming communist, or surrendering the individual freedoms purchased for us by the devotion and blood of our forefathers.

It may be, as the writer suggests, there is some jealousy and mutual distrust between Russia and Red China. But the point of difference is not over their objective, which is to communize the world, it is rather over the means they are now employing to achieve that objective. The Red Chinese apparently would prefer to use force immediately. The Red Russians apparently prefer the less costly procedure of subversion and political action — counting on our apathy to permit them a victory.

What I am suggesting, sir, is that we put our own military establishment in order and then proclaim to the world, as we have done repeatedly, that we have no intention of using our military power to interfere in the internal affairs of Red Russia or Red China. They can remain communist if they choose but we will not permit them to force communism on us or on any of our friends and allies who now being free desire to remain free.

The avowed purpose of communism is to conquer the world. Mr. K. boasted: "We will bury you."

Now consider this: if the communists are determined to conquer the world and willing to fight to achieve their objective, then how do we increase the possibility of war by declaring our intention to resist and implementing our capacity to resist?

The only alternative is to surrender — if not formally, then inferentially by admitting that we will not fight to defend our freedom — to keep Khrushchev from "burying" us.

It seems to me the safest course, the surest way to avoid war, is to make this nation militarily superior to any aggressor or combination of aggressors and then to announce to the world our determined intention to resist aggression.

It is my opinion that only by so doing can we prevent: a war of conquets being waged against us; or, being compelled by our fear of war to make piecemeal surrender and eventually accept the dictates of the Russian masters. How do you stand, sir?

Bunche, an American Negro undersecretary in the U. N., was assigned to the job in the Congo when the emergency flared in July. He has been ignored and snubbed in recent days by Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Will Visit In U.S.

Stock Market Shows Only Slight Gain

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week managed a moderate gain on average while "digesting" the wide advance of the previous week.

It was a narrowly-moving, cautious market with only one three-million-share day. Volume declined to 13,702,603 shares from 14,699,940 the prior week.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.09 to 629.27 as it nudged through a theoretical upside resistance level.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 1.70 to 221.40.

The first four sessions were evenly divided—two small gains and two narrow losses, according to the averages. Friday provided a fairly sharp rise. It came as a surprise because it was a sluggish day. The boost resulted from a combination of gains by blue chips represented in the averages while the list as a whole performed indifferently.

AVERAGES

Even on the days when the averages were declining, however, more stocks advanced than declined. By Friday, this superiority of plus over minus signs had continued for 12 straight sessions.

The steady predominance of gains over losses, plus the ability of the market to absorb profit-taking despite the previous large advance and the rather drab background of news, were encouraging technical factors. In a quiet way, considerable investment buying was under way.

General Motors, frequently cited as a bellwether of the entire list, wa a beneficiary of this high quality buying and it rose $1\frac{7}{8}$ as third most active stock.

Of the 1,427 issues traded htis week, 813 advanced and 488 declined. There were 188 new highs and 34 new lows.

ACTIVE

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Continental Industries, up $\frac{7}{8}$ at $8\frac{7}{8}$ on 160,300 shares.

For the third week in a row Treasury bond prices declined while corporates gained ground this week. Trading was lackluster in both markets.

Despite advances late in the week, losses of U.S. government securities raeched a full point for the week. Meanwhile, all sections of the corporate list except foreign bonds closed out their fifth consecutive week at 1960 weekly peaks, according to the Associated Press average.

Industrials turned in the best performance in the corporate market, gaining more than half a point on the AP index. Rails, utilities and high grade issues recorded moderate advances and foreign bonds posted a minimum drop.

Volume totaled $23,894,000 par value on the New ork Stock Exchange compared with $24,655,000 last week and $24,811,000 a year ago. Daily average volume dropped to $4,778,800 from near the five million level.

Again the long term treasury issues lost the most.

FIRST MERCHANTMAN

Launching Slated For Nuclear Ship

CAMDEN, N.J. (UPI)—Within a few months the N. S. Savannah will become the first nuclear powered merchant ship to set sail anywhere in the world.

The $42.5 million vessel is in the final stages of construction at the New York Shipbuilding Corp. Yards in Camden. Her atom fuel is scheduled to be installed soon, and she will begin sea trials before the end of the year.

The keel for the world's first non-military, atom-powered ship was laid May 22, 1958, and the ship was launched into the Delaware River a little more than a year ago, July 21, 1959. Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower christened the long white hull.

The N. S. Savannah (N. S. for nuclear ship) is named for another ship of history — the Savannah which, on May 22, 1819, became the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. President Eisenhower suggested that the atom ship be named after the old steamer.

On April 25, 1955, President Eisenhower announced plans for the atomic powered vessel which would be able to travel for three-and-half years without refueling, and which would show the world the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Eisenhower originally suggested that a Nautilus-type engine be installed in the proposed merchant ship, but Congress decided the Savannah should be a new ship of experimental design from bow to stern. The President gave final approval Oct. 15, 1956.

Originally construction was expected to take about three years, but delays have slowed progress. Even now, no one will say definitely when the ship will sail. Delays have been caused by various factors, such as an overabundance of visitors, an overloaded work s c h e d u l e, and changes in design during construction.

The Savannah is 595 feet long and 78 feet wide.

There is no secrecy about the ship. A guard is stationed near the reactor's containment vessel, but his only mission is to prevent visitors from taking cameras inside where the flash-bulbs would bother the workmen. The guard signs visitors in and out and checks their clothing. The first precaution is so that no one is left in the maze of the reactor, and the second so that dirt is not carried inside.

No one will be allowed to enter the containment vessel once the reactor is operating because of the radiation danger.

If something does break down in the reactor, a duplicate piece of equipment will automatically take over. Engineers watching an electronic console in another part of the ship will be able to keep tabs on everything that goes on in the reactor. With their electronic equipment they will be able to "see" more than could a man right inside the reactor.

The Savannah has been designed to survive collision with all but the very largest of ships, without damage to the reactor. The containment vessel is protected by collision bulkheads and collision mats, the latter being made of alternating layers of one-inch steel plate and three-inch redwood. The mats are 4 inches thick.

If the ship is sunk, the reactor container will be automatically flooded and sealed to prevent contamination of surrounding waters. The reactor has been designed so that it will automatically cease operation if something extraordinary happens.

Radioactive wastes will be kept in special tanks on board until international regulations on dumping waste at sea have been established. A large barge will service the reactor and take on radioactive waste whenever the Savannah enters its home port.

The captain of the Savannah will be G. R. DeGroote, 55, of Huntington, Long Island, who has had an intimate knowledge of the sea for 40 years. His crew will be one of the best ever to go to sea. Deck officers and engineers have taken 15-month courses at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va., located near the Atomic Energy Division of Babcock and Wilson Co., manufacturer of the atomic power plant.

Although the cost of the Savannah is high, and it is very doubtful that she will ever make money for her owners (presently the United States government), the technical data derived from her will lead to lower cost for similar ships in the future.

When all has been learned that can be learned from the Savannah, she will be placed in commercial service. Until then, she will be sailing the seas both as a floating laboratory and as a powerful propaganda weapon.

Prince Reports Troops Moving On Laos City

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) · Prince Souvanna Phouma reported Saturday counterrevolutionary troops were moving toward Vientiane. Souvanna Phouma is the premier appointed by neutralist rebels who seized power here two weeks ago.

"The first contact will mean bloodshed," said Souvanna Phouma.

He did not say whether the anti-coup forces were coming from north or south.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, ousted defense minister, commands the counterrevolutionary soldiers. He set up headquarters recently at Sawannakhet, 185 miles south of Vientiane. Other forces of his are in Luang Prabang, site of the royal residence, 120 miles north of Vientiane.

Both Savannakhet and Luang Prabang are on the Mekong River which forms the boundary with Thailand to the west and south.

Military authorities note that Phoumi's forces in Luang Prabang are well equipped with boats. Observers consider a ground advance almost impossible because the roads to Vientiane are poor and monsoon rains have washed out many sections.

POE'S CLASSIC

'House Of Usher' Is Masterpiece

Edgar Allan Poe's "House of Usher" was considered by the great author his finest story. American International has brought it to the screen with Vincent Price starred as Roderick Usher, Mark Damon as Philip, Myrna Fahey as Madeline Usher, and Harry Ellerbe as Bristol.

Producer - director Roger Corman has managed to squeeze out the last drop of suspense and terror from the famous Poe classic and the result is a motion picture masterpiece of the macabre. All the chills, thrills, lurking danger fear of the unknown conjured up by Poe are here and they build scene by scene to a mighty climax.

MACABRE

Edgar Allan Poe was the master of the macabre in literature and actually started that type of writing. He introduced analytic investigation into literature and today's crop of detective and crime detection writers owe a real debt of gratitude to the author who achieved no degree of success or recognition during his lifetime.

In fact, his genius received its first acclaim in France in 1858 when poet Charles Beaudelaire—himself a writer of the bizarre—"discovered" Poe and brought his works to the attention of French and other European writers. Eventually his fame trickled back to this country where he was born and where he eked out a bare living as a journalist when he was not writing his tales of death and desperation.

No one has ever outdone Poe in this line of writing and his stories remain among the world's best thrillers today. "House of Usher" is a thriller in the most chilling sense.

SUAVE

Vincent Price, whose suave characterizations of maniacal killers and whose distinctive good looks give him an air of authority in whatever role, is perfectly cast as Roderick, last of the ill-fated Usher line. Myrna Fahey as his sister, Mark Damon as her fiance, and Harry Ellerbe as the Usher family butler are all excellent.

"House of Usher" is in CinemasScope and color. The exciting musical score was written by Les Baxter, who a few years ago made "mood" music popular. The settings are elegant and the entire mood of the film is brooding, eerie, intense. Not the least of its qualities is that it brings together for the first time — on film — Vincent Price, master of the macabre in motion pictures and Edgar Allan Poe, master of the same sinister vein in literature.

OPENING AT PARAMOUNT today is "The House of Usher", starring Madeline Usher, played by Myrna Fahey, and her brother, Roderick, protrayed by Vincent Price. The film is in color and CinemaScope.

Follows Mother

NEW YORK (AP) — Gail Jones, 22-year-old daughter of singer Lena Horne, has been signed for a lead role in 'Valmouth," the new Sandy Wilson musical.

The young actress has appeared in a number of student productions but this is her first venture as a professional actress.

Irish Visitors

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway will have two Irish visitors in succession and both may stir considerable activity. Brendan Behan, the author of "The Hostage," is due early in September for the American opening of his play.

Shelagh Delaney, the 19-year-old girl whose first play, "A Taste of Honey," was a London hit, will arrive here in time for its opening Sept. 22.

These will be the first visits for both.

SAYS PRODUCER

Trends Influence Hollywood Films

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As most everyone knows, movies are getting sexier than ever. Producer Albert Zugsmith tells why:

"Hollywood cannot start a trend —only follow it. You can't be ahead of the times here—only behind it."

Zugsmith has made his share of sex pictures—"Written on the Wind," "Sex Kittens Go to College," "College Confidential," etc.

"You know why?" he asks. "The first one made money. I wanted to change pace, but every time I'd suggest a property like 'Gulliver's Travels,' the front office would say: "Make a picture like your last one."

Zugsmith finally found a way to get around the front office.

"I have a young son who reads the comic strip 'Dondi,' and he asked me why I didn't make a movie about it.

" 'Dondi' is a little boy, and a movie about him is about as sexless a story as there is. But I think it's the kind of picture that families want to see."

Zugsmith differs from most Hollywood producers. He was a millionaire before he ever hit this town. He began as a police reporter on the Atlantic City (N.J.) World and rose to publisher. Later he made a fortune buying and selling newspapers, radio stations and TV stations.

At the moment he is the largest single stockholder of the studio.

"I am, in effect, my own front office," he says. "That's why I'm making 'Dondi.' "

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A major studio invited high fashion model Isabella Albonico from New York for tests and auditions for a movie contract. Miss Albonico, a native of Florence, Italy, once was Dior's top model in Paris.

COMING SOON

'Bells Are Ringing' Hilarious Comedy

Resplendently staged and costumed, with a wealth of song and dance numbers, colorful characterizations and moving at a laugh - a - minute pace, Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer brings to the screen the musical hit of the year, "Bells Are Ringing."

The film version of the Betty Comden - Adolph Green - Jule Styne stage hit, which ran on Broadway for more than three years and continued its success on the road, stars Judy Holliday and Dean Martin, with Miss Holliday recreating the role of the humorous and loveable telephone answering service operator which she created in the original musical play.

LAVISH

Filmed in CinemaScope and color against lavish backgrounds, the picture was produced by Arthur Freed and directed by Vincente Minnelli, the team who have given the screen two Academy Award winners, "Gigi" and "An American in Paris," among many other hits.

Fred clark, one of Hollywood's top comedians, co - stars in the role of an edgy Broadway producer, with the supporting cast headed by Eddie Foy, Jr., and including such members of the original Broadway cast as Jean Stapleton, Ruth Storey, Dort Clark, Ralph Roberts and Bernie West.

"Bells Are Ringing" is highlighted by fourteen musical numbers ranging from love songs, topical ditties, humorous ballads, Bongos and Cha Cha routine to a honky - tonk chorus girl number. They are sung and danced in solos and ensembles in such varied settings as the answering service office, Times Square, Central Park, skyscraper penthouses, smart restaurants, cafe society parties and glittering night clubs.

SONGS

The songs include "Bells Are Ringing," "It's Better Than a Dream," "Hello," "It's a Perfect Relationship," "Is It a Crime," "Mu Cha Cha," "Drop That Name," "The Party's Over," "I'm Goin' Back," "Do It Yourself," "Just In Time," "Long Before I Knew You," "It's a Simple Little System" and "The Midas Touch."

They form an integral part of the plot which revolves about Ella Peterson (Judy Holliday), who works for Susanswerphone and has a deplorable tendency to get involved in the lives of the customers as she takes and delivers their messages.

Ella has fallen in love, sight unseen, with the party answering to PL 0-4433, the telephone number of playboy playwright Jeff Moss (Dean Martin). What happens when circumstances bring Ella and Jeff together changes the course of both their lives. Their romance takes place amid a series of hilarious complications in which (a) Ella is shadowed by a police inspector (Dort Clark) who suspects that the girls of Susanswerphone are giving more than telephone service; (b) she gets mixed up with the activities of J. Otto Prantz (Eddie Foy, Jr.), a "bookie" who uses Susanswerphone as a cover - up; (c) she encounters romantic ompetition from the voluptuous Olga (Valerie Allen), Jeff's race - track - minded girl friend. The indomitable Ella takes all these obstacles in her stride and comes out the winner in every department, including that of — LOVE.

Betty Comden and Adolph Green wrote the screen play and lyrics of "Bells Are Ringing," with the music by Jule Styne. The screen version of the Broadway hit emerges as topflight movie entertainment.

Heroic Deeds In Early Cuba Recalled

Editor's Note — Cuban-American relations traditionally are marked by heroic deeds and words — by Teddy's Rough Riders, "Remember the Maine", "A message to Garcia"—but now these relations have soured in the Castro era and the common Cuban cry is "Cuba si, Yankees no." Here is a review of these times from '98 until now.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On Feb.15, 1898, the U.S. battleship Maine was blown up in Havana's harbor while on a goodwill visit. Killed in the blast—still a mystery—were 266 American seamen.

"Remember the Maine" became a battle cry that pointed up public indignation in the United States over reported atrocities by the Spaniards against the Cubans.

It helped touch off the Spanish-American War that spelled emergence of the United States as a world power — the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and Guam were dividends in the war that crushed the Spaniards and officially came to an end in the Treaty of Paris Dec.10, 1898.

QUICK

On Aug. 10, 1960, what was described as a joyous crowd of thousands of Cubans dumped 26 coffins into Havana Bay.

They were launched in the direction of the United States. Demonstrators who had danced to the music of street bands all day said they symbolized the burial of 26 American-owned companies nationalized by Prime Minister Fidel Castro's revolutionary government.

They marked at least the temporary end of an era.

White steps lead up to 75-foot high marble shafts that support a bronze American eagle with spreading wings.

STEPPED UP

Fidel Castro has stepped up his campaign to clip those wings and depreciate the role Uncle Sam played in breaking Spain's hold on Cuba, 90-odd miles from the U.S. mainland. But it will be difficult for him to deny the benefits that resulted from the action.

Yellow fever was eradicated by the United States (remember Dr. Walter Reed and the American volunteers who died proving that one mosquito type caused yellow jack? Their sacrifice has wiped out yellow fever as a major peril.)

Highways were built under the American military occupation from the end of the war until 1902. Government administration and education were reformed under what was a prototype program for the kind of aid given underdeveloped countries today by the United States and the United Nations. Much of this work was directed by Gen. Leonard Wood, as military governor, with a few American aides but with most posts filled by Cubans, Wood and Theodore (Teddy) Roosevelt had organized the Rough Riders, volunteers who stormed San Juan Hill and demoralized the Spanish army.

And there are monuments tangible and intangible.

There is a historical monument to the memory of Lt. Col. Teddy Roosevelt's drive up San Juan Hill with the Rough Riders — the 1st Volunteer Cavalry—along with the volunteer 2nd Massachusetts and the 71st New York, and the Negro regulars in the dismounted 10th Cavalry.

MONUMENT

There is a monument to bravery in the exploit of Andrew S. Rowan, the American soldier who in 1898 carried the message to Cuban Gen. Calixto Garcia Iniquez advising him that the United States would help him. Rowan's adventure in finding the guerrilla leader in the wilds of Cuba was publicized by Elbert Hubbard in his inspirational essay "A Message to Garcia."

There are other monuments to that era. Whether they will stand can be answered by Castro.

Independence for Cuba under the Treaty of Paris was accompanied by a U.S. stipulation that Cuba must enter into no treaty relations with a foreign power that might endanger its independence.

The United States kept a paternal hand on Cuba's affairs with the right to intervene if the infant republic's welfare was threatened. Under that policy, when revolution threatened to tear the country apart in 1906, the United States resumed control from September 1906 until January 1909.

REBUFFED

But the United States sedulously rebuffed some demands for a complete takeover and that is another monument to U.S. relations with the island republic.

There was the financial monument that developed in 62 years.

Last week the Castro government intervened — polite way of saying took over—the 75-million-dollar Moa Bay Mining Co. It has taken over American-owned hotels valued in the millions.

The takeover process has its eye on Nicaro Nickel Processing Corp. — in the 100-million-dollar class—as well as three American banks.

ANOTHER

There was another economic monument: what amounted to a U.S. subsidy of Cuba's big cash crop, sugar, bought on an expanded quota at a price above the world quotations. It provided Cuban growers about 150 million dollars a year. That has terminated.

Another monument to U.S.-Cuban relations has fallen. The island the size of Pennsylvania, with a population less than the City of New York, had taken to American baseball.

The Havana team's place in the International League has been a Castro casualty. Tourism and the millions of dollars it represented is shrinking. Presumably American automobiles and other consumer products will not be displaced by Soviet products, however.

There remains one other big monument: the 28,000 acres of land and harbor that make up the deepwater U.S. naval base on Guantanamo Bay on the southeastern end of the island.

It was established in 1903 by mutual agreement. In 1934 a treaty made the agreement perpetual, cancellable only by mutual agreement or abandonment by the United States.

There are straws in the winds that blow around that base: Fidel Castro has denounced U.S. military aid pacts; President Osvaldo Dorticos has implied strongly that Cuba may ask surrender of the base; the Castro press has been making noises about the future of the base.

QUOTED

Fidel Castro has been quoted as saying there would be no action about it unless it was used against Cuba. But Dorticos has said the annual rental check of about $3,300 paid in June will be returned.

A six-foot steel fence separates the 100-million-dollar area and its population of about 10,000 from Castro's Cuba.

The inhabitants include about 3,000 Cuban employes who earn upwards of five million dollars in wages from the U.S. government and another two million from private employers. Cuban merchants sell about two million in local supplies to it.

The personnel inside have 20 baseball fields, 5 swimming pools, 3 beaches, a 27-hole golf course and 6 outdoor movies to keep them entertained.

Early this year there were 3,000 sailors, 3,000 dependents including 1,200 children and 650 American civilians on the base. There are barracks for three platoons of Marines, a 100-bed Navy hospital and dental clinic.

The base has been vulnerable: up until recently Cuba controlled its water and electric supply. Now emergency facilities have been installed.

Noise, Dirt, Splendor

EDITOR'S NOTE—The noise of traffic and jazz bands compete in the perpetual circus of the exotic street; yet around the corner the only sound is tinkling chimes in a Bhuddist shrine. This is Tokyo, city of contrasts. It's the biggest in the world—and the best—says AP staffer Nate Polowetzky in the sixth of a series on the world's great cities.

By NATE POLOWETZKY

TOKYO (AP) — East is east and west is west and this town tops 'em all.

Take a look out of the window. The noisiest, dirtiest, most exhilarating city in the world. Like living on a roller coaster. Like sitting on the aisle, three rows back at the biggest and best show in the world. All for free.

Nine million people out there, fighting, laughing, crying, working, dreaming and loving, never still for a moment. Violence and beauty—a scream in the night or a lute song in spring.

TIME STOPS

The biggest city in the world and one of the most modern. Yet step 50 feet off the main drag and you're back in the 17th century and time has stopped completely.

Down in the Shimbashi area the geisha girls, all powdered and wigged, still use the ricksha to get to their appointments. If you look very carefully through the hodge podge of shops and stalls in the back alleys you can see the beautiful little shrines to ancient spirits which protected the section centuries ago.

Watch that kid on the bike, balancing a stack of lacquer noodle trays five feet high, dodging his way through that awful mess of traffic. Better than a circus.

That man there, arrogant as a Spanish dancer, daring the autos to hit him. Think he's going to let a car ruffle his dignity? The crowds of farm families in town on a short visit wandering down theater row in Asakusa, goggling at the big posters—Wild Bill Hickok and a samurai warrior competing for their yen.

TEMPLE

Take a little walk with me to Nakamise and follow the street into the temple of the Goddess of Mercy, with the incense smoke curling around your head and the pilgrims pulling the prayer rope and throwing their offerings into the altar box.

Noise and color, that's Tokyo, and you have to be deaf or blind—or dead—not to get a kick out of it. London's great and I'm not going to knock Paris, but we have things here the others don't even dream about.

Fireworks on the Sumida river, when they bombard the heavens with lights and color and dare the stars to compete: or the summer festivals when the chanting celebrants—all skinny legs and knobby knees and muscular calves—lurching down the street with golden shrines on their shoulders.

When its night, the cops direct traffic with huge, lighted paper lanterns—fireflies showing leviathan home.

And the thing a fellow remembers most after the long day:

ANCIENT TREE

A beautiful Japanese garden with a twisted pine tree 300 years old hidden behind a row of shabby shots.

Or a tiny, new shrine, to a red-bibbed Jizo, god of travelers, next to a taxi garage in a factory district; or a geisha dancing the mambo in a plush night club, while the girl who sings with the band, hair half-bleached red in defiance of nature, mournfully tells of the "Liver of Rove."

For the kind of beauty that lasts, I'll take the curve of the Imperial Palace moat, covered with snow; the majesty of Meiji shrine on a warm April day.

But seeing is only part of living, fellow. You have to keep your ears open, too—and then you can hear the heart of the city.

The mournful call of a noodle vendor's flute in a deserted office district at midnight when the rest of the world has fallen asleep. The cheerful slap-slap of wooden shoes outside your bedroom window. The musical chirp of the cricket in your kid's bamboo cricket cage on a summer night.

SHIVERS

The temple gong sounding faintly over the roar of traffic. Maybe I'm just a sentimental slob, but I get the shivers every time.

Where do you live back home? Main Street. Nice, too. But I live in a section of Tokyo which means "In the Middle of the Black Eye," and I have friends who live in "Bitter Valley," or on "Persimmon Tree Hill," or in "Six Trees."

We have poetry all the time.

Brother, you can have New York, everyone fighting for a buck and snarling. Take the service, here, for instance. The most gracious and polite in the world. None of this business of the outstretched palm.

Is Corruption The Idea?

Governor Ross Barnett of Mississippi says that if unpledged electors in the Southern states could create an Electoral College deadlock in the presidential election, "Then we may be able to drive some hard bargains." As points of "hard bargains" he listed:

1.—Getting either Nixon or Kennedy to appoint a Southern U.S. Attorney General, meaning one who would hold back on prosecution of civil rights cases in the South.

2.—Appointment of a Southerner to the Supreme Court.

3.—Restoration of the Democratic Party Convention rule, abolished in 1936, whereby a two-thirds maority was necessary to nominate the Democratic presidential candidate. This, in effect, gave the South virtually a veto power over the Party's nominations.

A Southern Attorney-General: No true Southern segregationist appointed Attorney-General could possibly gain confirmation in a Senate now 5 to 1 for strong civil rights legislation. Even a Southern "moderate" or "liberal" in the political sense of the words these days probably could not get by.

But the real point is that to affect Southern civil rights cases, this "bargain" could be consumated only under this condition:—

That Nixon or Kennedy corruptly, dishonestly and crookedly would enter into a conspiracy to defile the presidency by naming an Attorney-General who would be equally corrupt in defiling his own office by non-enforcement of federal laws he is sworn to uphold.

And we do not mean Supreme Court "law of the land" but federal civil rights statutes enacted by a Democratic Congress, signed by a Republican President, and upheld thus far in all major tests by the federal judiciary. We don't like them, but as of now they are law.

Such a "bargain" would mean agreement for mass disregard of law enforcement — by the Attorney-General and sanctioned by a President who appointed the Attorney-General for the specific purpose of not enforcing law he has taken an oath to enforce.

That would be dishonest, corrupt, crooked.

For the President of the United States it would be a violation of his oath to "protect" his office — which simply means to keep it clean and honest.

For the Attorney-General it would be the same.

For each it could be malfeasance or non-feasance in office.

We don't think Mr. Nixon is corrupt, dishonest, crooked.

We don't think Mr. Kennedy is corrupt, dishonest, crooked.

We don't think the people of the South want the choice of Nixon or Kennedy even to be approached on any basis of whether one or the other could be "bargained" into dishonesty and corruption.

We are certain that such thoughts never entered Governor Barnett's mind. He was in a political press conference in which he was plugging for propaganda on his side of a hot issue about to come before his state's Democratic convention. We are sure that if he thinks it out, he will see that the whole idea is repugnant to decency. But, once again, we have a startling example of how vital it is to think out all these things.

And if there are those who do think corruption and dishonesty could be winked at, let them remember that a man who makes a crooked bargain is certainly crooked enough to break it.

There is another angle:

The Party and Vetoes: Some have contended that a presidential prospect, in bargaining, might agree to veto some types of civil rights legislation. Aside from the angle of corruption that also could enter here, it is obvious that the pro-civil rights forces in the House and the Senate easily could and would override any such presidential action.

Further, the man who becomes President must face re-election in four years. All the House members must face re-election twice in that period. Two-thirds of the Senate must face re-election. Where would a President, or his Party, be at election time if he or his Attorney-General had sought to block the civil rights courses to which they were pledged and which major ties of both parties in Congress have done everything possible to institute up to now?

Let's use a little common sense in these things — and it takes little to see that even if a bargaining situation could be created there is nothing to bargain about that a President could grant.

A Southern Supreme Court Justice: We have two now, if Texas is "South". Clark of Texas, Black of Alabama. What good are they? How could any appointee from the South other than their type — on segregation — get Senate confirmation? If both Black and Clark voted with the South and we had a third to do so, what good would it do? A 6 to 3 integration decision is just as binding as 9 to 0.

The Two-Thirds Rule: That's a matter only for the Democratic Party and its national convention. The South supplied some of the votes to surrender it in 1936 and can never get it back.

In the end all unpledged electors talk comes back to the same thing:

Nixon or Kennedy will be President.

You can make your own decision between the two or let someone else make it for you.

There is no bargain that could help the South in the segregation field that a President could keep if he made it.

If the election could be thrown into the House, Kennedy would be virtually a certain winner even if Nixon was high in the popular vote and had an electoral plurality.

So, the unpledged elector plan is exactly what South Carolina's Democratic convention dubbed it when shouting it down without even a roll call: A scheme that can thwart rather than assert the will of the people and that gives Kennedy two shots at the election — instead of one in a clearcut two-man contest.

At the press conference where he presented his "hard bargain" points Governor Barnett also repeated his frequently - made statement:

"A vote for either Nixon or Kennedy is a vote to integrate all Southern schools by 1963."

That is neither fully correct nor germaine to any issue of unpledged electors. The Democratic platform specifically sets 1963 as a target date for integration of all shools now segregated. The Republican platform specifically spurns any target date. Both parties and both candidates want speed, but no President can, by himself, control the throttle.

Nearly half of the nation's department stores have started charging for deliveries, and three-quarters charge for pickups for something that is returned.

There are now some 20,000 Catholic priests in the United States, according to Catholic Digest. Additionally, 3,500 American priests are serving as missionaries in foreign lands.

The two points in the United States most remote from each other are Attu, Alaska, and Key Largo, Fla. They are 5,509 miles apart.

Lines Of Least Resistance

In Final Analysis, Both Nixon And Kennedy Will Rely On Own Judgment Instead Of On Braintrusters

Nixon vs. Kennedy has not yet developed into a debate on issues. Kennedy has a brain trust of Harvard professors; Nixon has a brain trust of Harvard professors and some others. This is mostly window dressing. Both candidates have been in the national Legislature for 14 years. They know what they believe and what they are prepared to say are not quite the same thing. As men of great experience in politics, they will not and cannot depend on academic and business advisers to counsel them. Ultimately, they will follow those lines of least opposition which might assure election.

Nor are the academic and business advisers of either candidate particularly impressive from a vote - gathering standpoint. And elections have to do with votes; that is why they are held. Therefore, we can regard the announcement of these lists of great minds as a one-day news story and forget about them forever more.

Thus far, neither candidate has startled the nation with ideas and purposes. John Kennedy's speech at Franklin D. Roosevelt's grave was a dramatic performance of no particular vote-getting significance. The appeal to the old voters was mindful of the long-forgotten Dr. Townsend. Granted that the problem of the aged is constantly with us, the matter is not as acute, for instance, as the deterioration of the dollar. And about that neither of the candidates speaks a word.

Richard Nixon needs to take the initiative in dealing with major problems or he has to run in defense of the Eisenhower administration. He needs to prove to the country that he has the stature of a president as well as that of a vice president. In the campaign he can prove it only by words. Thus far, the Republicans have put out two propagandistic ideas: One deals with Kennedy's very bad attendance record in the Senate. The entire country witnessed Kennedy chasing hither and yon winning primaries, seeking delegates, etc. A man cannot be in two places simultaneously; therefore if Kennedy was beating Humphrey in Wisconsin and West Virginia, he could not be in the Senate.

The other is a pamphlet on what other Democrats said about Kennedy and it is a devastating indictment. Now, I suppose the Democrats will issue a pamphlet on what Republicans said about Nixon over the years. Such pamphlets are not fundamental.

Thus far, the candidates have avoided fundamentals. Ordinarily this is good politics. This has long been regarded as correct technique. But it is not going to work too well in this campaign. The conditions the country faces are too serious and many of them will grow more complicated during the campaign. The people are looking for leadership. The people want a man to stand up forthright. If both candidates will note the response in the Republican convention to the excitement over the speeches of Senator Barry Goldwater and Representative Walter Judd, they will learn much of what is in the minds of our people. And if they will have a look at the current ferment in the South, they will also discover that public opinion in this country is not made by a handful of college professors and exhibitionistic businessmen and labor leaders. If ever a people did its own, individualistic thinking, it is the American people in this election.

Both candidates face one serious problem, namely, that many will not vote for either of them unless strong leadership is exhibited. The Republicans defeated both Wendell Willkie and Thomas Dewey by not voting for them. This is demonstrable by a comparison with the vote cast in those elections for local officials. The conservative Republican and the conservative Democrat constitute a sufficiently large part of the electorate to influence the outcome of the 1960 election. The conservative Republican defeated Wendell Willkie but even more so Thomas E. Dewey. He just abstained from voting for a president of the United States. This year, that can also occur in the South among the Democrats.

Richard Nixon still has to speak up and if he means to have a fighting campaign, he must, to win, fight with ideas and sincerity. Getting canned stuff from a brain trust was possible in 1932 when Roosevelt used this device; in 1960, the nation wants a man to speak for himself. The people are on to ghost-writers.

De Gaulle 'God'

No One Ever Saw French President Without Dignity Garb

PARIS, France — President De Gaulle was on vacation — but no matter. The reporter had typewriter — would travel. Perhaps the President could be visited at his resort. "Where does he swim?" This query was received with shock and awe.

"De Gaulle swim — ? Nobody has ever seen him without all his clothes!"

It is both a true story — and a parable. De Gaulle without all the garments of dignity, without the panoply of power and the aura of mystique simply would not be De Gaulle. He is greater than a man — a god! And he has brought off miracles in the short history of the Fifth Republic.

His finest miracle, still largely unrecognized and uncelebrated, is the use he has made of France's very recent atomic capability. Two atomic bombs have been fired off in the French Sahara amid general lamentations. More fallout in the air! More armament, hence more danger of war! But De Gaulle had also exploded the French inferiority complex. He had blown up the dungeon where France was relegated in a secondary position among allies. He had begun the restoration — and this had to be a miracle! — of the "grandeur" of France.

There was no way to know what a lucky thing this would prove for the NATO partners of France. When Mr. Eisenhower took the first tumble at the called - off Summit meeting, and continued to fall with subsequent humiliations, De Gaulle became the biggest of the Big Three, the biggest single figure in the Free World. He has been a friend in need. He has made the Western alliance stronger by doing what many considered an unfriendly deed that would weaken the alliance.

Another miracle, not very discernible from a distance, is De Gaulle's equally miraculous restoration of French economic stability. He has done this by an austerity program which says in tones that will sound to Americans like those of the late Robert Taft, "Consume less!"

The Fifth Republic is a government which, among other things, withholds products from its own people. The worth of these products is transmuted into greater production through investing heavy machinery and the like. While not popular, the austerity is acceptable in France because of De Gaulle's inspiring presence. He is described as an autocrat who never hesitates to use power, as a democrat who would never misuse it. Several months ago he appointed as Finance Minister to carry out austerity a public banker named Baumgartner whose American equivalent would be William McChesney Martin, the archconservative head of the Federal Reserve Bank.

It is easy to see why the French capitalists and military authoritarians go for De Gaulle — but no free government in France can stand without Labor support. In the Fifth Republic the working people have been severely pinched by austerity — or, at least, they think so.

From 1952 - 59 there was a 30 per cent increase in purchasing power. Under De Gaulle's austerity this trend has slowly diminished as inflation has been brought under control. Although employment in France is around 99 per cent, discount over purchasing power continues. There have been recent strikes by workers in the metal and transport industries and among many government groups which in France include teachers, tobacco and match workers as well as customs and communication employees.

Views Of Our Readers

Monroe

It is deeply regrettable, but true — and the recent national conventions of both the Democratic and Republican parties have clearly pointed up the dangerous trend — that our Federal government is moving, faster and faster, further and further away from the people. Centralized government in Washington is seriously theatening, through shameful responses to political expediency, to literally destroy our constitutional system of government.

Thomas Jefferson, surely one of the greatest men in American history, warned against the danger of centralization as early as 1822. That year, he wrote:

"If ever this vast country is brought under a single government, it will be a government of corruption."

Today, 138 years later, we realize — and even more acutely so now, in the light of the extreme platform declarations of the two national political parties — how justified Thomas Jefferson was. Unfortunately, however, not only are his warnings going unheeded, but they are being repudiated by the "ultraliberal" and "liberal" elements in both major parties, the reins of control. And now, therefore, crushing momentum is being applied to the movement tamper with our Federal system for the short-lived benefit of short-sighted politicians.

A gravely dangerous example of such heedless tinkering with our precious heritage is, of course, the reckless drive — for which both the national Democratic and Republican campaign platforms have declared full speed ahead— to push the Federal government ever further into the field of so-called "civil rights." Certain of the extremist politicians have discovered that the issue of "civil rights" has all the elements of political magic.

So, these advocates of increased Federal powers are concentrating, as all of us are well aware, not only on interference with the states' control over the franchise, but also on education and numerous other vital areas of state and local jurisdiction—attacks which, in fact, constitute assaults on the Constitution itself. Once the elections and the schools, for example, should be controlled by Washington, the centralized government, of which Thomas Jefferson warned, would be upon us.

The freedoms we enjoy will endure only so long as our Federal system endures. In order to preserve that system, we must keep the Federal government out of education — especially. We cannot allow Washington to get a foot in the door of our schools. If it should succeed in penetrating our schools, there would be no stopping point. Conceivably, all the schools throughout the United States would sooner or later be coordinated so as to turn out robots in accordance with Washington blueprints.

Admittedly, we are losing the battle now. But that does not necessarily mean we will lose the ultimate victory.

We must never lose sight of the fact that our great American heritage is worth protecting and preserving. Every generation owes it to itself to safeguard that precious heritage so that succeeding generations may be the recipients of our labors and may, too, enjoy living under the greatest form of government ever conceived by the mind of man.

Our plans, all our hopes, all our dreams — indeed our very lives — depend on the continued support and defense and maintenance of constitutional government in our country.

In the long run, we will not fail.

To the Editor:

First, I would like to take this opportunity to express one housewife's and homeowner's appreciation for the many long hours of free civic service given the citizens of Monroe by members of the Monroe - Ouachita Regional Planning Commission during the past three years. Also, I feel that the citizens of Monroe should be thankful that we have a City Council that had the foresight to create this program of planning for the future and to support the work of the Planning Commission.

As Monroe grows, we all are confronted with problems that make us more and more aware of the need for city planning—it is getting harder and harder to get downtown and back home again or to get from one side of Monroe to the other. I live in a beautiful, recently developed subdivision; but my supposedly residential street is becoming a highway between two developing commercial districts. This could have been avoided if we had the benefit of city planning at the time the subdivision was started.

I am most concerned with the report I just read in your paper indicating that the zoning plan prepared by the Planning Commission does not meet with the approval of all the members of the council and that as a result, Monroe citizens must continue to wait for the many protections provided for in such an ordinance that we have needed so long.

I for one, was pleased to learn that one of the jobs of the Planning Commission was to draw up a zoning ordinance for Monroe. Now that the commission has completed that job and public meetings to explain their work held, I would like to publicly encourage the City Council to clear up the differences of opinion on the ordinance and adopt zoning for Monroe as soon as possible and also encourage my fellow citizens to get behind the Planning Commission's efforts and let the council know that the people of Monroe are in favor of zoning.

Death Of Rogers

Famous American Humorist Killed In Crash 25 Years Ago

From the time I first had a newspaper office in Washington and as long as he lived Will Rogers made that office pretty much his headquarters while in the national capital.

My recollections of this cowboy philospher are many. The first is of the time he came into this one room office in the old Washington Post Building during World War I. He wanted to read an account of the death of an old Oklahoma friend in the Tulsa World, of which I was the Washington correspondent. He was appearing at the time either in a Ziegfeld show or in vaudeville.

I recollect that President Wilson had come to see the show. He thought Wilson was the greatest statesman in the world — a belief from which he never receded. Rogers was Wilson's favorite comedian. He proudly told how Wilson had gone all the way to Baltimore to see his show a year or two before. Rogers was at that time 37 or 38 years old, I would judge, and did not have the wide Washington acquaintance he came to have.

Will Rogers stayed in my office an hour or two on that first visit. My home was in Amarillo, Texas. He told me how at 17 years of age he went there looking for a job on a cattle ranch. He told me the story of a spotted dog which did tricks in an Amarillo saloon. It was a most delightful story, but it would require more than a column of space to tell it. That story of the dog was the only one I ever heard him repeat. It was always a great pleasure to hear him tell of the philosophy he learned from a homeless canine.

Two or three weeks more than twenty - five years ago Will Rogers came into my office in the National Press Building. As he was leaving he picked up a history of cattle ranches in the southwest and said he wanted to take it with him. When I demurred he said he would finish the book on a long plane trip he was taking and return it to me.

That was the first time I ever saw Will Rogers. I went to Union Station with him. He no longer liked to ride on railroad trains, but weather conditions made flying impossible. He had become a great devotee of flying. He was preparing for a trip with Wiley Post, who like Rogers was an Oklahoman, and one of the nation's most famous flyers. He never returned from that trip.

Twenty - five years ago Will Rogers and Wiley Post were instantly killed when Post's plane nosed over on a take - off from an icy inlet in the Arctic Ocean. Only a lone Eskimo saw the tragedy which ended the life of the best - loved American of his day and his aviator friend at Point Barrow, Alaska.

I well remember Rogers' first airplane flight. It was arranged in my one - room Washington Post Building office. By that time the Milwaukee Sentinel was among the newspapers I represented and Brig. General William Mitchell, a Milwaukean, was frequently in my office. Mitchell in his effort to get support for the air service of the Army was getting into trouble with higher-ups.

Rogers came into the office. Mitchell tried to persuade him to take a trip with him in an open-cockpit plane. Rogers replied: "If God had meant for me to fly he would have put wings between my shoulders." But he finally agreed and the next day Mitchell flew Rogers around Washington. That night Mitchell got word he had been demoted from brigadier general to colonel and a few months later he was court martialed. He and Will Rogers remained close friends.

I remember the day Rogers came to my office to tell me he had slept in the White House the night before. President Coolidge had sent a limousine for him and told him he wanted him to be his guest.

SOME AIRPORTS TOO SMALL

Jet Age Is Off With Roar; Many People Not Prepared

EDITOR'S NOTE—Ready or not the jet age has taken off with a roar. And a lot of people aren't ready. While the skies fill with the huge airliners, many cities find their airports too small, Homeowners near airports can't stand the jet noise and the airlines are finding it hard to stir up a market for second-hand prop liners, cheap.

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have far to fly, go by jet.

That appears to have become the practice of the traveling public, from President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon to the vacationing family next door.

In the little more than a year and a half that jet transportation has been available, the streamlined sky giants have skimmed off the cream of the air travel market.

The jets have virtually driven their piston engine competition off the long-range flight schedules, and they are rapidly stealing away passengers on the shorter routes. Yet with all this success have come severe headaches for operators, manufacturers and airports—everybody, in fact, except the passengers.

The air tourist has discovered the joys of flying from coast to coast in five hours or less, in an airplane free of vibration and relatively noiseless. The eight-hour trip in the old propeller-driven DC7s and Super Constellations by contrast now seems too long and tiring.

This summer all but three of the major airlines operating across the Atlantic have been flying jets. Pan American alone is operating 100 jet flights a week between the United States and Europe, just twice as many as last summer.

The public lined up for jets almost as fast as they appeared in service. The Air Transport Assn. says that in 1958 less than 1 per cent of U.S. scheduled airline passenger miles were flown by jet planes. In the first three months of this year, jets accounted for a whopping 25 per cent.

Pan American was the first U.S. Airline to fly a jet. Its first 707 flew from New York to London Oct. 26, 1958. During the first six months of 1959, the 707s operated at an incredible 90 per cent of capacity.

By the end of 1959, a total of 85 U.S. jets had been delivered to eight airlines. Turboprops such as Britain's Viscount and the U.S. Lockheed Electra and Fairchild F27—planes using their jet engines to drive propellers, thus operating more economically but at lower speeds than the pure jets—totalled 219. By the end of last month, total pure jets in operation by U.S. airlines had reached 169.

Esso Export Corp., which has been keeping tab on jet use around the world, says 638 U.S., British and French pure jet transports have been ordered by 49 airlines in 30 countries. More than 200 are now in service with 28 airlines. In addition, some 800 turboprops have been ordered. The total airline investment in planes to be delivered through 1964 is almost four billion dollars.

At their introduction, pure jets jumped passenger plane speed from the 360 m.p.h. of the DC7 to 590 miles per hour. New models have speeds substantially over 600.

Pure jet operators are proud to point out there has not been a single fatal crash of a U.S. passenger jet on a scheduled flight.

The civil aeronautics board, in a study of jet operations to date, says: "Together with a substantial increase in payload, the added jet speed is an important factor in increasing the productivity potential of the jets to truly revolutionary levels. In turn, this higher productivity makes possible lower unit costs, which in the long run should tend to pull down passenger fares and cargo rates."

Glowing statements like this do little, however, to cheer airline cost accountants, plane manufacturers, airport managers — even the airline crews. While bringing the customer dividends in speed and comfort, the jets have generated no end of problems.

Cost, for example.

Competition of jets has accelerated the rate of obsolescence for piston-engine aircraft, which airlines had not expected they would have to retire so quickly.

The airlines must try to sell DC7s, which came on the market in 1953 at 2½ million dollars each, to buy 707s and Douglas DC8s at over 5 million dollars each.

Orval R. Cook, president of the Aerospace Industries Assn., says that even though they dominate the world jet and propjet market, U.S. manufacturers "because of very high research and development costs, are suffering a loss on every aircraft delivery.

"Unless there are additional sales, the prospect that the break-even point ever can be reached is not promising."

Another drawback is that the jets have voracious appetites at best. Half the weight of a fully fueled jet plane is kerosene.

At 31,000 feet on a standard day a 707 will burn up 70,000 pounds of fuel on a flight from New York to San Francisco.

Ray M. Dunn, TWA vice president for technical services, said jets cost about three times as much as piston-engine transports to buy, operate and maintain, and earn only 3½ times as much.

R. M. Adams, Pan American maintenance manager, said the 707 cost per flight hour was about 50 per cent greater than the original forecasts.

Flight crews complain the jets force them to make many more trips and work much longer than before. Says Ron Brown, president of the Flight Engineers International Assn.: "Some men are away from home as many as 26 days a month."

C. L. Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., says the most critical problem facing jet aviation is the lag in terminal area facilities as air traffic increases.

He says that of 569 airports in the U.S. certified for airline use, only 185 have instrument-landing systems and only two have complete instrument-landing systems in more than one direction.

"The jet aircraft compromised both from an efficiency and safety standpoint by inadequate airports," Sayen says.

The larger cities requiring runways from which jets can take off on their longest nonstop flights have either already built or are building runways of the required length.

Smaller cities complain that the airlines, reluctant to disclose jet plans to competitors, are playing a cat-and-mouse game and refusing to indicate the cities to which they plan to provide jet service. This in turn inhibits jet-age airport planning and construction.

E. Thomas Burnard, executive vice president of the Airport Operators Council, says medium and small-size airports are "the next ones that are going to have jet problems."

To serve these smaller airports, the airlines are planning to use smaller jets: such as the 90-passenger French Caravelle and the 72-passenger Douglas 727.

And when that day comes, the jet age will have reached out into every remote corner of this country.

BROADWAY CHATTER

Many Things Up For White Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not the least interesting of the Broadway prospects early in the new season is the impending visit of Irish playwright Brendan Behan, who is due to arrive Sept. 2 with the London Theater Workshop cast which will present his successful comedy, "The Hostage."

Behan, a bulky and tumbled-looking non-conformist, is the one who made a shambles of several performances of his own play in London in the past year by rolling into the theater under a full head of alcohol and heckling the performers and audience. His antics were met with a tolerance that certainly will not be accorded him here, should he try to repeat them.

In fact, producers Leonard S. Field and Caroline Burke Swann would be well advised to guarantee with each ticket sale that the purchasers will be able to see a performance unblemished by any off-stage performance by the author. At $6.90 a seat, an American theater-goer, whether he likes the play or not in the end, isn't going to take kindly to such shenanigans.

Actually, it is difficult to imagine the staff of a Broadway theater letting a Behan demonstration get beyond the first word or two, if, indeed, he were allowed into the house at all while obviously primed for devilment.

"The Hostage" is described as a play replete with earthy fun and characters and containing many a sharp barb directed at politics, Irish-British relations and other topical matters. It is Behan's second play. His first, "The Quare Fellow," had a warm critical reception and a fairish run off-Broadway a couple of seasons ago.

The space atop the Winter Garden Theater on Broadway, which has housed several large night clubs in the past, is about to be called the Lanai, a South Pacific-type place as to decor and cuisine.

The backers have all been Broadway producers — Joseph Kipness, Monte Proser and Harry Bloonfield. Kipness at the moment is co-producer of the long-running "La Plume de Ma Tante."

Proser, who co-produced "High Button Shoes" successfully with Kipness several years ago, has become a legend in the entertainment world in much less than a lifetime. He's a fellow who isn't happy unless he is operating a night club or a restaurant. He was the original owner of the long-successful Copacabana and previously had a South Seas-type place here called the Beachcomber, to name only a couple of the many operations he has been connected with in 30 years.

The World Was The Stake In This One

THE CONSPIRATORS. By Geoffrey Bailey. Harper. $4.95.

One reason why Hitler's armies swept so deadly far and fast into Russia was, some people used to argue, that Stalin had purged the Red Army of its only able and experienced generals, in particular Tukhachevsky. That was taken as a sign of Stalin's stupidity, for shouldn't he have known war was coming, and didn't he sacrifice essential generalship to what was by his own statements to his people a piddling little conspiracy that constituted no real threat to his position?

Not so, says this author, who uses a pseudonym. There was a major plot to oust Stalin, who had only recently sufered two serious setbacks to his headlong climb to dictatorship. Hitler, who was having troubles with his own generals, was only too glad to get Stalin involved with his. While the Army purge along amounted to a horrible slaughter, there was method in the Communist's madness. And it climaxed the between-the-wars struggle for power among Russians in and out of Russia as revealed in blood-curdling detail in this book.

Bailey's story begins around 1920 with a well-to-do Russian's trip from Petrograd to Revel, now Tallinn, on what might have been an indiscreet affair with a married woman. He was Yakushev, and the Cheka, or OGPU, or NKVD, put pressure on him till he doubled his role, serving as White Russian emigre leader but also as Red spy.

It was his "Trust" that betrayed two of the chief anti-Communist agents of the 1920s, Boris Savinko and the Englishman Sydney Reilly, and may have contributed to the disappearance of Maria Schultz after a Moscow bombing attempt.

This Trust worked closely — too closely for the White Russians' good — with Wrangel's ROVS in Paris, which was headed by Generals Kutyepov and Miller. Both were kidnaped right in the middle of the capital, and smuggled out of the country right under the noses of a police force somewhat indifferent, Bailey suggests, to the fate of White Russians — the Quai d'Orsay later came stoutly to their defense. Gen. Nikolai Skoblin, who put the finger on Miller, as Miller revealed in a note he left against the chance of his disappearance, also seems to have told Heydrich of the Red Army conspiracy, though as Bailey confesses, the motivation is baffling.

There are many familiar names in this complex tale of a mammoth underground — Plevitzkaya the glamor actress, Yagoda and Yezhov, Radek the brilliant journalist, Commissar Gamarkin who began the hazardous negotiations with the Nazis, Zinovyev and Kamenev, Dzierzhinski, Kirov, Vyshinsky. This is a remarkable chronicle of diplomatic double-talk and blood-and-thunder melodrama, all played for the highest stakes — the world we live in.

Clever Satire On Politics International

PLATYPUS AT LARGE, by Emery Kelen (Dutton): A clever satire on international politics and the people who practice it. Kelen is an old United Nations hand and a veteran of the League of Nations, his caricatures of which gained wide attention. In this book he has produced a modern fable centered on Duckbill Platypus who is taken through the political jungle by wily and cynical Max Fox. The sharp drawings which pull the leg of many world figures make it an amusing work.

Fontamara; 2nd Version By Italian

FONTAMARA, by Ignazio Silone (Atheneum) — In 1930 Silone, an exile in Switzerland from Mussolini's Italy, wrote this novel of oppressed peasants, driven almost beyond hope by their landlord masters and others. Sick, lonely, and in the shadow of expected death, Silone wrote hurriedly and with the passionate conviction which characterizes all works of art. But he didn't die. He lived to return to his native land after World War II. Contemplating his work of 15 years earlier, he felt that he must do it over. This is the second version. There is the same cast of characters as in the first version, but the accent has shifted from the agonized peasants to the man Berardo, who emerges as a latter-day saint against the background of a people floundering in misery and finding no deliverer.

Ancient Rome Present Italy

THE ORIGINS OF ROME. By Raymond Bloch. Praeger. $6.50. VIEW - HUNTING IN ITALY. By Sidney and Allyn Bloeme. Dresser - Taplinger. $6.50.

Latins, Sabines and Etruscans; Aeneas, Anchises and Lavinia; Romulus and Remus; Tarquin and Lucretia; Horatius and Lars Porsena; the Horatii and the Curiatii — how many names does ancient Rome conjure up to attract the modern traveler!

Romans date their history from B. C. 753 — or 747 — when Romulus marked out the line of the city walls with a plowshare. But it is only Romans left now, as indeed it has been for 20 centuries; and it's natural that they exaggerate their own role in the development of the Italian peninsula, and fill in to their own satisfaction the gaps left by time. Increasingly, new discoveries furnish new information or a check against legend, and they are surveyed here excitingly and authoritatively by Frenchman Bloch.

There was an Aeneas known in 500 B.C.; wolf-priests sanctified the place where the twins were brought up; Etruscans and Romans were rivals. But it seems likely Rome grew more slowly than we have supposed. One illustration shows an earth stratification cut down some 16 feet with 25 different layers betraying as many stages in Rome's history from the Iron age to medieval times. Rome started a bit later than other ancient societies, but developed not in isolation but along with the rest of the peninsula. Bloch considers the prehistoric peoples, the legends and their reliability, language, law and religion, down to about 450 B.C.

Switches From Humor To Field Of Romance

THE HANDS OF CORMAC JOYCE. By Leonard Wibberley. Putnam. $2.95.

On a low island off the County Galway shore, young Jackie Joyce can't help thinking what great strong hands his father has, and how puny and weak are his own. He dips them into Saint Brendan's well to make them bigger; he'd like to help his father more when they row out against the Atlantic swells to their net and lobster pots, and he'd like pretty Eilis Conneeley to admire him.

And right now as this short novel opens, he's going to need to be as mighty as a full-grown man: The nets are empty when they should be full, vast twittering flocks of unknown birds come sweeping in from the west, the swells rise higher, the ocean takes on a fearful glassy look, a terrible storm is brewing. The Coast Guard takes the Conneeleys to the mainland, but the Joyces, father, mother and son, stay on, and so does the small island's only other family, the old Reeces.

Wibberley, best known for his humor, gives us here a fine romantic picture of overpowering wind and tide beating at humans who will not be overpowered, and of a boy and his love for a girl.

Admiral H. G. Rickover

Ex Navy Chief Hits U. S. School System

EDITOR'S NOTE — Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover, the father of the atomic submarine, has long been noted as a leading critic of U.S. educational trends. In the following article, he sums up his viewpoint and philosophy.

By VICE ADM. H. G. RICKOVER

WASHINGTON (AP) — We and we alone among all modern democracies have devalued our educational currency.

We have down-graded the high school diploma to a point where it does not even promise competence in elementary subjects. Witness the many college freshmen who have to take remedial courses in reading, writing and arithmetic. Abroad these courses are mastered in the first eight years of schooling.

Russia's real threat to us will come through their educational and not through their military processes. Military systems and techniques are transitory — they now change every few years. An intelligent and well-educated body of citizens is something you will have forever.

This is where the Russians are smarter than we. They have recognized the full value of a good education and they are hellbent on giving it to as many of their youngsters as they can coax into taking it.

This is about the best comparison I can make: almost half of Russia's children, graduating at 17 after but 10 years of schooling, do as well — by the record — as many of our children after 14 years of schooling, two of them in college.

Neither I nor other critics have ever recommended that we take over the Russian educational system. We do urge that we consider Russian educational achievements as the minimum standard for our own educational objectives.

We warn it would be suicidal if we allowed scholastic levels in our schools permanently to drop below this minimum standard. We flatly reject the claim that since ours is mass education it must, therefore, be mediocre, or that democratic education can never be as good as education in an authoritarian state.

What I have said about Russia applies even more so to the Western European nations.

Abroad, a liberal education comparing favorably with what Americans acquire in 16 years of school and college takes from 12 to 13 years. Europeans are by that much ahead of Americans when they begin to study for a "learned" profession, such as medicine or law.

I find it personally humiliating that most European universities demand a bachelor of arts degree of Americans wishing to matriculate, while they admit all Europeans with a "maturity" certificate which is obtained at the end of the higher secondary school. This school achieves these superior results through better teaching, better curriculum, much tougher classroom work and homework, and early separating of the talented child from the average.

We seem bemused by the claims of the educationists that it is "undemocratic" for other Western nations to separate their children after elementary school, and to put them into different types of secondary schools according to their mental abilities and vocational aims.

We do not say it is "undemocratic" that nurses go to nursing school and doctors to medical school, and that each obtains a different diploma. Nor do we send enlisted personnel to the same schools as officers.

Why do we get angry at Europeans for weeding out the dullards from the talented children and sending them to separate secondary schools? What good would it do the dullards to be admitted to a school where they would just sit around and understand nothing? What does it benefit them to be given diplomas which stand for nothing but a given number of hours spent sitting at a school desk?

What is democratic about penalizing God-given talent by letting it go to waste so average children won't feel a sense of inferiority?

It may be beguiling in theory to think of all our children going to school together. But will it really serve their best interests to send them to schools where the child with an IQ of 70 sits beside one with an IQ of 170, and where the morally weak child freely associates with the child who has been carefully raised to distinguish right from wrong and to distinguish right from wrong and to conduct himself responsibly?

This makes no sense to me. Obviously, no child will receive an education best suited to his abilities and vocational aims in such a school; nor will the bright child develop admiration and respect for the dullard, or the potential young delinquent profit from associating with well-brought-up children.

It is far more likely that the dullard will be frustrated, the bright child bored, the average child never challenged mentally, the good child corrupted by the young ne'er-do-well, and everyone's manners and mores down graded to a dead level of mediocrity.

Do we want the services of doctors, lawyers, engineers and other professionals? Well, we won't get them unless we provide a proper schooling for those of our children who are willing and able to become professionals.

To say this is advocating that only an "elite" shall be well educated while the rest of our children receive an inferior education, making them forever hewers of wood and carriers of water, is highly irresponsible demagoguery.

To me there is nothing more important than to change our educational system in such a manner that it will provide the best possible education for every child: slow, average and talented.

Improving our schools will be no easy matter. But the dollars you spend on education are the cheapest dollars you can spend, even if some of them are wasted. They are by far the cheapest dollars, and they give the greatest return.

There is much evidence, however, that the education dollars buys less really good schooling in the United States than in any other country in the world. I am sure we could make great improvements simply by spending more wisely and efficiently the funds we now have. But money alone won't do it. It will also require much thought and effort.

As an engineer would say the first thing we must do is set up specifications: what we want our high school graduates to know when they finish at the age of 18. The minute you do that, you put courses in etiquette and baton twirling in their proper place; you begin to see that perhaps you ought not to pay an athletic coach a higher salary than a teacher of trigonometry.

We allow ourselves to be frightened by arguments that setting national standards would mean federal tyranny over education. In view of our professed fear of the federal government, we could not at the present time set up compulsory national standards.

But there is nothing in our form of government to prevent Congress from setting up some sort of commission or council and giving it the task of working out different sets of educational goals for our public schools.

The schools could disregard them if they so wished, and if the parents in the community did not force them to pay attention. But, by having a national set of standards, everyone could judge where the local school stood.

We could get a statement of policy: "This is what we think is a good education." Such a statement would give the parents a yardstick by which to measure what their children should learn and have learned in school.

Isn't the honest labeling of educational diplomas as important as the honest labeling of drugs? We regulate what goes into people's mouths, why can't we even recommend what goes into their heads?

The distinction between education and training is not thoroughly understood. When you teach a boy how to operate a lathe you are training him, you are not educating him. Training does not develop the mind. Education is a process by which the mind is developed.

It is in education—that is, in transmitting the fundamentals of knowledge, in developing the ability to think—that we fall down. Too much of our so-called education is mere training in various kinds of know-how.

In the United States it is quite possible that, left to his own devices, a potentially talented child may squander his best learning years on easy know-how courses which require no homework but which earn him the same credit toward a high school diploma as academic subjects. But in Russia, since all children tackle academic subjects, anyone who shows promise in one or another area of knowledge will be discovered early.

To allow a child to choose typewriting instead of physics, or machine shop instead of history or a foreign language, is to let a minor make a decision which will effect the whole course of his future life, a decision he is too young to make intelligently.

Frills, know-how subjects and snap courses may seem agreeable to our children today, but they shortchange the children for the future. They will have to live in a world where other people are better educated than they. The world outside the United States is being transformed so rapidly and so completely that we cannot afford to stand still.

In their enthusiasm for gigantic schools and democratic togetherness, American educationists overlook the difficulty of conducting under the same roof such varied enterprises as life adjustment training, leisure-time activities, vocational training and serious basic education—especially when the choice lies with the child as to which course he will take.

How can we expect children to choose higher mathematics when their classmates are having fun learning how to play canasta, cook or find a mate? Why should an eighth grader tackle a hard subject when next door the kids are happily whizzing through a course in "home and family living?" Why should he take tough examinations, when others get promoted on the basis of true-false tests posing such "difficult" problems as "Should boys use deodorants?" or "Can one use cake soap for shampooing?"

In other modern democracies, vocational subjects are to some slight extent taught in the schools attended by children who are not academically talented, but they are never considered a substitute for general education. In this country we stop teaching basic subjects to slow learners too soon, we shift them too early from education into training.

What has happened in America is that many parents have abdicated their responsibilities and have let the schools assume them. The progressive educationists have been more than willing to take over these responsibilities. In fact, some of them think the school should be responsible for the "whole child." They say they will produce a "well-rounded" child.

LIBYAN OIL BOOM

Black Gold Changes Small African Nation's Economy

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Everywhere you turn in spacious Libya these days there's an oilman at your elbow. Or some salesman in pursuit of an oilman's money.

Many—if not most—of them are Americans.

This vast, sandy country, once little more than a blank on the map of North Africa, is suddenly bursting at the seams with oil.

The boom is on, the sky's the limit and no one knows where it will all stop.

Literally thousands of oilmen, experts, specialists and technicians are pouring into Libya to explore or exploit petroleum. The Americans alone will bring 100 million dollars with them this year to spend in this once penniless nation.

It happened virtually overnight.

No one even began looking for oil in Libya until five years ago, when firms were spurred by Libya's 1955 petroleum law. The first oil was found only two years ago, a relatively small producer at Atshan, just west of the frontier with French Sahara.

Then, about a year ago, Standard Oil of New Jersey (Esso) brought in the first major well on the parched desert in western Cyrenaica about 150 miles from the coast. As if this were a signal, other companies, most of them American, began striking oil in rapid succession.

Tripoli and Libya will never be the same again.

Oilmen, still groping to evaluate the scope of their sudden discoveries believe their new underground pools of high-grade petroleum rival the fabulous strikes in the Middle East some three decades ago. Many rate Libya ahead of Iraq and Iran, perhaps on a par with Saudi Arabi in portential reserves.

The strike has had major political effects. Up to a year ago there was a tendency for Libya to look toward Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic as the road to Libya's future.

Now, with oil money in sight if not in hand, the Libyans, like the Iraqi and Saudi Arabians, want to keep it all to themselves. No one talks seriously of union with the U.A.R. any more.

The ancient city of Tripoli is busting at its sandy seams. Planes, hotels, offices, restaurants are jammed. So are the streets.

Americans, whose ancestors once waded onto the beaches of this country to stamp out the Barbary pirates, again are swarming ashore, this time to help develop Libya's new-found wealth.

There are now 3,000 Americans in Libya connected in one way or another with oil. Every ship or plane at Tripoli or Benghazi has its quota of new arrivals. It's like Oklahoma or Texas in their heydays. Telephone lines from Tripoli crackle with calls to and from Rome, London, Paris, New York, Kuwait and Adaban.

Because the picture changes so rapidly, accurate up-to-the-minute statistics are unavailable. But at the beginning of summer 13 companies including 11 American had brought in 29 proven wells.

Throughout all Libya, 24 hours a day under searing heat sometimes reaching 125 to 150 degrees in the shade, oilmen are conducting the greatest oil exploration in history.

There will be 50 drilling rigs in Libya at year's end. In Kuwait there were never more than six, Saudi Arabia never more than 12.

To give an idea how seriously the oil companies take all this, it's estimated that it costs $10,000 a day to keep a drilling rig in operation here. Seismic crews, of which there are at least 40, cost $3,000 to $5,000 daily. One American company has budgeted 45 million dollars for Libya operations this year.

The Libyan fields are 1,000 miles closer to the West than the pipelines of the Near East and are free of the Suez bottleneck, a tremendous economic and political advantage for the West.

Oilmen are engaged in a gamble in a desperate race against time. Under Libyan law, the holder of an oil concession must surrender one-fourth of territory after five years, another quarter after three more years. Ten years after the original grant there must be a further reduction.

This forces the oil companies to make some sudden-death decisions.

The pressure is intense with 18 companies already in the field and some 35 others, mostly American, eagerly awaiting a turn at bat.

As might be expected, the rumor marts of Tripoli are rife with talk of bribes and political scandal.

While others are searching, two companies that have already found oil—Esso and Oasis—are planning pipelines to the coast and hope to begin marketing their oil by 1962.

The government, planning ahead for its oil revenues, has taken Iraq as a model. It has established a development board to handle long-range projects which will receive 70 per cent of oil revenues. Several Iraqi refugee technicians are advising the government.

Experts say, however, that it will be at least two years before oil royalties begin to flow in. And it will be another three years before exploration costs are paid offf and the big income pours in.

But Libyans are already looking for income and focusing on raising the rent on Wheelus Field, a U.S. Air Force Base.

"We simply want more money," said a government official who denied Libya wanted the base evacuated.

The oil boom has healed the running feud between the provinces of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and its revenues promise to make the country independent of American and British aid, which has supported the tottering regime since World War II.

The men who do the actual work of bringing in the wells are mostly old hands who work for drilling corporations who in turn are under contract to the oil firms.

Stephens, a bluff and hearty Texan in his mid-40s, has crews on about a dozen locations anywhere from 200 to 500 miles away. At the moment they are working for three oil companies.

They operate in the midst of an immense sea of sand with dunes up to 500 or 600 feet high. At spots, the sand is 1,000 feet deep. The drills just keep going down through sand until they bite into solid earth or rock. And then oil.

Of Stephens' workers, about 60 are Americans and virtually all of them from Texas, Oklahoma or Louisiana. There are about 90 other non-Libyans including Italians, Lebanese and Maltese.

Off duty, they live and sleep in air-conditioned trailers which, like everything else, have been airlifted in segments to the drilling locations.

Except for the French operations in neighboring Algerian Sahara, this is the first time men of European extraction have attempted to work around the clock through the summer of the Africa desert.

Air-conditioning and the airplane are the keys. The men spend three weeks on the job and then fly to Tripoli for a week off.

THEORIES ADVANCED

Scholars Of Religion Eye 'Space Theology'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious scholars today are pondering a new subject—"space theology."

Clerics of various denominations lately have been theorizing about spiritual relationships to possible human beings on far-off worlds.

Some church groups even have foreseen the eventual prospect of sending missionaries to the strangers in the stratosphere.

Father Daniel C. Raible of Brunnerdale Seminary, Canton, Ohio, says science indicates there could be billions of human races inhabiting other planets of the universe.

QUESTION

But what are they like? assuming they are human, he said, it follows that they have soul and body.

"But that doesn't settle the matter," he writes in the current Jesuit weekly 'America.'

"Theologians commonly hold that it would have been possible for God to create mankind in one of four different conditions."

He cites these four possible types of other-worldly humans that may exist:

1. Those in a "state of pure nature." They would have all the qualities of a rational animal, and also the weaknesses and woes of flesh, but would lack divine revelation or supernatural aids such as those given earth men.

Their destiny would lie in "the natural law of God," similar to that of an infant who lies without grace or awareness of God.

2. Those in a condition of "integral nature." They would have attributes of a rational animal, plus preternatural gifts—such as those given angels. They might have "infused knowledge" — that is, be born with great knowledge, instead of having to struggle for it. They might be free of sickness, accident and discord, and pass into eternity without death.

3. Those in a "supernatural state." Although material beings, they also would have privileges partaking of divinity. They would have special insights and aids for their exalted destiny — one in which they would be capable of "quasi-divine acts," and know God as he knows himself. However, they could lose their gifts by infidelity to God.

INNOCENCE

4. Those in a "state of innocence." This is a limited combination of the supernatural and intregal-nature conditions, identical to that in which Adam and Eve lived before their rebellion—free of disease, ignorance and death. Races staying in this category would have "civilizations and cultures that far outstrip our own."

However, Father Raible says, if those either in the state of innocence or supernature fall — as Adam and Eve did—they could be left in a fallen state, forever denied their supernatural end, or God out of mercy could redeem them.

It is possible that for this purpose Christ has become a member of other races as well as our own, Father Raible said. "conceivably we may learn in heaven that there has been not one incarnation of God's son but many."

But the atonement would not need to "be carried out exactly as ours was," Father Rabile said.

"Since any free act of a God-man—a mere sigh, a tear, a breath—would, as an act of infinite worth, be more than sufficient to atone for all the sins of any possible race, it would not at all be necessary for him to undergo the privations, poverty, rejection, suffering and death by Crucifixion that Christ endured for us."

On the other hand, Father Raible said, the redemption could be by still other means.

God could simply "forgive the transgression and re-elevate the race to its previous dignity," without demanding any atonement at all, or he could demand only "partial satisfaction for the offense," perhaps by one or more representatives of the race.

"Were He, however, to demand a satisfaction commensurate with the offense, (as was done with earth man) it would have been necessary for God himself to become man and atone for the sin of the race. Sin, an offense against an infinite being cannot be fully atoned except by an infinite atoner."

'Year Of Laity' Voted By Church Group In Cuba

The Cuba Methodist Conference has voted that the coming 12 months will be a "Year of the Laity," and has set goals in the fields of evengelism, Christian education and lay service in the church.

Meeting in Havana, the conference heard reports indicating that the churches have pledged more than the $100,000 (Cuban), which had been sought to launch the "forward movement" voted at the 1959 conference.

GOALS

During the "Year of the Laity," Cuban Methodists will be asked to reach these goals: Fifty new local (lay) preachers, 500 laymen who will pledge to try to win five persons each to church membership, 500 persons who will try to take 10 children to Sunday school regularly.

A new program of lay volunteer service was authorized, in which 50 layment will be sought to give two years of service to the church in needy areas of Cuba. These workers will receive only maintenance (food, lodging, etc.) as pay. They will be supported from "forward movement" funds and will be trained in short courses.

Indian Sisters

Week Revival Is Scheduled At Parkview

Dr. James W. Taylor, former Air Force chaplain, will lead the Parkview Baptist Church in a week of revival services beginning Monday evening and continuing through Sunday, August 28. Weekday services are scheduled for 7 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. daily.

Dr. Taylor is pastor of the Highland Baptist Church, Shreveport, where he has served for nearly four years. Prior to his present pastorate he was, for eight years, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Grand Prairie, Texas. During World War II, Dr. Taylor spent three years on active duty as an Air Force chaplain.

This will mark the first revival in the new Parkview auditorium, which was completed last November. The Parkview church is located at 1001 Forsythe Avenue in Monroe.

American Workers' Income At New High As Economy Whirls

There were some good developments and some not so good.

American workers are making more money than ever before. The government reported that personal income of individuals climbed in July to a record annual rate of 407 billion dollars.

This was about one billion dollars above June. A federal pay increase and an upturn in construction were mainly responsible. Manufacturing payrolls and farm income declined.

Industrial production maintained a steady pace in July after dipping in June. The Federal Reserve Board's index of output by mines, factories and utilities stood at 109 per cent of the 1957 average.

SLUMP

Home building has slumped and little or no improvement is expected this month. In July the starts of private homes dropped to an annual rate of 1,173,000 units, about 10 per cent below the June rate.

Soft spots in the economy brought on widely scattered layoffs. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad put 10 per cent of its clerical forces on indefinite furloughs. Union Pacific Railroad laid off 1,200 workers. Hotpoint division of General Electric Co. in Chicago will drop 109 employes in the next two weeks. Lone Star Steel Co. of Texas plans to lay off between 1,500 and 2,000 beginning Aug. 26.

On the other hand, Republic Steel Corp. recalled 350 workers to reopen its pipe mill at Gadsden, Ala.

Steel production was scheduled to inch up to 55.8 per cent of capacity from last week's 53.5 but a strike at U.S. Steel Corp. threatened to put a crimp in the situation.

WALKOUT

A walkout by U.S. Steel's railroad employes caused closing of five mills in the Pittsburgh area, idling thousands of other workers. These plants account for about seven per cent of the industry's total production.

There was no indication when the industry might turn the corner with a spurt in the operating rate. Orders for September still are weak.

Bond sales totaled $23,894,000 par value on the stock exchange compared with $24,655,000 last week and $21,811,000 a year ago.

AUTOS LOW

Automobile output slumped to its lowest level of the year—approximately 43,000 passenger cars. But that wasn't unexpected because the makers are deep in the business of changing over to 1961 model production.

Dealers sold 156,050 new U.S. made cars in the first 10 days of August. This wasn't as good as expected but was 13 per cent above the corresponding June period and one-half of one per cent higher than a year ago.

The explosive management situation at Chrysler Corp. erupted twice during the week. Chrysler filed a suit against Detroit businessman Ben Stone in connection with his dealings with the corporation and its former president, Williams C. Newberg. Newberg resigned earlier and agreed to turn over to Chrysler $450,000 in profits from his interest in firms selling supplies to Chrysler.

Chrysler hired a New York law firm headed by Thomas E. Dewey to determine the adequacy of Chrysler's own investigation of conflict of interests among its executives.

FASHIONS

Women became more interested in the fall fashions and helped boost retail trade to a slight gain over a year ago.

Three more federal reserve banks—Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis—were authorized to cut their discount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent. Of the 12 reserve banks, only those at Boston, Dallas and San Francisco had yet to reduce the rate of interest they charge borrowing member banks.

FTC Warning On 'Guarantee' Abuses Issued

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) warned U.S. businessmen Saturday to halt phony "guarantee" abuses or face prosecution.

It said in a statement that companies must explain what is guaranteed and who is standing behind a product even on a 10-second radio or television commercial or a one-inch newspaper ad.

FTC officials rejected pleas of advertisers who claimed that it was not possible to spell out details of a guarantee on such a brief broadcast or in a short ad.

"The principal fault of advertising of guarantees has been the reluctance of advertisers to state precisely what the guarantee covers," said FTC Chairman Earl W. Kintner.

WALL STREET REPORT

Market Substantially Down As Trading Goes Into Slump

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market needed an advance in the last session to lift it on the plus side for the week.

The Friday advance on averages was the tenth in the last 12 sessions, and also marked the twelfth consecutive session that more stocks advanced than declined.

The market in general was rather hesitant this week with trading slowing down substantially from the previous week. Maket technicians note, however, that it is only natural for the list to take its time after two weeks of almost uninterrupted advance.

Most of the trading community is pleased that the market has been able to make such progress in the face of the economic and foreign news background.

STATUS

It is this unchanged status of the news background that makes most of the market experts hesitant to forecast a sharp and sustained rise at this juncture.

The general consensus on Wall Street is for the stock market to move out of its summer doldrums and trend upward, but not until domestic business activities pick up.

There were not many signs of this happening this week. Steel production improved slightly but Iron Age magazine said the timetable for a significant upturn in output has been set back again because new steel orders at some mills are lower than they were just two weeks ago. Nevertheless, the magazine said, an upturn in mill business still is on the way.

STRIKE

Giant U.S. Steel Corp. was hit by a strike of its Union Railroad subsidiary which already has idled about 30,000 steel workers and prospects for an early settlement appear slim.

Railroad shares advanced in 11 out of the last 12 sessions. Union Pacific, however, blotted this performance with the announcement that it has reduced its work force by approximately 1,200 workers because of lower revenues and earnings.

Utilities edged up in 10 of the past 11 sessions to their best level on average since June 7, 1930.

The announcement by the government of record gross national product in the second quarter, steady industrial production in July and record personal income in July failed to stimulate investor interest.

Disclosure of a rise in short interest on the "big board" to the highest level since mid - May helped improve sentiment slightly on Friday. A large short interest represents additional buying which must be done eventually.

SALES SLIP

Sales this week slipped to 13,702,603 shares, or a daily average of 2,740,520 shares, from 11,699,940, or an average of 2,939,988 shares per day the week before.

American Motors, which announced new styling changes and forecast a 26 per cent jump in sales of its 1961 models, was the sales leader with volume of 328,700 shares. It closed up 1⅞ at 23½.

Avco, helped by a good earnings report, was runner-up with sales of 300,000 shares, and finished up 15¼ to 16⅞. General Motors, Lockheed and Glen Alden rounded out the top five.

The Dow Jones averages at the close Friday showed 30 industrials up 3.09 points on the week to 629.27; 20 rails up 1.38 to 139.73, 15 utilities up 1.48 to 95.53, the best since 96.03 on June 7, 1930; and 65 stocks up 1.17 to 203.95.

Policy Shifts Are Tried By Oil Company

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. this week took another step in its program to take day-to-day operations problems out of the hair of its policy makers and planners.

A marketing department responsible for 36,000 service stations in the United States is being transferred from Gulf's Pittsburgh, Pa., haedquarters to Houston.

SIMILAR

Similar transfers by production and manufacturing (refining) departments were made last year.

This means the bulk of Gulf's domestic operations now radiates out of Houston. Foreign operations are supervised from area offices at London, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Caracas, Venezuela.

Pittsburgh executives map policy and objectives, provide the necessary money and tools, and give grass-roots personnel sufficient authority to get the job done.

Should a Pittsburgh policy fail to apply on the local level, an operating man, in an emergency, can make his own immediate decision and advise Pittsburgh later.

The broad reorganization by Gulf got its start several years ago when the board of directors instructed that operating management be delegated authority at the level the operation is being performed.

Since then, President William K. Whiteford, from time to time, has described the program with these comments:

ADVICE

"We want to advise our men without making them so afraid of mistakes they will be afraid of decisions."

"Our idea of organization is not that of a corset to confine the activities of our people. . .

"It is a guide to assure them they have at all times the necessary tools, responsibility and authority to do at their level of management what they think is in the best interest of the company."

"We're giving the man with the power to say 'Yes' or 'No' the authority to say it directly to the man who can carry it out."

Objectives of the program are numerous — efficiency, flexibility, growth, training of future executives.

Selection of Houston for domestic marketing headquarters was interpreted by some as indication Gulf intends eventually to have retail outlets in all 50 states.

Gulf currently has outlets in 38 states. Missing areas include 10 western states, Hawaii and Alaska. Steps already have been taken to boost the outlet area to 41 states.

REVIEW GIVEN

Small Car Idea Was Tried 30 Years Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE — Companies have been trying to interest the public in smaller cars off and on for 30 years. Here is a review of some of the earlier attempts.

By BEN PHLEGAR
Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The slogan read "Nearly a ton less to start, stop, park and pay for" and the literature also advised that this car is "big enough, but not too big."

This sounds mighty familiar if you've followed the very recent trend to smaller automobiles. But those slogans are 30 years old. They came with America's first really small car, the American Austin.

At the peak of the boom year of 1929 the American Austin Car Co. was incorporated as a subsidiary of the Austin Co. of England to build an Americanized version of the English Austin 7.

The Automotive Daily News, commenting on the project in September 1929, said it would be interesting to see if car buyers of the United States would greet a smaller car with enthusiasm.

"If so," the editorial noted, "a whole new concept in auto sales may develop."

COMMENTS

Many similar comments were made only one year ago when the compact cars of the Big Three automakers were announced.

The first American Austin was built in June 1930, at Butler, Pa., northeast of Pittsburgh. It was 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any other American car then being produced. Complete with a 14-horsepower engine, it cost $445 at the factory.

With the depression at hand, claims of 50 miles to the gallon and 40,000 miles on a set of tires sounded good. Orders at first exceeded production facilities. Official registration figures showed 4,354 of the tiny cars were sold in the first six months.

Many were snapped up for advertising promotions. Will Rogers used them for a series of escapades in King Arthur's Court in the movie "A Connecticut Yankee," a hit of 1931.

But the depression deepened. The small cars began to be ridiculed and production halted in 1934 after a total run of about 15,000. The company lost money.

AUSTIN

Just as the Austin ran into the depression, the next full-scale attempt to build and market a midget car in this country was announced on the verge of another world-shaking event, World War II.

The Crosley was put into mass production. By then it had grown in length and weight from the original model and the price was boosted from $350 to $750.

The Crosley's four-cylinder engine was produced by a new process using sheet steel rather than castings. Thin sheet steel stampings were brazed into a single piece by melting pure copper into all the joints during a one-hour oven-baking period.

In the car-short days of post-World War II, the Crosley gained considerable support and in its peak year of 1948 it sold 25,400 cars. This total was cut by more than half the next year and in 1952 Crosley went out of the auto business.

Kaiser-Frazer, another postwar automotive newcomer, turned to smaller cars in 1950 in an effort to find the key to success. A national contest offered $100,000 in prizes for naming the new car and the winning entry was Henry J., which just happened to be the first name and initial of Kaiser.

SMALLER

The Henry J., while a smaller car, never was in the midget class of the Austin and Crosley. It was built on a 100-inch wheelbase, the same as currently used on the Rambler American, and was seven inches longer over-all than today's compact Studebaker Lark. The $171 price difference between the Henry J and a Chevrolet is similar to the difference between today's standard and compact cars.

A research study by Kaiser-Frazer in October 1951 said the Henry J was drawing buyers from the used car markets, a trend very similar to what has happened with the present compact cars.

Grain Futures Rather Feeble

CHICAGO (AP)—Influences in grain futures trade were rather feeble this week and prices shifted generally within small ranges, mostly minor fractions.

For the week, net changes amounted to a cent or less except for September soybeans. Rye was the only loser.

Until Friday, the market churned against short covering and liquidation with support coming out on the setbacks and even small bulges attracting the profit takers.

LOOKS 'EM OVER

The Fading Press Box

The tri-state area of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi will be scouted for the two best teams available for the "Rebel Bowl" football game already dated for Thanksgiving Day in West Monroe High School's football stadium.

This is the word from the West Monroe Lions Club which is sponsoring the game in cooperation with high school officials, and all game profits are pre-dedicated to increasing the club's activities in the field of boys and girls' work.

Coach Cecil Parker of West Monroe High heads a committee that includes Tex Kilpatrick and Tommy Trawick in making game plans. They have fixed 2:30 p.m. Thanksgiving Day as starting time for the first annual game, assuming that promotion permission has already been obtained from the Louisiana High School Athletic Association through T. H. Waters, commissioner.

The 95-member West Monroe Lions Club, with Mayor Allan Norris as president, annually sponsors candidates to Boys State and Girls State, maintains a blood bank, participates in sight conservation, supplies college scholarships each year to three graduates of West Monroe High School, maintains a crippled child annually at a 13-day summer camp, and was a driving force in the start of the campaign for a Ward Five hospital, now in the building stage.

The club made a generous donation to help the WMHS band obtain its first uniforms when the school opened for business in 1953, gave the basketball scoreboards to both WMHS and West Monroe Junior High. In addition, upon request, the club has made available crutches, wheelchairs, adult walkers, and a record of the Bible in Braille for the blind. In the past the club has donated an incubator to St. Francis Hospital.

Such will be the benefits that can be magnified with more funds from a successful football presentation.

Except for playoff schedules for title contenders, most football is over in the area high schools by November 18, and the Rebel Bowl will offer one of the very few athletic events scheduled for this section of the state on November 24—Thanksgiving.

Enthusiasm in the Lions' project has been emphatically displayed to us by K. D. Norris and Bobby Wilson. Anyone doubting the chances of success in the promotion needs only to talk with them or any other West Monroe Lions for that matter.

The ranks of the old press box from Monroe's days in professional baseball are growing thinner.

Yesterday we said goodbye to Dave Chapman, the "old armchair athlete," a man we first met a little more than 20 years ago at a Cotton States League baseball game.

Dave was then a radio sportscaster. He followed the radio as a profession most of his life, but had engaged in real estate, and at his death Thursday was associated with the driver's license division here.

Oldtime Cotton States followers of the pre - World War Two era remember Dave as the public address operator at old Casino Park who drew a suspension from league president Emmett Harty of Greenville, Miss., for getting too zealous in his PA support of his hometown club. Dave, not some ball player, was the hero of the fans for the week of his suspension.

Crowded into the past several months has been the deaths of several men who worked the press box of professional baseball in Monroe over a span of 40 years.

Among those to turn in their park passes lately were Miller "Holly" Hollingsworth, the first sports editor and columnist we ever knew and once News - Star sports boss (we still own his old Boy Scout knapsack, bought from him for two bits near 35 years ago); Marcus Kahn, once official scorer for the Monroe club; Don Breitenmoser, a former sportscaster and accomplished musician; and Walter Briggs, a Western Union morse operator who handled baseball reports direct from the parks. Then there was George Lofton, former Morning World Sports editor and once official scorer, who died in 1952 after thirteen years off the sports beat.

But there's some of the old press box crowd around . . . Walter Veach, the "old pro" who had been a professional football and baseball player and an umpire before he retired to the room on the roof as a public address system operator . . . Ches Todd, a Western Union morse operator . . . sportscasters Lawrence Gibbs and Irv Zeidman . . . and such of PA service as Garland Moore and Hiller Hesdorffer. The demise of professional baseball here took them out of the box.

GUN OWNERS, ATTENTION

Anyone who owns sporting arms, whether shotgun, rifle, or pistol—collector's items or modern — will be interested in a relatively new publication, called Shooting Times and published once each month.

We [illegible] usually go overboard for anything like this, but David R. Wolfe, editor, says he wants every Morning World and News-Star reader who is a gun enthusiast and hunter to own a copy, no strings attached.

We possess a copy that is unique in its field, there's nothing else just like it that we know about, and we feel certain that any gun owner shelling out the cost of a post card in order to get his free copy will find it about the best bargain he ever made.

Solons Blow Lead With Errors In 9th

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two ninth-inning errors by Washington's Joe Valdivielso blew a shutout victory for Pedro Ramos and New York went on to beat the Senators 9-5 in 11 innings Saturday.

After seeing their 2-0 lead turned into a 2-5 deficit in the disastrous ninth, the Senators fought back in the bottom of the ninth to tie it at 5-5. But Moose Skowron's 23rd homer with Mickey Mantle aboard in the 11th put the Yanks ahead again and they added two more for good measure.

This tagged reliefer Chuck Stobbs with his fifth defeat against eight victories and gave the decision to Eli Grba, also in relief.

The Senators, with Earl Battey and Billy Gardner homering, seemed to have a 2-0 victory wrapped up behind Ramos with two out and nobody on in the ninth. Then Yogi Berra beat out a hit to second base and took third on Mantle's single to center. When Skowron hit an easy grounder toward short, the game-ending out seemed to be in the making.

However, shortstop Valdivielso fumbled the ball for an error, Berra scoring and Mantle sprinting to third. Elston Howard stroked a game-tying double to left, Skowron stopping at third. Then, Valdivielso, handling the relay, threw wild past catcher Battey and Skowron scored. Cletis Boyer homered off reliever Ray Moore to make it 5-2.

Singles Help Braves Blank Phillies, 1-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee right-hander Bob Buhl blanked Philadelphia on five hits for a 1-0 victory Saturday night as the Braves put together three straight singles in the fourth inning for their only run off veteran Robin Roberts.

Buhl struck out six and walked three in helping the second-place Braves remain 7½ games behind front-running Pittsburgh, which defeated Cincinnati 10-7.

The Braves managed only five singles off Roberts but three came at the outset of the fourth for the decisive run.

Tolar Paces 42-3 Rout Of Broncos

HOUSTON (AP) —George Blanda threw two touchdown passes and Charlie Tolar scored twice more as the Houston Oilers made their home debut Saturday night by walloping the Denver Broncos 42-3 before a crowd of 18,500.

The Houston Defense held Denver to a net rushing gain of only three yards in the first half as the Oilers gained their first victory in three American Football League exhibition games. It was Denver's third defeat.

Tolar, the 190-pound understudy of Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon, climaxed a pair of third quarter drives of 47 and 73 yards by carrying over from the 1. Cannon, favoring an injured knee, did not play.

Blanda, the former Chicago Bear, threw touchdown passes of 50 yards to Dave Smith and 8 yards to Johnny Carson, and kicked all six Houston conversions.

Bill Groman made a pair of spectacular pass catches for touchdowns. He took a 12-yarder from Jack Lee with a diving catch at the goal line to give Houston a 21-3 halftime lead. Then on the final play of the game he gathered in a 46-yard toss from Charlie Milstead.

Hard, Haydon Advance To Final Round

MANCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — —Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., and southpaw Ann Haydon of England—both listed as their country's No. 2 players—advanced to the final round of the Essex Country Club women's invitation tennis tournament Saturday.

In the other semifinal, Miss Haydon, 21, beat her fellow Englishwoman and doubles partner, little Deirdre Catt, 20, by a 6-3, 8-6 score.

FLASHING OLD FORM, Herb Score held Kansas City to two hits yesterday in pitching Chicago to a 3-0 victory. Score, caught here in mid-game action, showed signs of making good in his long comeback effort, striking out nine batters and walking but four. (AP Wirephoto)

PREP FOOTBALL CLASSIC

South Defeats North, 21-19, On Last-Ditch Field Goal

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Billy Lothridge, Gainesville, Ga., quarterback who will play for Georgia Tech this fall, kicked a 32-yard field goal in the final second Saturday night to give the South a 21-19 victory in the Prep All-America football game here.

With 12 seconds remaining, Jerry Rhome of Dallas, Tex., hit Billy Ganon of Dallas to give the North a touchdown and a 19-18 lead. But a pass interference ruling led to a South victory.

The North went ahead early in the second quarter when Rhome, who will play for Southern Methodist, passed 32 yards to John Whitaker, DeQueen, Ark., who sprinted the remaining 10 yards. Richard Van Raaphorst, Charlevoix, Mich., converted.

The South hit back in five minutes. Dunn, son en route to Ole Miss., capped a 59-yard march by ramming through right guard for the last yard and the tally. A pass for extra points failed.

Lothridge tried for a field goal in the first quarter from the 29, but hit the uprights and failed. Van Raaphorst tried for a field goal after another 74-yard march by the North, but was blocked by Billy Truax of New Orleans.

Late in the third period, Billy Hamic, Crowley, broke through left guard for another South touchdown and gave his team a 12-7 lead. Dunn failed to run the conversion.

Rhome fired his second successful touchdown pass to Ken Rader, Hominy, Okla., in the third quarter. He passed from the 21 into the end zone. Van Raaphorst failed to convert.

Dunn ran through left tackle 10 yards to score with 2½ minutes left in the game, ending a 61-yard march. Then as the game ran out, Rhome made his 23-yard touchdown pass to Gannon, another future Southern Methodist player, throwing the crowd into an uproar as the North led 19-18.

LEGION BASEBALL

Jordan Selected 'Most Valuable'

Mel Jordan, a slim pitcher - third baseman who almost pitched the Brown - Rivers - Scogin American Legion baseball team to the state championship, last night was named the most valuable player at a banquet honoring the squad.

Chief of police James Kelly was principal speaker for the occassion, attended by some 40 players, American Legion officials and guests.

Jordan, a Grayson import who hurled a no - hitter early in the season and posted six victories while dividing his time between the infield and the mound, led the B-R-S into the state finals.

Fiver other individual awards were handed out at the fete, in addition to a special gift to veteran coach Ralph "Red" Sims who completed his seventh year with the team.

Sheriff Bailey Grant made the most improved player to freshman pitcher, Lynn Causey. Utility player Charley Biggar was selected recipient of the sportsmanship award but was unable to attend.

Pete Dowd, master of ceremonies and a spokesman for sponsoring L. B. Faulk Post 13, gave special recognition to the efforts of Sims, the players and the parents for helping to make the season a successful one.

BEHIND HERB SCORE

Chisox Shutout Athletics, 3-0

KANSAS CITY, (AP) — Herb Score pitched Chicago to a 3-0 two hit victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday and kept the White Sox within 1½ games of the league leading New York Yankees.

The shutout was the second in a row for the White Sox over the Athletics and was the Kansas City club's tenth straight defeat.

Luis Aparicio drove in Jim Landis with the first run in the eighth inning. Landis had led off with a single and moved to second on Score's sacrifice bunt before Aparicio singled into center field.

Score, whose career was almost ended by a line drive that struck him in the eye in 1957, was threatened only by his own wildness. He walked five and heaved a wild pitch but struck out nine. Two of his bases on balls came in the ninth inning but he got Hank Bauer on a fly to center field that ended the game.

Larsen, who pitched the World Series only perfect no-hit game in the 1956, went out for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning after giving up what proved the winning run. He yielded six hits, walked one and struck out four.

A pair of walks in the opening inning with only one out gave Score his first test. He got Dick Williams on a fly to right field and Norm Siebern fouled out. Then he pitched perfect baseball through the fifth. Larsen made a bid to help his own cause with a lead-off single in the sixth, went to second on Bill Tuttle's bunt, to third on a wild pitch, and then languished there while Score got Jerry Lumpe on a pop foul before striking out Andy Carey to end the inning.

Siebern's single to center with one out in the seventh was the only other hit off Score, who won his fourth game against seven losses.

Leader Blasts Soviet Games Change Policy

ROME (AP)—Avery Brundage—in an obvious crack at the Soviet Union—Saturday night called on the world's Olympic leaders to deal cautiously with moves aimed at reforming the organization of the Games.

"There are those who would alter the structure and change the rules," said the 72-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee.

"These proposals must be examined with great care."

Russia is demanding a "more democratic" IOC with greater representation of Iron Curtain and other smaller countries.

Addressing the inaugural ceremony of the 57th IOC session, Brundage said:

"The strength of the Olympic movement and its universal popular appeal comes from certain very important fundamental principles. The first is the complete autonomy and independence of the IOC . . . whose members must be completely impartial and in a position to resist pressure from any quarter—political, religious or financial."

Brundage also called for efforts to prevent the introduction of what he called "extraneous events" to the Olympics.

Russia is known to be seeking to extend the range of sports covered by the Olympics. So are other countries, including Japan, which would like to see judo included.

Without singling out any one state or sport, Brundage asserted: "We must choose between the temple and the circus."

The wealthy Chicago hotel owner added:

"The games must never be commercialized."

On the status of athletes, he said:

"The Games must remain amateur. Amateurism is something of the spirit, intangible and difficult to define but badly needed in these materialistic times in which we live."

Jefferson Wins Dixie World Series

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP) — Jefferson Parish, La., won the Dixie World Series of Little Boys' baseball here Saturday night with a 5-2 victory over Dothan, Ala., behind Donnie Simpson's three-hit pitching.

Simpson fanned 14 Dothan batters and also starred at the plate by hitting a solo home run as the Louisiana champions finished the week-long tournament with four victories in five starts.

Jefferson Parish rapped out seven hits and took advantage of wildness on the part of four Dothan pitchers while moving ahead in the second inning and holding the lead the rest of the distance.

Mike McMoy, Neal Clary, Philip Marsh and Steve Montgomery pitched for Dothan, which finished the tournament with a 4-2 record.

VIEWPOINTS DIFFER

Why Manage? Big League Pilot Is A Strange Specie

NEW YORK (AP)—Why does a grown man, sound of body, clear of mind, and, in most cases possessor of above-average intelligence, enter the crazy, insecure business of managing a major league baseball team?

The wave of managerial switches this season prompted this question of big league pilots who so far have been able to escape the axe.

Judging by their replies, the big league manager is a strange specie. He accepts the fact on the day he is hired that, sooner or later, he will be fired. He knows from past history that the life expectancy of a major league pilot is less than three years.

He is resigned to becoming the target for criticism of the fans and press and the scapegoat of front office officials. He knows he will be blamed for the failure of his players and the loss in home attendance. He knows he's got to keep winning to stay on the job. Sometimes, even winning does not guarantee him steady employment.

Yet he spends years preparing himself for the job. He by-passes opportunities in other fields, possibly more lucrative; certainly more secure. He sacrifices his home life, spends months away from his family, is constantly on the move, in and out of trains, planes and hotels. All for what?

"It's a challenge," answered Joe Gordon, who recently figured in an unprecedented managerial swap that sent him from Cleveland to Detroit. "It's a challenge just as playing was but it's a different kind of challenge. After playing for 15 or 20 years, you want to see if you can help others to win with what you yourself have learned."

"It's a livelihood unmatched in life from a challenge standpoint," said Lou Boudreau of the Chicago Cubs. "Ever since my teammates elected me captain of my high school basketball team when I was only a sophomore and we went on to win the state championship, I have sincerely felt I possessed leadership talents and ability to instill desire and determination into the athletes at my command.

"Those were the reasons why I wrote to Mr. Alva Bradley (then president of the Cleveland Indians) after the 1941 season and asked him for the chance to manage when I was only 24. Managing is in my blood although I'll be the first to admit it isn't always a recommended tonic for your health."

"I've spent all my life in baseball and I want to stay in as long as I can and as long as I'm wanted," said Cincinnati's Fred Hutchinson. "Managing is the prime job even though it is the most hazardous."

Since 1901, there have been 321 major league managers, 173 in the National, 143 in the American. In the past five years alone, 29 managers lost their jobs. Only three—Casey Stengel of the Yankees, Walt Alston of the Dodgers and Paul Richards of the Orioles—have been with their present clubs longer than four years.

Stengel, at 70, is the oldest in years and in length of service. He has been managing the Yankees since 1949.

Swimmer Equals 100-Meter Mark

By MURRAY ROSE

ROME, (AP) — Paul Hait tied the world record for the 100-meter breaststroke in a recent time trial, it was disclosed Saturday as the Americans set the dates for swim-offs for berths on two Olympic relay teams.

Gus Stager, coach of the U.S. Men's swimming team, said Hait, a 6-1½, 200-pounder from San Jose Calif., clipped off the 100 in 1:11.5 two days ago in equaling the listed world mark set by Russia's Wladimir Minaschkin nearly three years ago.

It was another of many outstanding performances turned in by the American men and women swimmers in recent days.

The showdown for places on the men's relay team starts Sunday.

Stager said the swimoffs would run through Tuesday. At stake are places on the 400-meter medley (backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and freestyle) and the 800-meter freestyle relay teams.

Hait already has been picked for the 100-meter breaststroke leg of the medley. The backstroke leg will go to the fastest man in the Olympic individual 100 - meter backstroke. The backstroke Olympic final is Aug. 31. The two relay finals are the following day, Sept. 1.

Bob Bennett, 17, of Encino, Calif., and Frank McKinney, 21, of Indianapolis, third placer in the 1956 Olympics, are the two entrants in the backstroke.

Three world record breakers—Lance Larson of El Monte, Calif., Mike Troy of Indianapolis and Dave Gillanders of Royal Oaks, Mich.—will race Sunday for the 100-meter butterfly job.

The race for the 100-meter anchor leg on the medley squad will be held Monday in the Olympic pool. The field for this one will include Jeff Farrell, now fully recovered from appendectomy earlier this month; Larson, if he does not win the butterfly swimoff; George Harrison of Orinda, Calif., and Steve Clark of Los Altos, Calif.

Probably the keenest race of them all will be the battle royal Tuesday for the 800-meter relay berths.

"This will be a better race than you'll see in the Olympics," said Stager. "they're all toned up for this one."

About ten will go in this one, including Farrell of Wichita, Kan., Harrison, Larson, Clark, the Indianapolis trio of Alan Somers, George Breen and Mike Troy, Dick Blick of Bakersfield, Calif., Bill Darnton of Flint, Mich., and Tom Winters of La Canada, Calif.

Breen, the 25-year-old schoolteacher and third placer in the 400 and 1,500 freestyles in 1956, and his young sidekick, Somers, were elected co-captains of the men's team.

BOTH SEEKING TITLES

Brundage, Elliott Talk Of Olympics

ROME (UPI)—An old man and a young man—both of whom are seeking title—were the talk of the Olympics Saturday five days before the international games open with their usual fanfare.

One was Avery Brundage, the Gray Haired, ruddy-faced multi-millionaire from Chicago who is seeking re-election as president of the International Olympic Committee in a no-holds-barred political battle.

The other was slender Herb Elliott, the world record holder at the mile and favorite for the 1,500 meters, known as the metric mile and the glamor event of the Olympic track program.

Both were expected to be victorious.

The behind-the-scenes campaign which Brundage was waging in his bid for a third four-year term as head of the IOC—with Lord Burghley, Marquis of Exeter, as his chief opponent—broke into the open when several nations attempted to split the pro-Brundage forces by offering support to Armand Massard of France.

"Several countries invited me to stand for president," Massard confirmed. "But I will support Mr. Brundage for re-election. I do not see anyone who could stand against him."

Elliott, who arrived with the delayed Australian team, was the big man on the training scene as he jogged through the flag - bedecked Olympic athletes village.

"I'm the fittest I've ever been," said Elliott, disclosing that he would go to England after the games to take up a scholarship at Cambridge University. "I ran my fastest times ever before before leaving Australia and now all I have to do is to keep myself exercised."

Hot, humid weather and the blazing Roman sun kept most of the athletes from working too hard at their training but the U. S. swimming team — already razor- sharp — went through a light workout.

It was a quiet period of tense waiting through which the athletes were going—aside from a brief flareup when some Roman jokesters reversed road signs leading to the village and a London tour bus went around 20 miles in an endless circle before the scenery became too familiar.

Hebert Shares St. Paul Lead For 3rd Round

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Don Fairfield of Jacksonville, Ill., and Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., were deadlocked Saturday for the lead in the $30,000 St. Paul Open Golf tournament at the 54-hole mark with 17-under-par 199s.

Hebert now has shared the lead for three rounds, each time with a different player, over the 6,557-yard, par 36-36—72 Keller course.

Hebert shot a 6-under-par 66 and Fairfield had a 7-under 65 as the two pulled four shots in front of the rest of the field.

Tied at 203 were Gordon Jones, Atlantis, Fla., and Al Geiberger, former University of Southern California star from Studio City, Calif.

At 204 were George Bayer, Glengales, Ill., who also shot a 65; Tommy Bolt, Crystal River, Fla., and Billy Casper of Apple Valley, Calif.

Hebert missed only one green and hit only two shots on his round which didn't turn out as he planned. He didn't have a bogey on the card and now has played 54 holes with only one. His birdie putts ranged from 6 to 10 feet as his iron play was flawless.

Fairfield rode into a tie for the top spot on 11 one-putt greens and started his round with threes on the first four holes. Then he birdied the seventh to make the first nine in 5 under 31. His only bogey came at the ninth where he took three from the edge but he followed that with birdies at the 11th, 12th and 16th holes with putts of 15, 3 and 25 feet.

Casper, who shared the lead at 36 holes, slipped to a 71 and fell five shots off the pace, and Joe Campbell of New York, who started the day only one stroke back, could do no better than a 72 for a 206.

Don Whitt, Borrego Springs, Calif., who started the day two strokes short, shot a 72 for a 205.

The leaders:

Yanks Fall As Canada Grabs Boating Title

By JERRY GREEN

PICTON, Ont. (AP)—Canada's Miss Supertest III completely mastered a crippled U.S. team Saturday and retained the Harmsworth Trophy, international power boating's highest bauble.

The successful Canadian defender roared to her second straight victory in the best-of-3 races while only one American Boat of a three-boat fleet finished.

Gale V of Detroit, the top U.S. hope and runner-up to Supertest in Friday's first race, was unable to get her engine going. She was out of the race before the start.

Only Nitrogen, Nitrogen Too's sister craft from Wilmington, Del, was able to carry the U.S. hopes to the finish. And Nitrogen was about 4 miles behind the zooming Supertest at the end of the 45-mile grind around the Bay of Quinte's 5-mile course.

This was only Canada's second Harmsworth victory since the trophy first was offered by Alfred Harmsworth, a British publisher, in 1903. Supertest, with Bob Hayward at the wheel, won it last year in Detroit.

The United States has won the trophy 16 times and until last year had held it for 39 years. The race is held only when there is a challenger.

Hayward, Supertest's 32-year-old chicken farmer pilot, didn't make his bid until the second turn, entering the home stretch of the first lap. He passed Nitrogen there and took off after Nitrogen Too.

Along the back, 2¼-mile straightaway on the second lap, Hayward let Supertest go. Opening her throttle, Hayward sped past Nitrogen Too and pulled away steadily.

Her best lap time was 126.22 m.p.h. on the second lap when she exceeded Friday's Harmsworth lap record by nearly 2 miles an hour.

HANG ON TO LEAD

Bucs Take 10-7 Duel From Reds

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored six runs in the second inning Saturday and led 8-0 in the fourth but still had to hang on desperately to beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-7 in a free-swinging slugfest.

It was Elroy Face who came on again to stifle the Reds after Cincinnati had cut the Pittsburgh lead to three runs.

Face, the last of three Pittsburgh pitchers, was credited with the victory while young Jim Maloney was the loser.

In the big second inning Maloney was almost out of trouble with only one run scored. A walk and singles by Roberto Clemente and Smoky Burgess were followed by a run-scoring double play on Hoak's grounder. Singles by Tom Cheney and Bill Virdon drove in two more runs, however.

Joe Nuxhall came on and gave up a run scoring single to Dick Groat. Bob Skinner's double tallied two more.

The Pirates picked up one run in each of the next two innings for an 8-0 lead before the Reds broke into the scoring column.

Coleman drove in three runs with a home run in the fourth.

The Bucs came right back with two more, one of them on Hoak's home run but the Reds got three in their half. They came on Cheo Cardenas' double, a single by Vada Pinson and Bell's home run.

The Reds got another in the seventh but Face came on to stop them the rest of the way. In the seventh, singles by Pinson, Bell and Robinson accounted for the run.

Danna Hurls Twin City To 16-Inning Win

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Angelo Danna turned in a neat three - hitter and drove in the winning run as the Twin City Merchants of Monroe outlasted Baton Rouge, 3-2, in a 16 inning duel that highlighted the state softball tournament.

After Monroe had notched single runs in the first and third innings, Baton Rouge came back with a pair of game-tying tallies in the fifth. That was all the scoring until the 16th when Danna was walked with the bases loaded, forcing in the third counter.

Twin City dropped its opening game, 3-0, to tournament favorite Opelousas. Danna hurled a brilliant two - hitter in that one, but took the loss.

WILLIAMS STARS

Detroit, Orioles Split Twin Card

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Incomparable Ted Williams provided the drama with a pair of three-run homers in the 8-6 first game victory but Baltimore salvaged a doubleheader split, 6-0, against Boston Saturday night behind Hal Brown's masterful pitching.

Williams, who also singled and drew his 2,000th walk, won the daylight half of the competition by belting two tremendous drives for his 514th and 515 major league homers.

The 35-year-old Brown, getting the starting assignment under the light over young southpaw Steve Barber, allowed only one Boston runner to reach second base.

Brown's support came from Jim Gentile's three-run single and the come-alive batting of Marv Breeding. Breeding had fanned three times in the opener before being lifted for a pinch hitter. At night he doubled twice and brought home both runs on singles by Jackie Brandt and Gene Woodling.

Woodling looped a wrong-field hit to left on a changeup over in-charging third baseman Frank Malzone.

The loss went to rookie Earl Wilson as Baltimore ran its season domination of Boston to a 13-4 record.

Williams—who will be 42 in exactly 10 days—was the subject of four standing ovations from the afternoon crowd of 17,437. His second homer on loser Chuck Estrada's first pitch in the sixth put Boston in front to stay, 7-6. The 500-foot smash to the center field bleachers also helped Bill Monbouquette to his 13th victory.

Monbouquette also needed three innings of relief by ace Mike Fornieles.

Ted slammed a 425-foot homer to the home bullpen in right center in the fourth to nudge Boston ahead 4-3. His 2,000th walk made him second only to Babe Ruth's 2,056 in majo league annuals.

Ron Hansen hit a three-run homer in the opener and a run-producing double in the nightcap as he enjoyed a 5-for-9 day and reached 70 RBI.

Brown-Irwin Scrap Heads Mitt Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lightweight champ Joe Brown meets Harlow Irwin of Minneapolis in a non-title 10 Thursday night in Minneapolis. The 24-year-old Irwin, who outpointed former lightweight champion Lauro Salas last month, hopes to get a title fight if he makes a good showing.

In the TV fight of the week, Gene Gresham of Detroit meets Duff Vaillant of Cuba, in a 10-round lightweight scrap at Chicago. It will be televised by ABC TV starting at 9 p.m., EST.

Gresham, 22, was the national AAU lightweight champion in 1957 before turning pro. He has won 25 and lost only once. Vaillant has 16 victories on his record.

Fernandez, No. 4 ranking welter contender, has an imposing record, having knocked out 21 of 23 opponents.

The other 10s pit Jerry Luedee of Canada against Bartolo Soni of the Dominican Republic in a light heavyweight tussle and Hans Werner Wohlers of Germany against Obdulio Nunez of Puerto Rico in a middleweight scrap.

Louise Suggs Takes Lead In Women's Open

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Veteran Louise Suggs of Atlanta whipped around the Asheville Country Club course in 69 strokes Saturday to grab the 36-hole lead in the Asheville Women's Open Golf Tournament with a 141 total.

Her 2-under-par performance put her a stroke ahead of steady-shooting Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., and Jo Ann Prentice of Birmingham, Ala. Miss Rawls, the current women's Open champ, carded her second straight 71 and Miss Prentice had a 70 for 142 totals.

Mickey Wright of Bonita, Calif., who shot the rain-soaked Beaver Lake Club course in 69 Friday, could do no better than a 75 for 144.

SEVERAL QUESTION MARKS

Tulane Faces Usual Tough Slate With Good Backfield

By BOB ANDERSON
World Sports Editor

Tulane's Greenies face their usual rugged schedule, spiced with four attractive intersectional games, with a revamped coaching staff, an experienced backfield and question marks up the middle and on the flanks.

Andy Pilney, beginning his seventh year as head coach of the New Orleans team, will have only 18 lettermen returning from the 1959 team that won three, lost six and tied one. The Greenie mentor has letter-winners back at every position except fullback, where Bill Ary has been switched from halfback.

Newcomers include three new coaches, ex-North Carolina head man George Barclay, Al Kawal and Benne Ellender, the former Greenie quarterback, and 30 sophomores and redshirts.

Brightest spot in sight is the backfield. The Greenies should be able to hold their own in the offensive department with a starting backfield that will probably have Phil Nugent at quarter, Tom Mason and Terry Terrebonne at the halves and Ary at full. Nugent, the clubs total offense leader last fall with 636 yards, is a returning starter while Mason and Terrebonne shared left half last year. Terrebonne was moved over to right half during spring drills.

THE SCHEDULE
Sept. 17—California, there.
Sept. 24—Alabama, home.
Oct. 1—Rice, there.
Oct. 8—Open.
Oct. 15—Ole Miss, home.
Oct. 22—Georgia Tech, there.
Oct. 29—William & Mary, home (Homecoming).
Nov. 5—Texas Tech, there.
Nov. 12—Florida, there.
Nov. 19—Vanderbilt, there.
Nov. 26—LSU, home.

Bob Cornett, 180, a fine punter, divided the quarterback chores with Nugent, 185, last fall and will do the same this campaign if an old back ailment responds to treatment. To back up this duo, Pilney has three highly-regarded sophomores Ted Miller (190), and Ron Melton (175), two Mississippians, and Lafayette's Jack Domingue (190).

The Greenies went in heavily for the air game last fall with Nugent passing for 511 yards and Cornett for 445. Pilney hopes to keep the aerial offense at top form while boosting the running attack. Terrebonne (174) was the team rushing leader last fall with 403 yards, 4.0 yards-per-try, and Mason (195) picked up 336 yards. These two will continue to carry most of the mail with lettermen Bill Osteen (180) and Howard Kisner (160) backing them up. Pilney is also high on sophs Adrian Colon (190) and Sam Camp (195) as well as Ned Edmondson (180), the former Lake Providence flash.

At end, probably the strongest positions on the team last year, three lettermen return and three are gone. Ferriday's Leo Young, Pete Abadie and Bill Brabham. The returnees are former Ouachita star Bill Roach (180), Cameron Gamble (190) and Pat McLean (198). These three will do most of the work on the wings while Clarence Moen (190) and Joe Lasseigne (225) are considered the best of the sophomore prospects.

The situation at tackle is in good hands, those of Bernard Darre, rated an all-SEC prospect and Joe LeSage, both returning starters. Both are big — Barre weighs 220 and LeSage 235 — and capable. Back of them, however, the outlook is hazy. Redshirt Ed Reynolds is big enough (240) and he and sophs Ernest Colquette (205) and Bill Kellum (210) are expected to back up the starters.

Starters John DiVietro and Billy Clements have graduated, leaving lettermen Dave Michiels (215) and Gas Gonzales (210), who turned in excellent relief work at tackle last fall, the heir apparents. The best sophs? Butch Crenshaw (195), Glenn Holcombe (212), Grant Lyons (195) and Larry Culp (210).

Two lettermen centers, Larry Thompson (220) and John Chaisson (205), return with Shreveporter Thompson the best bet to succeed Neal Jones as the starter. Chaisson is currently attending summer school in an effort to bring his grades up to par. Ron Thronton (195), if a leg injury heals, Chris Schaller (200) and Don Miller (195) are the top soph prospects up the middle.

The situation:
ENDS—Weaker.
TACKLES—Better.
GUARDS—Slightly weaker.
CENTER—Weaker.
QUARTERBACK—About same.
HALFBACKS—Better.
FULLBACK—Weaker.
SUMMARY — Will have trouble matching 1959 record against tougher schedule.

BILL ROACH, former Ouachita Parish High School standout, is expected to be one of Tulane's top ends this year. A 180-pound junior, Roach earned his first letter last year and was impressive in spring practice.

Lee Juniors Set Grid Date On Wednesday

The Wednesday session, limited to seventh and eighth grade students, is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. at the school gym, and will last approximately two hours Leigh said.

Sixth grade players will report at a later date to be announced after the opening of school.

Leigh, opening his fourth season at Lee, said he expected about 60 boys for the first workout.

Coach Leight said that all boys reporting for practice who do not have their birth certificates on file with the athletic office should bring them with them.

Lee, facing a six-game schedule, will open the season against Jefferson Sept. 20. Last year Lee won five while losing only two.

CASUALNESS CAST ASIDE

Olympic Village Braces For Opening Of Summer Games

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ROME (AP) — Ancient Rome Saturday cast aside her traditional cloak of casualness—even the siesta—and officially braced herself for the 17th Olympic Games, opening Thursday.

While hundreds of additional athletes poured into the orange-brick structures of Olympic village, increasing the population there to almost 3,000, the city fathers threw the switch on a series of emergency measures for the duration of the giant sports festival.

Downtown parking was limited to one hour. Most shops and stores stayed open until 11 p.m. government offices operated only between 10 and 11:30 a.m. And one of this city's most attractive traditions—the 1 to 4 p.m. lunch hour or siesta — was abandoned until the closing curtain Sept. 11.

The city's bustling Via Veneto —the Italian Champs De Elysees where sidewalk sitting and promenading lasts until the early hours of morning—was closed to traffic and turned into a gigantic mid-town garden party.

Chairs, tables and umbrellas were moved into the streets to make more room for the anticipated gaiety of invading tourists.

Australia's golden team — a plane-load of track and swimming stars with 37 world records among them—moved into the village and joined the favored Americans and Russians in getting down to serious preparations.

Herb Elliott, Australia's great miler, took a warmup run around the village and then began seeking hilly and sandy areas for more rigorous training. He toughens his legs by running up sand dunes.

"I feel confident I can win the 1,500," said the gaunt Western Australian who has done 3:54.5 in the mile and 3:36 in the 1500. "The man I figure I must beat is Istvan Roszavolgyi of Hungary."

Australia's hardened, sun-tanned swimmers took their first dip in the Olympic training pool and some of them, including John Konrads, complained of the streamlined training program.

"We should have had three more weeks of drills at home," the 18-year-old holder of six free-style records said. "Also, we should have been here earlier, but maybe everything will work out okay."

The strongest American team ever sent to the games began adjusting itself to the humidity of the city and overall appeared in tiptop shape.

"From top to bottom this is our greatest squad ever," said Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "I anticipate a wonderful showing."

Only the track and field athletes and the basketball team, performing in Switzerland over the weekend, still are absent.

The Russian squad was completed with the arrival of another planeload, numbering 64 men and women track performers plus officials. Others coming in included 90 Indonesians and representatives of Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the United Arab Republic, Holland, Peru, Tunisia, Turkey, Britain and France.

The executive committee of the International Olympic Committee completed its sessions and prepared a report for the general IOC meeting Monday. The report deals mainly with political problems, particularly issues involving Nationalist and Communist China.

SWORD DANCER FIFTH

One-Eyed King Wins Arlington

CHICAGO (AP)—Cain Hoy Stable's One-Eyed King Saturday won the $555,150 Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park as the highly regarded Sword Dancer and Dotted Swiss finished out of the money in a five-horse blanket finish.

R. N. Meitus' King Grail, a 16 to 1 shot, was second, a length back of the winner. Third in the field of eight was Hasty House Farm's Martini II. Only a head separated King Grail and Martini II.

Dotted Swiss, seeking his seventh straight victory for C. V. Whitney, missed a money spot by a nose as he finished fourth. Resolved was only another nose back in fifth place. Then came Sword Dancer, the 1959 horse of the year from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable.

One-Eyed King, ridden by Manuel Yeaza and packing 118 pounds, covered the 1 3-16 miles over Arlington's rain - softened grass course in 1:58 3-5.

Both Dotted Swiss and Sword Dancer were running on the turf for the first time. Sword Dancer carried top weight of 126 pounds, three more than Dotted Swiss.

One-Eyed King is a veteran grass runner and won the Green Valley and Donn handicaps last spring on the turf at Gulfstream Park. His Arlington victory was his third in 18 starts this season and was worth $32,100, boosting his total winnings to $119,152.

Jockey Yeaza, telling of his winning ride, said: "One-Eyed King broke good out of the gate and then with three horses fighting for the lead, we stayed back in fourth place. We made our move gradually from the three-eighths pole and really turned it on past the quarter pole."

Eddie Arcaro, up on Sword Dancer, said he thought the Dancer moved up well and handled the grass all right, adding, "but he is a little horse and just doesn't handle that much weight too well."

FRISCO STREAK ENDS

Cubs Win, 9-5, Behind Altman

CHICAGO (AP) — George Altman drove in five runs with a double and a three-run homer Saturday in leading the Chicago Cubs to a 9-5 victory over San Francisco. The triumph smashed a four-game winning streak by the Giants.

Altman doubled home a pair of runs in the third inning and hit his ninth homer in the fourth, as the Cubs wiped out a four-run deficit.

Southpaw Seth Morehead, taking over for starter Moe Drabowsky, was credited with his second victory against seven defeats. Morehead held the Giants to one run and five hits in the last five innings, walking two and fanning six.

The Giants piled up a 4-0 lead in the first three innings but Sad Sam Jones, a 13-game winner, couldn't hold it.

Joe Amalfitano opened the game with a double, took third on a passed ball and scored on Willie Mays' sacrifice fly. Two more runs scored in the second on Hobie Landrith's single and a sacrifice fly by Eddie Bressoud. Orlando Cepeda crashed his 21st homer with two out in the fourth and extended his hitting streak to 14 consecutive games.

The Cubs started Jones on the way to his 14th defeat with three runs in the third. Singles by Elvin Tappe and Bob Will and a walk to Richie Ashburn loaded the sacks. One run scored when Ernie Banks bounced into a force play before Altman doubled in the other two.

Altman's three - run homer capped a five-run, fourth inning rally which also saw Ashburn single home a pair of runs.

Bressoud clubbed his seventh homer in the fifth, but the Cubs offset the run on doubles by Frank Thomas and Morehead in the home half of the inning.

Rookie Hurls Detroit Past Indians, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Bruce, Detroit's late-blooming rookie pitcher, hurled the Tigers to a 4-2 triumph over Cleveland Saturday although he required ninth inning help from Hank Aguirre.

Aguirre, who put down a ninth inning threat in Detroit's Friday night victory over the Indians, came on after Tito Francona led off the inning with his 10th home run. Aguirre allowed a single by Mike De La Hoz, but got Red Wilson to hit into a doubleplay and whizzed a third strike past John Romano.

The victory was Detroit's fourth in succession and the Tigers' seventh in eight starts.

Bruce had lost three straight times until he fired a brilliant two-hitter earlier this week against Chicago for his first major league win. He gave up only six hits this time and walked but two.

Cleveland infielder Ken Aspromonte and third base coach Luke Appling were ejected in the fifth inning for protesting too vigorously when Aspromonte was called out on an attempted steal of second base.

The Tigers scored all their runs off starter Barry Latman, getting single runs in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings.

Al Kaline walked, stole second and scored on Harry Chiti's single for the first run. Two singles and a throwing error by shortstop De La Hoz added another in the third. Chiti and Norm Cash homered for Detroit's other runs.

Francona drove in both Cleveland runs. Two errors by the Detroit infield and Francona's single produced one in the second and his upper deck drive in the ninth accounted for the other.

EXCEPT STOLEN BASES

Palys Sweeping Southern Titles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big Stan Palys won't lead the Southern Assn. this season in stolen bases but that is just about the only title out of reach of the husky Birmingham outfielder.

Palys, at 30 a 10-year veteran of organized baseball, tacked three points onto his already gaudy batting average last week and sported a .376 mark through games of Aug. 21, according to figures released Saturday by Friend News Service.

Palys, a 6-2, 190-pounder, also led the league in hits with 169, doubles with 35, triples with 12 and total bases with 306. He shared the lead in home runs at 26 with Atlanta first baseman Tim Harkness and Shreveport outfielder Leo Posada by only five rbis. Jay Hankins, Shreveport outfielder, led in runs with 92. Palys had 89.

Ernie Oravetz, 5-foot-5 Chattanooga outfielder, continued upward in the batting race by improving his figure to .331. He lacked only one hit of matching Palys in that category. Jack Kubiszyn, onetime University of Alabama star, retained third place after hiking his batting mark to .326. Posada (.318) and Nashville outfielder Ev Joyner (.315) replaced Al Grandcolas of Chattanooga and Harkness in the top five. The leaders were figured on the basis of a minimum of 300 turns at bat.

Giant Sport Stadium Set For Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—Harris County officials Saturday announced plans to build a 15-million-dollar sports center that is to include a 45,000 seat dome-covered baseball stadium.

Holders of the Houston franchise in the defunct Continental Baseball League also announced they are prepared to lease the center for 30 years.

Under current plans, all events in the stadium would be played indoors beneath a 230-foot dome. The stadium would seat 50,000 for football.

Construction of the stadium is expected to begin next January on a 259-acre tract five miles south of downtown Houston. Construction would require 12 months.

The announcement climaxed a series of negotiations that began after an August 2 meeting at which American and National Baseball League representatives agreed upon an expansion plan under which new franchises would be awarded to Continental League members.

Craig Cullinan Jr., chairman of the executive committee of Houston's Continental group, the Houston Sports Association, said his 30-year lease would guarantee necessary revenue bond financing for the center.

Houston baseball territorial rights are held by the Houston Buffs of the American Association. Efforts by Cullinan's group to purchase the Buffs failed several months ago. Since the August 2 meeting at Chicago there had been speculation the two groups soon will resume negotiations in hopes of giving Houston a united front in its bid for a major league franchise.

Scottish Mat Champ Slated Here Monday

A grappler reputed to be the champion of Scotland makes his local debut at the B&B Arena Monday night, heading an attractive card of three full - length matches.

Ray Andrews will carry the Scottish title into the ring against Firpo Zybysko in the first match of the night. Little is known about Andrews, except that he's a claimant to the crown. Zybysko, on the other hand, needs no introduction to the local crowd, having established himself months ago as a crafty ring veteran.

Zybysko drew the fans' wrath while refereeing last Monday night and probably will restrict his ring work to actual wrestling.

The other matches on tap send veteran Al Massey against Ken Cooper in a rematch and Tiger Rod Rivera takes on Tony Jiminez in the finale.

Massey, a sometime referee, draws another chance at Cooper after being disqualified in the third round of their bout last week.

All three battles are scheduled over one-hour time limits with two falls to win.

Officiating Monday's action will probably be either Harvey Cole or Bob Morrow.

OLYMPIC GAMES BIG TEST

U.S. May Regain Lead In World Amateur Sports

By TED SMITS

ROME (AP)—This could be the Olympic Games in which the United States wrests back from Russia world leadership in amateur sports.

If so, it will be by the narrowest of margins. The Games open Thursday.

Phenomenal pre-games performances by Yankee track and swimming athletes, indications of a decline or at least a slow-up in Russia's sensational athletic progress, plus a curtailment of the medals bestowed in gymnastic—Russia's No. 1 sport—have all contributed to a shift in the balance of athletic power.

As dopesters see it, the United States can win 39 and possibly more gold medals, Russia 38, with the combined German team solidly in third place with 16. Following these leaders are Austria 8, Japan 8, Hungary 5, Poland 5, Italy 5, and Turkey 5.

The United States won 32 gold medals at the 1956 Games in Melbourne, and a total of 74 counting silver and bronze. Russia won 37 gold and a total of 98, clearly emerging as team champion on the basis of the unofficial figures.

At the 1952 games in Helsinki, the United States barely beat out Russia for team honors after having occupied the Olympic pinnacle almost unchallenged since the start of the Games in 1896.

Never has a nation sent into competition a track and field team of such power as the United States will here. Track and field runs from Aug. 31-Sept. 10, and the United States will put in action these men who hold the world record in their events or have a record mark pending:

There is no such thing as an official team championship in the Olympics. Sports fans, however, persist in keeping score.

The Associated Press will follow tradition in tabulating an unofficial score on the basis of 10 points for first, and 5,4,3,2, for the other five places in all events in which a gold medal is awarded. Team sports in this individual calculation count as a single medal, although each member of the winnning basketball and soccer teams, for instance, gets a gold medal.

Tabulation will also be kept on the same point basis by individual sports. That is to say, after men's track and field is completed the total points will be added up and each nation credited on a master list with 10 points for first place in the sport, with 5,4,3,2,1 distributed as in individual events.

Men's track and field—all-powerful in the field events, the United States may have trouble this time in the shorter races. But even then Americans should get 14 gold medals, one less than was won at Melbourne. Russia is picked for 3, Germany 2, Australia 2 and other nations 6.

Women's track and field—here Russia comes into its own with the Press sisters and should pick up 4 gold medals, with Australia taking 2, the United States 1, and other nations 3.

Men's swimming—Australia is fighting to retain supremacy won at Melbourne, but pre-games indications are that the United States can win 6 out of the 10 gold medals with Australia taking 2 and Japan 2.

Women's swimming—here again the United States is favored to get back on top with 6 gold medals, compared to 2 for Australia and 1 for the Netherlands.

Basketball—the United States team is the clear favorite to win with Russia second.

Boxing—Russia should pick up 3 gold medals, the United States 2, Germany 2, and other nations 3.

Cycling—Italy is due to get 3 with the other 3 scattered.

Fencing—this is Hungary's sport with 3, followed by Russia with 2 and other nations 3.

Field hockey—India should win as usual.

Modern pentathlon — Russia gets 2 gold medals.

Rowing — the surprising Germans should get at least 4 medals with the United States hoping to pick up 3.

Shooting — Russia gets 2, the United States 1, and others 5.

Soccer—this looks like Yugoslavia's championship.

Water polo—Hungary, always strong, is favored.

Weight lifting—Russia is expected to edge the United States, 4 championships to 3.

Yachting—Denmark should win 2, the United States 1 and others 2.

Tickets For Northeast Grid Games On Sale

Athletic Director Jack Rowan said the tickets will be on sale at the college and at three local businesses. Tickets may be bought at the college from the Athletic Office in Brown Hall. The business firms which will sell tickets are Simmons' Esso Servicenter, 21 Louisville Ave.; Calvert Drug Store, 303 Trenton, West Monroe; and R&A Jewelers, 323 DeSiard.

Season tickets will sell for $7 — $1 less than a fan would pay for a $2 reserve ticket to each of the four games.

Northeast opens its season Sept. 17 in Brown Stadium against Arkansas State College in a Parents' Day contest. The next home game is against Northwestern Oct. 8 as a climax to Northeast's Homecoming activities. The final two home games come Nov. 12 against Jacksonville state College of Alabama and Nov. 19 against Louisiana Tech.

Dodgers Nip Cards By 2-1 For 3rd Spot

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An inning away from their second straight 1-0 defeat, the Los Angeles Dodgers came to life on Gil Hodges' two-run ninth-inning double to the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, and slip past them into third place in the National League Saturday.

Until the ninth the Redbirds and lefty Curt Simmons had the game won on rookie Charley James' first major league homer. James' homer was a first-inning drive off southpaw Danny McDevitt in a game then delayed nearly two hours by rain.

The veteran Hodges followed with a line drive which was fair by less than a foot down the right field line, scoring Gilliam and the fleet Davis.

St. Louis, which won last night on three hits and had this one apparently on the same slim total, threatened briefly in the ninth when Walt Moryn opened with a single for the fourth Redbird hit. But Larry Sherry, third L. A. pitcher, choked off the rally to preserve his 12th victory in 20 decisions. Simmons now is 4-3.

Davis' 20-game streak ties the longest in the National League so far this season, by Pancho Herrera of Philadelphia.

AFL Group To Hold Meeting In New York

DALLAS (AP) — Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League announced Saturday that the league's executive committee will meet Thursday and Friday in New York to discuss such items as the championship playoff, the next player draft and the television contract.

Also they will talk about a post-season all-star game between top players of the Eastern and Western divisions.

The AFL's 10 million dollar anti-trust suit against the National League will get a progress report from the lawyers.

Group insurance for AFL players, this to be paid by the member clubs, is planned.

Foss said some policy changes may come out of the meeting. "We're almost through our pre-season schedule," he said, "and we may want to iron out things that could not be foreseen four weeks ago, but have cropped up during the pre-season games."

The executive committee is made up of the presidents of the eight clubs in the league—Oakland Dallas, Houston, Boston, Buffalo, Los Angeles, Denver and New York.

Kansas City A's Sign Newcomers To Florida Club

KANSAS CITY, (AP) — The Kansas City Athletics announced Saturday signing six young players for the 1961 season. All were assigned to the Sanford, Fla., farm club in the Florida State League.

Delta League

Chatham will host Woodlawn this afternoon at 2:30 in the opening game of the Delta League championship finals.

The series will be a best-of-three affair.

37 Prospects Report For Jena Drills

JENA (Special) — Jena high school football coach Jim Gilbert reports 37 young men have begun drills this week in preparation for the 1960-61 football season.

A breakdown by grade shows eleven seniors, seven juniors, nine sophomores and ten freshmen.

Snce practice started Monday, Coach Gilbert, assisted by Gayle Dick, junior high coach Billy Harper and head basketball coach Winberry, has put the team through fundamentals and conditioning calisthenics. The boys will start popping leather early next week in scrimmage practice.

The team will open the season on September 3 playing Menard in the Cosmopolitan Bowl in Alexandria. The first regular season game will be against Block high at Jonesville on September 9.

Schoendienst On Sidelines

MILWAUKEE (AP)—John McHale, general manager of the Milwaukee Braves, said Saturday he did not know when Red Schoendienst, veteran second baseman sidelined with a groin injury, would be able to rejoin the team.

Schoendienst went to St. Louis a week ago for a checkup with his physician after he sustained the groin injury. The infielder planned to rejoin the Braves Thursday. McHale said, however, he had received no word from Schoendienst when he would be able to report.

Schaus Named To Coach Los Angeles Team

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Basketball Coach Fred A. Schaus of the University of West Virginia Saturday was named head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association.

The Lakers, formerly of Minneapolis, will play their first NBA game under their new franchise Oct. 23.

Schaus, 35, guided the Mountaineers of West Virginia to a Southern Conference championship during each year of his six-year reign.

In 1959 the Mountaineers reached the NCAA finals but lost to California 71-70. Schaus's overall record at West Virginia was 164-37.

Schaus, a native of Newark, Ohio, played four years with Fort Wayne and one with New York in the NBA.

He coached the U.S. team that won the 1959 Pan-American Games title in Chicago.

Harper Ups Golfing Lead To 3 Strokes

Jim Harper carded a 70 yesterday to stretch his lead to three strokes going into today's final round of the Bayou DeSiard club golf championship.

The tourney was shortened to 54 holes after rain washed out play last Sunday.

Medalist last week with a sub-par 67, Harper continued to stay a step ahead of defending champion Bill Jones who added a 71 yesterday to opening 69 for a 140 total.

Today's pairings:

Championship Flight

1:00 Jim Harper (67-70—137), Bill Jones (69-71—140), Clyde Nash (74-70—144), Jack Rivers (73-74—147).

All others withdrew.

Amateur Takes Golf Crown In Aussie Tourney

PERTH, Australia, (AP) — Bruce Devlin won the Australian Open Golf Championship Saturday, the first amateur to do so since 1939. His triumph also clinched a place for him on the Australian team to defend the Eisenhower Trophy at Ardmore, Pa., Sept 28 Oct. 1.

Devlin, who won the Eisenhower individual honors at St. Andrews two years ago, shot 282 although he zoomed to 75 on the first day after three previous rounds of 69. Ted Ball, Australian amateur champ, was second with 283.

After the tourney the Australian Eisenhower team was named. On it with Devlin and Ball are Jack Coogan and Eric Routley with Phil Billings as a reserve. Routley was designated captain.

Indiana Driver Laps Field In 100-Mile Race

Packard lapped all of the 18 starters except second-place finisher, Eddie Sachs of Outer Valley, Pa. Packard won a purse of about $20,000.

Only eight of the Indianapolis 500-mile type cars finished the race.

DRUBS OPPOSITION

U.S. Track Team In Warm-Up Meet

BERN, Switzerland (AP)—The U.S. Olympic track team warmed up for next week's Rome Games Saturday night by swamping mediocre opposition from seven European countries without straining a muscle.

The Yanks performed just well enough to win every event except the 1,500 meters where Austria's Josef Ceglide crashed through. A capacity crowd of 18,000 in Bern Stadium cheered the Americans.

Best performance of the night came from Glenn Davis, America's gold medal hurdler who competed in the 200-meter hurdles for the first time in three years and recorded a time of 22.5 seconds in beating teammate Dick Howard.

Long after the meet ended, surprised officials said on consulting the record book they found he had matched the world mark of: 22.5 for the event around a curve set by West Germany's Marin Lauer.

"I was surprised to hear that," Davis said, "and I am very gratified."

Next to Davis' effort, the top American performance was made by the 400-meter relay team, which was timed in :40.2, only seven tenths of a second off the world mark. Hayes Jones, Paul Winder, Stone Johnson and Ray Norton handled the baton.

Meet officials decided to conduct the 100 meter and 400 meter races in two separate heats without finals.

In the century, Norton demonstrated his superiority with the best time of the night, 10.4 seconds. Dave Sime and Winder raced in :10.5, finishing the second race in a dead heat.

The Yanks smothered the competition in the 400-meter heats as well, led by Otis Davis in :45.6. He said he found "the track a little heavy and I could not really hit my stride but I'm satisifed and I'm ready."

An Austrian and a German crashed through the American supremacy in the 1,500 meters, Cegledi triumphing in 3:46.8. Cegledi's final burst took him past Germany's Herbert Missalla, who clocked an even 3:47.0. America's Pete Close coasted in third in 3:47.2, a step ahead of teammate Phil Coleman.

John Thomas, the world's record breaking high jumper who has consistently topped 7 feet, took it easy in winning the eight-man event with a best effort of 6-9⅛. Second was teammate Joe Faust of Culver City, Calif., with 6-7⅛.

Thomas commented that he feels "okay but it's the first time I've jumped in Europe. I feel fine for the Olympic Games."

Max Truex, pint-sized distance runner from Warsaw, Ind., lapped the field in the gruelling 10,000-meter run in the good time of 29 minutes, 35.8 seconds.

America's champion in the hammer throw, Harold Connolly, easily won the event in a field of five but did not extend himself with a best throw of 215-10½. Poland's Tedeusz Rut was second with 215-1.

CHEVROLET

Few trucks are subjected to the body-wracking beatings that are part of a day's work for this Chevrolet Series 60 pulpwood hauler. It's owned by J. E. Fox, North Carolina logging contractor. As Bobby Fox, a partner in the business says, "Loaded with pulpwood, we drive over stumps and potholes you'd think would tear the truck to pieces. These trails would shake the cab off an ordinary truck, but not our Chevy. We can average an extra load a day . . . make $45 to $50 a day more with this Chevy than we can with the others."

In every weight class these Chevies are doing more work at less expense than trucks have ever done before. Drive one at your Chevrolet dealer's. It's an experience that could pay you big dividends.

◀ "That 6-cylinder engine really performs," says Bobby Fox. "It's got the lugging power we need in the woods and walks right along with a full load on the highway."

British Village Loses Ghost, Regains Peace

BOREHAM WOOD, England (AP)—Residents of this Hertfordshire village lost a ghost Saturday but gained peace of mind after the spookiest summer any of them can remember.

On the whole they figure it was a poor trade, however. The ghostly reputation had made the area more interesting.

It all began with reports that a ghost was stalking nightly through All Saints' Churchyard.

First accounts were laughed down, but the testimony kept rolling in. Some residents, breathless and with eyes poping, rushed into the Green Man pub and told of seeing the spook dancing between tombstones. A few said they had heard it make a moaning sound. All agreed it was a deathly white.

"It's 'orrible as you can imagine," one man said as he reached for a pint.

Said the Rev. J. W. Larter, the vicar: "Stuff and nonsense. This church is only 50 years old. That's not nearly old enough for it to have a ghost. It's just not done. According to all tradition, ghosts haunt ancient places—scenes of tragedies of several hundred years ago."

The ghost was a goat.

Miss Johnston Mr. Fletcher Vows Spoken

Miss Rosemary Johnston and William Morris Fletcher, both of Shreveport, were married in Sunset Acres Baptist Church August 6 at eight in the evening.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Coday Johnston of Logansport and the late Mr. Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. James Roy Fletcher of Choudrant are parents of the groom.

Vows were spoken to the Rev. Jerry Schmucher in a setting of candle trees and white flowers against a background of palms. Music for the ceremony was provided by Miss Louise Manhein, organist, and John T. Laughlin, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, James Ray Johnston. Her traditional wedding gown of peau de soie and Alencon lace was fashioned with a stem bodice and full flowing skirt ending in a train. A pearl embroidered lace cap held her fingertip veil of illusion, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and English ivy.

Mrs. M. Raymond Burch of Logansport was her sister's matron of honor. Mrs. T. R. Brannon, Jr., of Carthage, Texas, was bridesmaid. They wore identical street length dresses of blue satin with fitted bodices and bell skirts. They wore satin hats and shoes, and carried arm bouquets of yellow roses.

RECEPTION

The bride's mother entertained at a reception in the church parlor following the ceremony. She was wearing for the occasion a champagne basket weave linen dress trimmed in satin with matching accessories. The groom's mother chose a blue silk with matching accessories.

Guests were invited to sign the register by Mrs. Carolyn Williams and Mrs. Edward Andrews. The bride's bouquet was placed beside a burning memory candle on the table with the bride's book. Bridesmaids' bouquets placed at the base of a candelabra holding yellow tapers centered the refreshment table.

Punch was served by Mrs. E. C. McCoy and Mrs. Walter T. Betts. Mrs. Ralston Goben and Mrs. Billy Ray Pesnell served the cake. Others who assisted were Mrs. Auren M. Smith, Mrs. William G. Christina, Mrs. Mason Gellatty, and Mrs. Fred Coday.

When the couple left on their wedding trip, the bride was wearing a beige and black transition cotton suit with matching accessories and the corsage of white roses from her bouquet. Upon their return, they will be at home in Shreveport.

Girls Will Win

The war between the sexes may soon be over in the United States. According to an article, if the issue ever comes to a vote the girls will win hands down.

On election day there will be 3,283,000 more women eligible to vote than men, the Census Bureau says.

And, depending on your point of view, things are going to get worse, or better, in the future, the Bureau predicts. By 1980 it is estimated that there will be 5,500,000 more women voting than men. "Women now hold the balance of power," Republican Party executive Mrs. Clare B. Williams has noted. But so far, says Coronet, they haven't exercised it fully.

Monroe Wedding Unites Miss Willis, Mr. Purvis

Miss Marcia Lynn Willis became the bride of Joe Davis Purvis, Jr., in a double ring ceremony performed Saturday night in the First Baptist Church by the Rev. H. L. Sampson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Osborn Willis of Monroe. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Purvis Davis of West Monroe are parents of the groom.

English ivy and palms, flanked by arrangements of white gladiola, were banked high above the chancel and extended to either side forming a background for the wedding party. Among the greenery, myriads of white tapers in spiral candelabra added their soft glow.

Miss Sandra Simpson and Miss Ann Walker lighted the candles. They were dressed in identical green silk organza dresses over satin fashioned with pouf sleeves, a fitted bodice and bell shaped skirts, with matching satin shoes. They wore a wristlet corsage of white pom mums and English ivy.

"Because," "Whither Thou Goest," and "The Lord's Prayer" were sung by Luther Burney, accompanied on the organ by Ronnie Brothers.

Miss Judy Willis, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Ann Purvis, Miss Sally Purvis, sisters of the groom, and Miss Neva Willis, and Miss Marla Amrhein, cousins of the bride. They wore identical dresses of French lime chiffon over satin taffeta with fitted sleeves and scooped necklines. Each dress was styled with a satin midriff and bouffant skirt. The attendants wore slippers in the same hue and their hats were formed by bows of the French lime satin. They carried white pom mums surrounded by English ivy on white lace fans.

Little Misses Louise Murphree, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Murphree of Baton Rouge; and Kim Lachney, daughter of Mrs. Norene Lachney, served as flower girls. Their floor - length white silk organza dresses were designed with tight bodice trimmed in lace and full skirts. Their hats were formed of net, daisies and seed pearls. They carried white baskets filled with white pom mums and trailing English ivy.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was gowned in white swiss silk organza, designed with a figurine bodice traced in lace, embroidered with pearls and iridescent crystals, which formed a portrait neckline. She wore a fingertip madonna veil of matching lace. Her only jewelry was a pearl droplet encased in gold, which was a gift from the groom. She carried a crescent shaped bouquet of a white, yellow throated orchid surrounded by fleur d-amour and stephanotis.

Serving the groom as best man was Leroy Hafner of Longview, Texas. Groomsmen were Farrell J. Perdreauville of Orange, Texas; Eugene Ammons of Lake Charles; Fonnie Reagan of Cincinnatti, Ohio, and Ward Willis, cousin of the bride, of Shreveport.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents. Dozens of hurricane lamps lined the walk to the front entrance where the mother of the bride received guests in a dress of white lace over aqua satin. Her accessories were of the same shade of aqua, and she wore a white orchid corsage. The groom's mother was wearing a sheath dress of imported Italian pink lace over pink satin with matching bag and hat. Her corsage was a lavender orchid.

Presiding over the bride's book was Mrs. Leroy Hafner, cousin of the bride. A memory candle surrounded by English ivy decorated the table where the book was placed.

In the den was the bride's table which was overlaid with a white appliqued net cloth over green linen, and centered with a silver candelabrum holding burning white tapers intertwined with mums and ivy. At one end, was the tiered wedding cake which was iced in white, embossed with rosebuds, and topped with three wedding bells and roses. The silver punch bowl, entwined with ivy, was placed at the other end of the table.

Other serving tables were placed on the patio overlooking the bayou, which was aglow with the light from the dozens of floating candles which were placed about ten feet from shore.

Those who assisted at the reception were Miss Betty Collins of Opelousas; Miss Alice Mullins, Mrs. Joe Barry Mullins, Mrs. Glen Wilson of New Orleans; Mrs. Danny Thorpe of Wichita Falls, Texas; Mrs. Ernest Murphree of Baton Rouge; Mrs. Norene Lachney, Mrs. Paul Adams, Mrs. Crowford Willis, Mrs. T. Tyler, Mrs. O. B. Cook and Mrs. Thomas Zeagler. Miss Sarah Zeigler distributed the rice bags.

For traveling, the bride chose a green silk costume suit with matching shoes and purse, and a multi - colored feathered hat. Her corsage was the orchid from her bouquet.

After a honeymoon trip to the Gulf Coast the couple will leave for Boston, Mass., where they will make their home.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Murphree, Mr. and Mrs. Buster Johnston, Mrs. Eula Amrhien and Miss Marla Amrhien of Baton Rouge; Mr. and Mrs. Danny Thorpe of Wichita Falls, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Crowford Willis, Miss Neva Willis, Ward Willis, Mr. and Mrs. L. Dr. George W. Pomeroy performed the double ring ceremony held in the First Methodist Church.

White tapers illuminated a white cross suspended behind the altar, which was flanked by baskets of white gladioli and fern.

"Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer" were sung by Miss Charlotte Sally, accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Everett Zeagler.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza over cotton satin, featuring heavy embroidered cotton flowers around the scooped neckline and pointed waistline. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a yellow throated white orchid.

Miss Dorothy Lou Stephenson, maid of honor, was attired in a mint green embroidered cotton dress fashioned similarly to that of the bride. Her headdress was a mint green bandeau, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Peggy Osborne and Miss Frances Adams. They were dressed identically to the maid of honor.

Misses Claire White, sister of the bride, and Sherry Spillers, sister of the groom, served as junior bridesmaids. Their dresses were of mint green embroidered cotton, with a green silk organza cummerbund. Their headdresses were white tulle bandeaux, and they carried colonial bouquets of white carnations.

Little Misses Bonnie and Robin Daniell of Atlanta, wore dresses identical to those of the junior bridesmaids. They carried white baskets of shasta daisies.

The groom's father acted as best man, with Charles McGough of Spencer; and Bendel Johnson of Linville as groomsmen. Ushers for the occasion were Robert Jenkins of Baton Rouge, and Gene Watson of Homer.

Thursday afternoon Bayou DeSiard country club was scene of a welcome-home party honoring PAT GUERRIERO (MRS. W. T.) BROWN, home from over four years in Anchorage Alaska. W. T., who was stationed at Fort Richardson, is now en route to Fort Hood, Texas. The Browns are here visiting their parents, the GEORGE GUERRIEROS.

Several hundred guests attended Wilma's party honoring her daughter. MRS. THOMAS KELLER and MRS. G. F. BECKER greeted arrivals in the club foyer, which was decorated with a triangular arrangement of lavendar gladioli in a milk glass compote.

Wilma chose an eyelet embroidered white pique, fashioned with a tiered tunic skirt. True was also in white: full skirted organdy, with a blue taffeta sash and blue taffeta sling with white chrysanthemum corsage on her broken arm.

Single glamellias decorated the refreshment trays. Those who served included MRS. F. E. MAXWELL, JR., of Delhi; MRS. RICHARD C. GUERRIERO, MRS. WILLIAM V. BOTTORFF, SUSAN STEWART, MRS. FRED CRENSHAW, MRS. JAMES USSERY, LINDA KELLER, and MRS. GILBERT HARKEY of Shreveport.

Music was provided throughout the party by ELOISE STANHOPE at the piano. Other members of the house party were MRS. E. M. BABER, MRS. C. P. GUERRIERO, JR., MRS. H. E. GUERRIERO, MRS. J. S. GUERRIERO, MRS. V. S. GARNETT, MRS. ROBERT GUERRIERO, EVA REED, MRS. LLOYD STEWARD, MRS. S. E. HODGES, MRS. H. G. COOPER, and MRS. B. W. MORRISON.

Pat will be given Monroe's red carpet treatment throughout her visit. Parties started this week, when Edell Guerriero and Joann Ussery entertained at lunch at the Paragon Monday. Tuesday Lil Becker invited an intimate group for luncheon in the Reef room at Bayou DeSiard country club. More parties are planned for the remainder of her stay.

BLANCHE LONG was here several days this week as the guest of the PETE MENEFEES. Wednesday night they entertained with a dinner party in her honor at Bayou DeSiard country club. Doris used all white flowers to decorate the porch, where the party was held. An epergne filled with chrysanthemums was the centerpiece, flanked by white candles in silver candelabra. Two silver compotes holding white chrysanthemums were placed at the ends of the table. Places were marked for twenty - eight guests.

Guest in the John MULLENS home this week and next will be Marge's sister, SUZANNE RENDER of Dallas.

It's a third child, third daughter for the BOB DOWNINGS. The new arrival, born August 10, has been christened MARGARET CLAYTON. Her two sisters, DENISE and RENEE, are visiting in Donaldsonville with their grandparents, MR. and MRS. C. J. DUGAS. Paternal grandmother is MARGARET DOWNING of Monroe.

PAUL GILMONT left on Friday to join KATHIE and their daughter SUELLEN, and JANE WHITTINGTON in California. The ladies have been visiting there for several weeks. They will enter Suellen in Mills college before returning home around Labor Day.

Moving to Columbia early this week were CONNIE and JOHN M'CANTS. . . .Prior to her departure, Connie was honored at a coffee hour given by JANE HOBGOOD in her home. Crepe myrtle and snow on the mountain were used to center the refreshment table. Chicken salad sandwiches, devil's food cake and coffee were served to about ten guests.

Here this weekend as the guest of his mother, MRS. GEORGE SNELLINGS, SR., is BREARD SNELLINGS, of New Orleans. The G. M. SNELLINGS, Jr., have their children, GEORGE III, AINSLIE and baby WILCOX visiting until the opening of school.

A group of ladies who have been meeting monthly for samba celebrated their club's seventh anniversary at dinner last night. The party was held in the home of FRANCES REYNOLDS, with LOUISE CLARK and LEONORA KELLER, co - hostesses. Special guests were those members who had birthdays this month: MAE FLANIGAN, KATIE M'GEE, KATIE RENAUD, and LILY WOOD. . . .Cutwork cloth covered the two tables, which were centered with arrangements of roses and other garden flowers. Barbecued chicken was the main course of the meal, with birthday cake and ice cream for dessert. The group played samba after dinner. Others who attended were CARRIE COLLIGAN, LOVIE GREGORY, TERESA RENAUD, MARIE ROE, ELIZABETH STENBERG, PAT STEWART, and ELIZABETH HAYES.

In appreciation for these lines, called "Hothouse Plant", author Norman Jaffray has been unanimously elected to membership in Athletics Anonymous:

Seem, in my jaundiced opinion, insane.
Campers preferring a tent to a bed
Palpably suffer from holes in the head.
Gathering kindling—the dullest of chores;
And nothing tastes better when cooked out-of-doors.
My hitch in the Army was tranquil and tame:
Unscathed from its mortal collisions I came,
But it taught me some lessons I'll know till I die:
Man's pleasantest state is quiescent and dry.
Don't sleep under canvas or shoulder a pack,
And the nicest position is flat on your back.
Let others delight in the wind in their face
And the rain down their neck, and a blistering pace:
No camping for me! I derived from the wars
A healthy distrust for the Great Out-of-Doors.
I'm not what I was in my militant heyday—
I haven't been out of the house since V-J Day.

MRS. WILLIAM THOMAS BROWN was honored at a reception given by Mrs. George Guerriero Thursday afternoon at Bayou DeSiard country club. Sgt. and Mrs. Brown, who are visiting here at this time, have recently returned from four years in Anchorage, Alaska.

Plagued with drooping, wilting cut flowers? Here's some helpful adivce from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Grupp — a husband - wife team with 28 years of experience as florists.

Powder Hints

Face powder, compact make-up, and dusting powder are three of the most useful feminine beauty requisites.

Face powder should be used after you have applied your foundation make-up, erase stick, and creme rouge. It will not only set these creamy requisites, but will add a beautiful matte finish to your complexion, as well. Many women prefer the glamour merits of a creamy - base and powder compact make - up, which is applied with a puff. This dual purpose make-up may be used alone or over all foundation make-ups as a touch-up.

Dusting powder can save you time and energy in dressing, and also bring added comfort. After your bath, apply dusting powder to your hips, around your thighs, and to your legs. This will make it easier to slip on undergarments and hose, and will provide all-day comfort. In addition, your clothing will stay perspiration - free longer if you dust your back, chest, shoulders, and underarms with this luxurious powder.

Crushing Garlic

If you haven't a garlic crusher, place peeled garlic cloves on a cutting board with a little salt; bring the heavy blade of a chopping knife (or a small cleaver) down on the garlic, then mince. Alternating this mashing and mincing will do the trick.

Measuring Cup

A measuring cup that has a space above the 1 cup line should be used in measuring liquids for recipes. Cooks have a tendency to skimp in measuring liquids which this type of cup helps to prevent. It's spillproof, too!

Warm Climate

Do you dream of moving to a warmer climate someday? If you do, perhaps you should think twice — before you go. According to one article, you may not be able to think as well, once you get there.

Human thinking ability drops steeply when the temperature is over 70 degrees and is at its lowest in torrid weather. People are at their mental best when the temperature is around 40 degrees, the article says. Recently, a group of college students given intelligence tests in the summer and winter sessions scored 40 per cent lower in the steady heat than in the changeable winter weather.

A warm climate also has other disadvantages the article says. The human heart, even lying motionless in bed, is forced to work harder as temperature and humidity rise — so persons with acutely damaged hearts should think twice before heading for the warm weather.

The body's resistance to infection also seems to drop somewhat as temperatures climb. Colds are now known to be at least as frequent in warm climates as they are elsewhere. This is probably because people living in monotonous heat for long periods become highly sensitive to even the slightest dip in temperature. Moreover, severe diseases of the lungs have been known to run their most serious course where the climate is warmest.

On the other hand, people living in the constantly changing weather of the "temperate" zones grow faster, mature earlier, live longer, are more resistant to infections, and have probably the healthiest lives on earth, says the article. Perhaps you should stop dreaming and stay where you are.

THE ENGAGEMENT and approaching marriage of Miss Betty Sue Clark to Tommy Weems, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Weems of West Monroe, has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gulley of West Monroe. An early fall wedding is being planned.

Girl Scout News

Three girls from our council enjoyed this summer that many of our girls need and want, a need our council cannot fulfill at present; that is, an established camp experience. Good as day camp program is, there should also be opportunity for the valuable living - in - camp experience.

Kyle Gregory, Troop 26, Carol Ullman, Troop 3, and Sue Speight Troop 32 attended a two - week session at Camp Wawbansee, The Pelican Council camp near Arcadia. All report a wonderful experience. They lived in a primitive unit, meaning that they pitched tents, lashed the necessary tables and other equipment, cooked morning and evening meals in their unit, joining other campers for the noon meal in the [illegible] Outdoor Cook badge this way. One of the mothers was particularly impressed by the quadpod, the square table with seats, lashed by the campers. By the time parents arrived to take campers home, tents had been struck, drainage ditches, grease pit filled in, all trace of fires removed; only the lashing was left to show that a group of girls had camped in that particular spot.

Carol and Sue had completed Junior lifesaving courses during the June swimming classes, so they were allowed to take canoeing and to qualify as Advanced Swimmer, the highest rating in the Red Cross classification. They report a most impressive campfire. Each unit built a campfire in front of the cabins, close to the lake. With the six fires reflecting in the water, the units sang good night songs in turn, the last singing "taps." Doesn't it sound exciting? There's nothing like a campfire under a starry sky!

Progress in swimming is one accomplishment many Girl Scouts can look back upon for this summer. Proudest of all, are those girls who completed the Red Cross Junior Lifesaving course as part of the Girl Scout swimming course. The following, with Mrs. Jane Cash Russell as instructor, qualified for the Red Cross card and emblem and also for the Girl Scout proficiency badge: Julie Amman, Dianne Boyington, Jeanette Bush, Marilyn Daigle, Susan Ellington, Gretchen Haas, Mauren Halpin, Mary Tom Keller, Susan High, Paula Meek, Janna Rorex, Delane Ruddick, Sue Speight, Barbara Smith, Susan Turner, Carol Ullman, Kaki Stone.

Next week we'll have the names of girls in other classifications.

It's still warm, but there are plenty of garden jobs to do this month. To take care of yourself, garden early in the morning. Then, you can stay in the cool of your house all day.

THE JOBS

Back in May, we said to transplant bearded iris immediately after they bloomed or wait until July or August. The in-between-months are the bloom setting times. Now you can divide and transplant those bulbs if they're too crowded. Work bone meal in the soil and plant shallow.

Many of your vines get out of bounds at this time of year. If such a situation exists at your house, cut them back. Don't cut back climbing roses or white blooming clematis. It's too late to prune your roses this year. If you prune the clematis now, you'll cut off all the blooms. Wait until it finishes blooming.

By the way — if you have a wedding coming up, that clematis is lovely for decorating the brides table. It holds up well too and the dainty white blossoms just remind you of a bride's veil.

Even your trailing periwinkle needs pruning every three or four years. It begins to climb all over itself — if that is possible. You can take the sling blade and do a good job pruning. This will not look pretty for a while, but if you'll water well it should come out again before winter. You'll be glad you pruned when you see how much neater the area looks.

It's time to cut the tops off your violet plants. This old foliage is unsightly and not needed. Soon new foliage will put out. You'll have longer stems on your violets, too.

Violets will use lots of fertilizer. Well rotted barnyard manure is excellent. Also cotton seed meal is good.

Violets are subject to red spider. If the foliage is all yellow and sick looking, he's probably there. Spray with malathion or dust with sulphur.

Cut back hydrangeas that have quit blooming, being sure to cut off the dead blooms. Do this at once — not later.

If you want large flowers on your camellias, start disbudding as soon as the buds begin to form. Where there are two buds to a stem, twist one off gently. This will increase the size of the bud that remains.

Prune poinsettias no later than this month. Cut back half of this season's growth.

MORE

There's still time to plant some summer annuals to enjoy before frost comes. They are zinnias, marigolds, cleome, balsam, tithonia, snow on the mountain, sweet alyssum, coxcomb, late cosmos.

Get above seed in ground at once, and be sure they do not dry out. Make a tiny trench, fill it with water, then plant the seed. Cover the small seed lightly with soil — the larger ones a little deeper. If there's no rain for several days, water. These seed must have moisture to sprout.

CUTTINGS

The current season's growth has hardened on most plants, so this is a good time to root cuttings from azaleas, camellias and other evergreens. Cuttings may be rooted in the yard, in a flat or cutting box or in the green house. To root cuttings in the yard, select a well drained, shaded spot, preferably on the north side of the house.

Make cuttings from three to six inches in length, using only healthy ones with no disease. Remove all leaves except the upper two. Using a commercial growth promoting preparation gives good results as root inducers. These materials hasten root formation. Roots are formed in a short length of time. Use according to instructions.

Good rooting media includes coarse builder's sand, mixture of sand and peat moss, or a mixture of sand and vermiculite. For full instructions on rooting cuttings call our office for a camellia bulletin written by Kimbrough, Hanchey and Roussel. What applies to camellias will apply to other evergreens, when it comes to information for cuttings.

HINTS

For those who are high waisted, try a contour belt. They seem to bring the waist line down.

The short skirt continues to be popular. Just an inch or two below the knee seems to be the favored length. "Never, no never," say the fashion designers, "should a woman wear a skirt just in the bend of the knee. This is an ugly and awkward length."

Late summer hosiery colors are white - washed tints and near-neutrals. Pale beige and cloudlike gray, both harmonize with the many neutrals.

White shoes and practically all other summer shoes can be kept clean and new looking for a long time if you use the right method. The dressing or polish used depends largely on the type of shoes. There is no one cleaner equally good for all white shoes. Read the label on the cleaner container carefully to be certain that it will be satisfactory for the type leather or fabric in the shoes you have.

White shoes should always be cleaned while off the feet. Wait until they are thoroughly dry to wear them, or they may stretch out of shape. Before cleaning shoes always put in shoe trees or stuff with tissue to prevent shrinkage. Before you apply the cleaner, brush off any dirt, dust, or mud or old cleaner.

If you're a button popper, here's a tip dental floss is as easy to use yet much stronger than thread. It's also tops for stringing beads and pearls.

To give gold or gold - plated jewelry a new look, immerse each piece for one-half minute in a solution of 2 parts hydrogen peroxide and one part household ammonia. Or buy one of those inexpensive prepared mixtures especially for this purpose.

Safety Urged In Charcoal Use On Picnic

Charcoal is a convenient fuel for barbecues, grills, picnics and campfire cooking. But safety measures are required for successful use.

In a statement they said:

"Be sure to set up your grill or dig the barbecue pit in an open place, well away from buildings, trees, dry leaves, grass or brush. If you use a charcoal - lighting fluid be sure to use it according to directions. Soak a little into the briquets before lighting them, and be sure there is no liquid fuel that has not soaked in when you start the fire. Never use gasoline, paint thinner or any other highly combustible fluid to kindle charcoal."

SAFEST

Safest way to kindle charcoal is to use dry, crumpled paper, or a light substance - like excelsior, under the pile of charcoal. Then simply light the paper as in starting an ordinary wood fire. It may take a little fanning to get the charcoal kindled. When grey or whitish spots appear around the edge of charcoal, these mean that it is kindled. In 20 minutes or so it will be hot enough to grill.

The charcoal chef — and others who join in the cook-out — should wear heavy, fireproofed gloves both in building the fire and using it. A fireproof or fire-resistant apron is a safeguard, too.

"Have on hand a sprinkling can full of water — one with a long spout preferred — to douse the fire in an emergency or when leaving the picnic site," officials warn. "Cooking will be done more conveniently with long-handled forks, tongs, skewers, skillets and saucepans. It is easier, too, if you have long - handled swabs or brushes for barbecue sauce.

Two Stamps Commemorate UN Founding

To honor the 15th anniversary of its establishment, the United Nations will issue a set of two new stamps on Oct. 24, United Nations Day. The 4-cent stamp will be blue and white and the 8-center will be black and white.

Featured on the stamps will be part of the United Nations' preamble, "We the peoples of the United Nations determined to

To obtain first day cancellations of the stamps, send remittances and envelopes to the United Nations Postal Administrations, United Nations, N. Y. prior to Oct. 24.

The 1961 edition of the New World Wide Postage Stamp Catalog (Volumes I and II) and the New American Stamp Catalog by Minkus Publications will be on the market in September.

The New World Wide catalog includes more than 100,000 price changes, nearly all of them reflecting the upward trend of the stamp market. It contains complete listings of all major and many interesting minor varieties of all the stamps ever issued at present market values.

The New American Stamp Catalog for 1961 contains lists and prices of all U. S. issues, including revenues, postal stationary, duck stamps, postage dues, Confederates, U. S. Territories and Possessions, and the United Nations.

Japan has issued a new 10-yen stamp to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Japanese immigration to Hawaii. Depicted on the adhesive is a rainbow spanning the Pacific Ocean and the linking of cherry blossoms with pineapples.

The Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa has issued a set of stamps with three different designs to honor the Fifth World Forestry Congress to be held in Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 29. The designs depict forest breeding, forest protection and production of lumber.

ANOTHER WAY to beat the summer's heat and humidity: live outdoors in the mountains where even the pictures can look cool and refreshing. This was shot by P. Damm, Stuttgart, Germany with an Ikoflex camera at 1/100th at f/16 with medium speed film.

CAMERA NOTES

Warm Weather Leaves Mark On Dark Room

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Has the hot, humid weather of summer left its mark on your photo equipment? Does your darkroom smell musty and is there mildew on your photo paper or rust on your paper cutter blade? They are the results of excessive moisture and poor air circulation and are particularly noticeable in basement darkrooms.

EXPENSIVE

1. The most expensive answer to the problem is installation of an air conditioner. It's an answer most amateurs can not afford. A less expensive moisture remover is a dehumidifier. It's a small refrigerating unit which can condense up to three gallons of water from the air every 24 hours. An accessory humidistat, plus connection to a drain pipe, will make the dehumidifier automatic. However, it's still an expensive way to get rid of darkroom moisture.

2. Hang a drying agent in the darkroom. Silica gel, recommended for photographic uses, comes in 12 ounce bags which cost about $1.25 each, is obtainable in many hardware stores. About three bags are ample for average darkrooms. After absorbing an equal weight of water, [illegible] bag can be dried out in the kitchen stove and used over again.

Silica gel can also be hung from a [illegible] covered and sealed with a plastic bag. It'll prevent rusting.

3. Dry the darkroom with heat. An electric heater can be run for a couple of hours during or after a rainy or humid spell. Or electric light bulbs can be left burning, day and night, in the darkroom or in a closet where materials are stored.

TANK COVERS

4. Don't leave solutions in uncovered trays or pools of water to stand in the sink. Make tight fitting tray and tank covers for solutions which are not in use.

5. Keep working areas dry. Bench tops and wood areas should be painted first to prevent moisture absorption and should be dried after working sessions. Place newspapers under trays before starting work to absorb splashes and spills. [illegible] are discarded, they should be removed entirely from the room and thrown away.

6. Keep basement windows closed in hot, humid weather. The air outside contains more moisture, especially at night, than the air indoors, says Burnham. The hot, damp outside air gets into the cooler darkroom, and its temperature begin to drop. As its capacity to hold moisture decreases, the excess moisture condenses on cool surfaces. If there were continuous good air circulation throughout the basement, it would offset the air cooling process.

7. Don't let clothes dryers exhaust their hot, damp air indoors. You can install a venting system to the outside with flexible plastic pipe or a galvanized tin pipe.

8. If you have a ventilating fan in the darkroom, draw the air supply from indoors and let the exhaust go outdoors. The air indoors is drier than the air outdoors in humid weather.

9. Protect metal equipment with rust preventative or oil. Clean off any rust which may have started, apply a light coating of machine oil and wipe with a clean rag. A fine film will remain which will act as a rust preventative. This does not apply to internal camera parts, however! That's a job for a specialist.

10. Keep the darkroom door closed after you've taken any of the suggestions listed.

Fourth O'Neill Play

NEW YORK (AP) — "More Stately Mansions," the fourth in a planned cycle of nine Eugene O'Neill plays, will have its world premiere at the Royal Dramatic Theater in Stockholm in September.

The theater also was the one where three other posthumous O'Neill dramas were premiered. Two have been seen by American audiences — "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "A Touch of the Poet." Plans to present "Hughie," the third in the series, have been postponed.

O'Neill's widow, Mrs. Carlotta Monterey O'Neill, made it clear that the Swedish production of "More Stately Mansions" would be the only one.

The play, which would have taken some 10 hours on stage in its original form, has been adapted by Dr. Karl Gierow, who found the manuscript in the Yale University library. It now has been condensed to a playing time of four hours.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Green Thumb Club Exhibits

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The Green Thumb Garden Club of the Twin Cities exhibited an interesting flower show in the Garden Center.

Mrs. Suzee Gorman and Mrs. Ralph Newman designed a modified Hogarth curve in tones of rose. A grey pillow vase was placed on one end of a black plaque to give balance to the whole picture. Rose colored danias and perennial phlox were placed in the focal area of the curved design. Pink variegated caladium leaves were used to emphasize the "S" curve. Branches of Artemisa formed the curved line. This beautiful color combination was suitable for the daughters' room.

WHITE, GREEN

A white and green church arrangement was made by Mrs. Suzee Gorman. Beautiful white Philippeneses lilies, white and green variegated caladium and Snow on the Mountain (Euphorbia Marinata) formed a large mass triangle design against the green fronds of Woods fern. This arrangement was made in a white urn shaped vase.

Mrs. Earl Ferguson made a fruit and foliage composition in a tan, footed, pottery container placed on a tan mat. Oranges, pears, apples, and yellow grapes were grouped in the foreground of the design, with the yellow grapes extending over the rim of the container on one side. Varigated euonymus was placed in the crevices. Yellow banded sansevieria was used as spike material in back and above the fruit. This design was suitable for the buffet.

Mrs. T. E. Humphries chose a curved slab of an elm tree for her Oriental design. A Chinese fisherman was the basis of interpretation. The coloring in the figurine proclaimed its suitability. From the base of rocks and tree fungus placed at the feet of the figurine green hydrangea blossoms 'peeped out.' Driftwood and echeveria were effectively used in the composition.

FORMED

Branches of Winged Elm formed the tree under which the fisherman stood. A good arrangement for the television.

Mrs. J. W. Goldson made a mass vertical composition in tones of tan and green. It has a tan-green pottery vase placed on a tan base, which held the design made of the flowers of the Chinese Varnish Tree and dried aspidistria leaves.

The Green Thumb Garden Club also exhibited an interesting collection of horticulture.

Lily Early Art Feature

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The Madonna lily is one of the oldest plants in cultivation. It is featured in the art of the Cretans of 1500 B.C. and from that period to the present in our church art as the symbol of innocence and purity. Throughout the centuries, artists have drawn and painted this pure white lily in association with the Madonna and Child.

Our open sunny winters and the drought we have at some time or other during most summers are to the liking of the Madonna lily. This and our own little native Catesbey's lily have a rosette of evergreen leaves that need the winter sunshine to develop properly. They go completely to sleep in summer and seem to need a good baking to mature the bulbs.

PLANTING TIME

Madonna lilies should be planted in August if possible. Soil that will raise good vegetables will be adequate for the lilies. Spread enough bone meal over the surface to make the ground white. Then spread a pound of 5-10-5 chemical fertilizer to each 100 square feet and dig these fertilizers in. The bulbs should be set out with only two inches of soil above the tops. Deeper planting may result in no flowers. Too deep or too late planting may have been the trouble if you have been unable to get this plant to flower.

The rosettes of evergreen leaves which appear in a week or so after you plant Madonna lilies are beautiful in themselves. This is why this lily is so often seen within a foot or so of the edge of flower beds. The long stems, crowned with their heads of beautiful white flowers are most effective rising from the lower plants near the edge of beds where they can be enjoyed intimately.

Madonnas are susceptible to Botrytis blight. Keep dead foliage picked off the plants. Air must circulate about the foliage at all times and the foliage of other plants must not crowd the leaf rosettes. It is well to clean out all dead foliage in spring before the flower stems arise and to spray the leaves with Bordeaux mixture at intervals of about 10 days. You will not have to do this very long because the foliage will all die down in early summer.

House Plants Revitalized In Garden Plots

The best place for houseplants to spend the summer is in clay pots buried rim-deep in garden soil.

The good light and natural growing conditions of the outdoors are what plants need after a winter living in the house. Natural soil nutrients pass through the sides of the clay pot; moisture conditions are uniform. Plants will thrive — double in size—and regain full vigor for another season beautifying the home next winter.

PLUNGING

The technique of setting pots in the garden for the summer is called "plunging." It is just as simple as scooping a hole in the earth, setting the pot in it, and firming the soil around the pot. There are, however, some refinements which benefit the plant — and make things simpler for you.

There is no point in plunging a plant unless it is in a clay pot. Other kinds don't allow the transmission of lifegiving moisture. So if a plant is in some other kind of a container, re-pot it into clay.

DEPTH

Don't sink the pot too deep. All or most of the collar around the top of the clay pot should be above ground. If it is flush with the earth, soil will wash into the pot, surround the stem and cause damage to the plant. Quite often, when this happens, roots will develop above the crown, spreading over a considerable distance. When the plant is lifted, these roots are lost — and the plant suffers for it, having become dependent on them.

EXTENSION NEWS

Lily Planting Time Is Here

By AUDREY DAWSON

There are many jobs that we need to do in our garden this month. If you want madonna lilies, they should be planted in August for best results. Day lilies, regal lilies and others may be planted now or during September and October, but do not delay planting the madonna lily. Plant them about two inches deep.

Plant perennials flower seed now for blooms next spring. Some of the best are hollyhock, daisy, candytuft and poppy. Plant these seed in a well prepared seed bed. Keep watered but not soaking wet. In the fall, you may plant them to the place where they are to grow.

COLOR IN HOME

Our housefurnishing specialist, Mrs. Jessie Mae Hill, gives nine points for you, Mrs. Homemaker, to follow in choosing colors for your home. One definite pattern is enough. Don't confuse a color plan with a jumble of designs.

Some colors are cool — use these in a too sunny room. Some colors are warm — cheer up a dull cold room with these. Unequal areas of color are more pleasing. Plan about two - thirds of your room in one color to be safe. Wood is a color too, consider the tones of wood pieces as part of your whole color scheme.

Bold colors advance — seem to bring objects closer to you.

Color is affected by its neighbors. A white lamp blends into a pale beige wall, against black — it is dramatic — used with a medium value it both brightens and blends. A little poem will help you remember the elements of a well decorated room. Be sure to include: something dark; something light; something dull; something bright. Don't be afraid to use color as a home decorator. It's your best friend.

Mrs. C. D. Henderson, president of our Ouachita Home Demonstration Council, will leave August 25th to attend the National Home Demonstration Council meeting which will be held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. There will be some 3,000 delegates representing 7½ million homemakers.

The five - point program that will be discussed by the delegates consists of topics as family life, health, safety, citizenship and international relations.

Topping the list of speakers will be C. M. Ferguson, director of the Federal Extension Service, Washington, D. C.

The group of homemakers from Louisiana will go by bus and will visit historic points of interest en route to Wisconsin and parts of Canada. Mrs. Henderson will return September 9th.

KITCHEN PLANNING

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are planning to build a new home or to remodel, the kitchen is an important part of the house for you. As a final check in planning, you may find this list of dos and don'ts helpful. Don't install range and refrigerator side by side. Don't install a built-in oven too high. High mounting can result in burns and make it difficult to remove pans. Place it so that the open oven door is about three inches below elbow level. Don't put your range under a window, it's against many building codes and makes it difficult to open and close the window.

Do check door swing. Doors that open against the face of an appliance should be rehung on the other side of the door joint or hinge to swing out rather than in. Do see that when appliances face each other (refrigerator across the aisle from range) minimum clearance is 42 inches — 48 if possible.

Mental Illness Number 3

New Psychiatric Drugs Said To Be Excellent

Editor's Note — Even in the grim "back wards" of America's mental institutions, the new psychiatric drugs have imposed a measure of calm and order. But the illness itself remains unconquered, and hope is still distant for many thousands of chronic patients. In this third of four articles an AP reporter provides a sobering close-up.

By ROGER GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Critics of the new psychiatric drugs are relatively few in number among those who have witnessed the astonishing transformation in U.S. mental hospitals since the drugs were introduced five years ago.

But some doctors complain that the tranquilizers merely mask the symptoms of mental illness and that behind the mask, ready to explode when the drug wears off the dangerous sickness still exists.

Dr. Paul Feldman, research director at Topeka State Mental Hospital in Kansas, cites the case of Max ----, long known as the most dangerous patient ever admitted to the hospital.

FIVE YEARS

For five years, Max terrorized a whole ward. Although kept in handcuffs, he attacked patients, doctors and nurses.

Today, under treatment with psychiatric drugs, Max has calmed down sufficiently so that he has complete freedom of the hospital grounds.

"But tranquilizers haven't cured Max," says Dr. Feldman. "Deep inside him lies the same violence he always had. The drug has only controlled his aggressiveness. Take away the drug and he would revert to violence."

Critics contend, too, that some mental hospitals are discharging patients too fast — [illegible] simply to make [illegible] ing tide of new [illegible].

Convalescent mental patients, improved enough to be discharged or sent home on furlough, are normally instructed to continue taking the drugs. Often they forget, or cannot afford to buy the expensive pills, or are deceived by their own quietude into believing they have fully recovered and no longer need medication.

The danger of premature release was dramatically illustrated on Nov. 23, 1959, when Grace Thrailkill, 31, of Rossville, Ga., a former mental patient, beat her four small children to death with a claw hammer.

Worried by this risk factor, mental hospital authorities repeatedly emphasize the necessity of post - hospital supervision—by community clinics, social workers, and so-called "halfway houses" where discharged patients spend a few weeks or months before returning to full-scale community life.

One of the many sad statistics of mental illness is that more than one-third of all patients who are released as cured or improved suffer relapses and must return for further treatment.

Dr. Henry Brill, chief of New York's mammoth Pilgrim State Mental Hospital at Brentwood, L.I., who pioneered the mass use of tranquilizing drugs in 1955, has little patience with those who scoff at the drugs as just another fad.

Sixty per cent of New York's 88,000 state mental hospital patients are now on one or more of the 79 different "mood control" pills as part of their daily regimen.

"There is absolutely no question that the drugs have revolutionized our mental hospitals," Dr. Brill said in an interview.

"Our basement storerooms are jammed to the ceiling with folded-up beds we no longer need—1,200 of them here at Pilgrim alone. Our patients are still sick, but they're not assaultive and we do not have really disturbed wards any more.

Dr. Brill, 54, a gentle, kind-eyed man who has been at Pilgrim since 1932, unlocked the heavy wooden door to a women's violent ward.

"This is the most disturbed ward in the entire hospital 240 psychotic women," he said. "Five years ago, before we started using the drugs, it was pandemonium. Women screaming, tearing off their clothes, fighting. Today you won't hear a sound."

In two full days of trudging through ward after ward, I heard only one muffled scream among Pilgrim's 16,000 mental patients. Less than 30 patients in the entire institution were under restraint—in strait jackets or locked in seclusion rooms. Many hundreds seemed to be enjoying TV or strolled peacefully on the tree-shaded grounds.

As Dr. Brill walked slowly through the wards, patient after patient approached him to discuss their illness. Again and again they asked, "When can I go home, doctor?"

Dr. Brill motioned a tall, raw-boned man of 37 to sit down for a private talk. In a dull, listless voice, like a man in a dream, the patient, a former well-paid draftsman, said he had been there six years and thought he was getting better, though he still heard voices.

"I like to get out, doctor."

Very slowly—because you don't make sudden movements in the presence of disturbed mental patients—Dr. Brill took the man's wrists and pushed back the sleeves. Both wrists were criss-crossed at least a dozen times with the thin white scars of attempted suicide. "A chronic schizophrenic—there is about one chance in five that he'll ever get out," Dr. Brill said.

Later, the doctor paused to speak to Jim—, a patient with "a typical Mona Lisa smile," as Dr. Brill described him. A huge, bulge-muscled Negro, Jim looked up with stormy eyes and a beaming smile when Dr. Brill asked him his name.

"I dunno—it might be—is it Jim?" he sounded dubious.

"How do you feel, Jim?"

"Mixed up. I can't think no more." He shook his head, laughing a peculiar mirthless laugh.

Farther on we came to "The Pacer," 25, a stocky youth whose black paratroop boots thudded harshly as he strode rapidly up and down the long ward.

"Why do you walk so fast, Mike?" Dr. Brill said.

"I don't know. Seems like I've always been running," Mike said. "I ran away from home when I was 17. Guess I never stopped running."

At Georgia's Milledgeville State Hospital, I visited some of its back wards where chronic psychotics, beyond hope of recovery, wait to die.

Accompanied by Dr. Edwin W. Allen, 63, a staff psychiatrist, we stopped to listen to a skinny, pixie-faced old man, naked except for trousers, who sat on a narrow wooden bench and babbled a torrent of incoherent words.

"Fruit salad" talk, the psychiatrists call it. Dr. Allen asked the old man how long he had been there. "Three years." He had been there since 1920.

In a nearby cell, sitting on the cement floor with crippled legs twisted under him, an old man smiled feebly and asked, "Where's my baby?"

Years ago, soon after arriving at Milledgeville, the old man had "adopted" an idiot baby who had been placed in the same ward.

Year after year the old man mothered the baby as it grew through childhood and manhood, finally they took the idiot away and put him in another ward, but the old man always asks for his baby.

As we left the drab old building with its 560 chronic patients, Dr. Allen said: "Of course you pity them, but they're about as happy as most of us. There's a lot of talk about putting the worst cases out of their misery—euthanasia, mercy death — but they wouldn't agree to that.

"Their families wouldn't, either. It's wonderful to see the devotion of families to these unfortunates. They come on visits year after year, long after all hope is gone."

Of the 560 patients, Dr. Allen said "one or two of them might get out some day." Some have been there since 1900.

For many of these chronic schizophrenics, paranoiacs and manic depressives, the new "wonder drugs" came too late.

"There's not much you can do about the chronics except custody. Few of them respond to the drugs," said Dr. Irville H. MacKinnon, 62, distinguished former New York psychiatrist, now $25,000-a-year superintendent at Milledgeville.

About one-third of all psychotics —those with acute mental disorders — recover spontaneously, Dr. MacKinnon said.

But the victims of mental affliction who shun treatment, perhaps hidden away for years in an attic or secluded backroom by families ashamed of the "stigma" of insanity, are generally beyond help by the time they reach a mental hospital.

Paradoxically, the more violently disturbed a new patient is, the better the chances for recovery.

"The patient we like to see is the one who comes through the door fighting, kicking and screaming and dragging three or four attendants with him," Dr. MacKinnon said.

"Then we know he's got a good chance to go home. It means he hasn't withdrawn from life and we can still reach him with therapy."

Dr. Robert H. Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health and president of the American Psychiatric Association, estimates a new patient has about a 50-50 chance of leaving a mental hospital within 12 months. After two years, the odds against leaving rise to 16-1, after five years 99-1.

U.S Denies Charges By Communists

BERLIN (UPI) — Communist East Germany Saturday accused the U.S. Army of transporting war materials allegedly manufactured in West Berlin to West Germany over Soviet zone highways.

American Army authorities branded the charge as an outright lie. "We are not in the commercial trucking business," an Army spokesman said.

The East German news agency ADN said information from "workers at West Berlin factories producing armaments for NATO" said that a "great part" of the "war materials" were shipped to the West by U.S. Army trucks on East German routes.

It said the goods included special radar equipment and radio directional finders.

The West has had similar charges lodged against it in recent weeks in a move apparently designed to put pressure on the United States to get its troops out of the isolated city. It was the first time the Army has been charged with transporting the goods.

Friday night, Hans Seigewasser, head of the Berlin branch of the Communist National Front told an East Berlin forum that a separate peace treaty between East Germany and the Russians might be signed if the West German government goes through with plans to convene Parliament in West Berlin next fall.

The Western Allies and the West Berlin government have repeatedly denied that war goods are being produced in the free part of the city.

Saturday's accusation by ADN made no threats about halting or harassing U.S. convoys on East German roads. The last time such action was taken was Feb., 1959, when Soviet border guards held up four West bound U.S. trucks for 56 hours claiming the right to search them. Their claim was thwarted by U.S. diplomatic officials and the trucks were allowed to continue.

ALONG BROADWAY

34 Theaters Will Start Fall Season

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway has 34 theaters available for the start of the new season — two more than last fall — thanks to recovery of the Hudson and the Mansfield (now named the Brooks Atkinson) from the radio-television people.

And, if you suddenly came up with a guaranteed hit that employed the biggest names in show business, you couldn't get into one of them. There's the usual fall booking jam, which actually exists, on paper at least, from the prevoius spring when the producers begin nailing down homes for their fall projects.

The major factor in this annual fall theater jam, which has become increasingly dominant in the past decade, is the fact that there are many hold-over hits, the shows that run one, two or three seasons.

The long - long run attraction is a phenomenon that began to develop during the World War II years, and it has waxed during a period when the number of legitimate houses has waned.

Back in the 1920's, before talkies, radio and TV, there were well over 200 Broadway productions a season as against an average of 55 to 60 in recent years, and at the peak there were some 80 houses to put them in.

But as important the number of houses was the fact that in those days, and into the 1930's, the biggest hit seldom lasted a calendar year. A nine - month run, except in rare cases, was sensational. So, you could exect to have a majority of the houses available at the start of each new season.

But this fall at least a dozen of the 34 available houses will be occupied already by hold-over attractions that promise to last well into the new season. That leaves 22 theaters available for new stuff, and it just happens that there are 22 attractions booked to open in them during September, October and November.

It is true that some of the theaters are empty now and will not get their new tenants in certain cases until November. But in view of current theater economics, and the desirability of heavy advance sales, it is a desperate producer who will take an interim booking of a few weeks in one of these already committeed houses.

If he should come up with a hit, where does he move? The show that has the prior booking for the theater may be a one-week flop, but a contract is a contract. There's a saying that "a hit never goes homeless," but that's not as true as it may have been when coined. It is not always a question of getting a theater, but often success depends on getting a "desirable" one.

Air National Guard Gets High Praise

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Gov. John Patterson of Alabama saluted the Air National Guard Saturday night as a combat-ready force fully equal to the challenge of push-button warfare.

He told the officers and men on the 117th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, in a prepared speech, that their organization "now stands at the highest point of combat readiness in its history."

Patterson's address, at a banquet for military and civic leaders, climaxed a review of the wing encampment by himself and Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

Patterson reminded the Guardsmen that "in this day of instant, push-button warfare, there won't be time to train after the bell rings.

"We must be able to move instantly, and by your efforts, I believe we will be able to do just that."

He said part of the success of the 117th wing has come from "the close cooperation and relationship between the various states and organizations."

He described the Air Guard as "only one of the many ties" that bind Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi together.

RESIDENTS FLEE

Raging Forest Fire Razes Small Town

FORESTHILL, Calif. (UPI)—An explosive forest fire destroyed the town of Michigan Bluff late Saturday after its 100 residents fled hastily, leaving all their belongings.

About 50 homes were destroyed in Michigan Bluff, seven miles west of here. Two other communities were also evacuated ahead of the racing flames. They were Bath, with 20 residents and Baker Ranch with a population of 25.

Foresthill itself, which has a population of 500, was endangered as the fast-moving fire raced up the western slopes of the Sierra.

The American Red Cross set up emergency headquarters in the Foresthill Memorial Hall to care for the fire refugees.

Residents from Michigan Bluff said they had to leave their homes with no time to take any belongings.

California Division of Forestry officials said the fire, which was man-caused, broke out late Saturday afternoon and quickly spread through the dry timber. Some witnesses said whole canyons full of trees seemed to explode into flames as the fire spread. By 7 p. m. (10 p. m. edt) 1,000 acres were ablaze and there was no hope for control, officials said.

"Back fires" were deliberately set around Foresthill to clear a buffer around the town to protect it from the main fire. Barring a wind change, the town was not in immediate danger.

Witnesses said smoke shot 15,000 feet into the sky over the area. Smoke from this fire and several others in the Sierra blackened the sky over Reno, Nev., more than 50 miles east.

One of the other flash fires broke out Saturday afternoon near Donner Lake and was also out of control Saturday night, after it grew to 1,000 acres.

Texas Woman Slain In Store At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—Police said they suspended search Saturday night for W. B. Dupree, 61, who was sought for questioning in connection with the pistol slaying of a 43-year-old Texas woman in Dupree's grocery and market here.

Officers said Dupree fled from his store after Mrs. Betty Jean Norman, Houston, Tex., a former employe, was shot to death. Dupree's truck was found near a wooded area here, and officers planned to resume the search for him Sunday.

Mrs. Norman was found dead on the floor of Dupree's store. She had been shot in the chest three times with a .38-caliber pistol. Officers said apparently two shots were fired after she had been felled by the first shot; two bullet holes were found in the flooring beneath her body.

Mrs. Norman, who formerly was employed by Dupree, had gone to Texas and had married. She returned to Shreveport Friday on a visit.

A 12-year-old girl, Arnell Anderson, who had been in the Dupree store, told police that Dupree told her to leave, that as she left the store she heard shots fired and she saw Dupree, with a pistol in his hand, go toward his truck.

Powers Family Tours Moscow

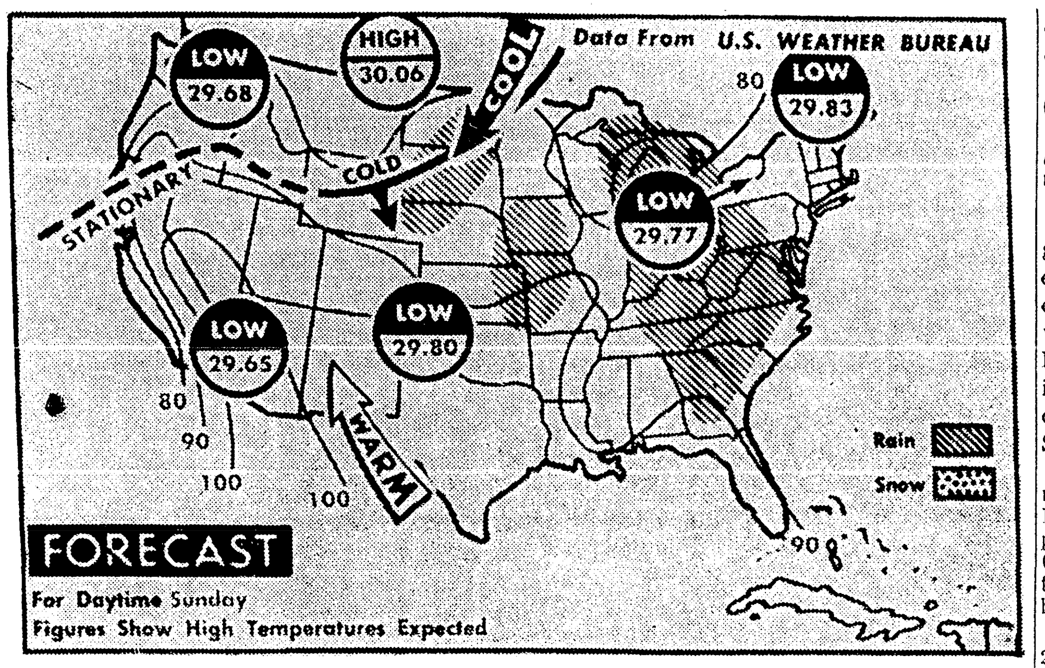
"Ida was opposed, but she went anyway, finally," her doctor told reporters.

They went first to Lenin Stadium, to Moscow University, and then drove to the site in Gorky Park where the remains of their son's U2 plane had been on public display.

They lunched at an outdoor pavilion in the park and drove through Red Square past the Kremlin on the way back to their hotel.



SHOWERS are expected for Great Lakes region, the Ohio, Tennessee, upper and middle Mississippi valleys, portions of the southeastern and Great Plains. It will be warmer in New England and middle Atlantic states and cooler in northern Plains. (AP Wirephoto)

MAP SUMMARY

The pattern of thunderstorm activity again covered a broad section of the nation during the late afternoon and evening Saturday. The principal area of widespread activity was located in the upper and central Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and into the middle Atlantic states. Widely scattered showers also dotted portions of northern New England and the Gulf Coast states and extended from western Kansas and the south plains of Texas through the central and southern Rockies and plateaus. Many of the more vigorous thunderstorms brought local gusty winds, hail, and substantial rainfall deposits. Funnel clouds or tornadoes were reported in western Kansas, Wisconsin and Iowa and moderate hail in Kansas, Oklahoma and Michigan during the afternoon.

Hail 1½ inches in diameter pelted Joplin, Missouri, and over 1½ inches of rain was measured at Nowata, Oklahoma, in about 30 minutes. Some afternoon and early evening rainfall totals included Caribou, Maine, 1.54 inches; Cleveland, Ohio, 1.25 inches; Dodge City, Kansas, 0.47 inch: and Presidio, Texas, and Evansville, Indiana, 0.38 inch. Numerous stations in central and southern areas from the Rockies eastward recorded somewhat lighter amounts.

Late afternoon and early evening temperature readings in the mid 80s and low 90s were the most frequent across the nation. Cooler 70s were maintained in the northern Rockies and Pacific northwest and in shower cooled sections of the Mississippi Valley, Great Lakes and New England. Some 60s were felt along the Pacific coastline while 100s covered portions of Utah, the desert southwest and the interior valleys of California.

The forecast for today includes the possibility of scattered mostly afternoon and evening thundershowers from the Mississippi Valley and Texas eastward to the middle and south Atlantic states. Widely scattered thundershowers are also forecast from the southern and central sierras eastward to the southern Rockies and the western plains. Low clouds and fog will be general along the Pacific coastline in the morning and late afternoon showers may dampen the Washington coast. Temperatures should be a little cooler than Saturday in the northwestern plains, in the desert southwest and slightly warmer and more humid in the northeastern states. Little significant change is expected elsewhere.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will receive Monday his first publicly announced invitation for a speaking engagement after he leaves the White House.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Saturday Finis E. Davis, president of Lions International, has a White House appointment Monday at which he will ask Eisenhower to speak at the Lions' 44th annual convention in Atlantic City in June 1961.

Hagerty did not say whether Eisenhower would accept the date. He said that while this is the first publicly announced post-presidency speaking invitation to Eisenhower, other invitations have been received by Eisenhower privately.

Vice Premier's Forces Seize Mali's Capital

DAKAR, Mali Federation (AP) — The newly independent Mali Federation was threatened with partition Saturday night after a tense day that found Acting President Modibo Keita a virtual prisoner in his own capital.

In a day that saw bloodshed threatened, followers of his archrival, Vice Premier Mamadou Dia, seized control of this capital and major port city.

Keita is from the former French Sudan. Dia is from the former French Senegal, most populous of the two states in the federation formed only last year. The federation became independent June 20.

In a bid to become a strongman, Keita dismissed Dia Friday and declared a state of urgency —corresponding to martial law.

Keita was at a disadvantage in the struggle since Dakar, seat of the federation government, is in Senegal. He thus tried his coup in the heart of Dia's territory.

Surrounded by his supporters, Keita was reported to be closely confined at Government House. His hand-picked army chief, Col. Soumare, was arrested by Dia's men.

Keita also is premier of Sudan, and Dia is premier of Senegal. Keita dismissed Dia in a move to strengthen his position before the Mali presidential elections scheduled for Aug. 27. Dia responded by withdrawing Senegal from the federation, and Keita countered with a declaration of a state of urgency.

Both Radio Senegal and Radio Mali are now in the hands of Senegalse authorities. Previously the two stations broadcast contradictory directives and reports since Radio Mali had been operated by Keita supporters. The two stations reported Saturday night that Keita had called for intervention of French troops and that the request had been denied.

Congolese Court Accuses Belgian Of Kidnap Try

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — A Congolese court Saturday accused Gaston Dieu, Belgian manager for Sabena Airlines here, of trying to kidnap a cousin of Premier Patrice Lumumba. Dieu was released in $10,000 bail after denying the charge.

Later at the French Embassy where Dieu sought refuge, armed Congolese police seeking to re-arrest him left quietly after a French embassy official gave them a case of beer.

During his arraignment, Dieu said he had nothing to do with the fact that the plane with Lumumba's cousin, identified only as Monombe, aboard failed to make a scheduled stop at Luluabourg where Monombe was to disembark, it landed instead at Elisabethville in secessionist Katanga Province where Monombe allegedly was arrested by Belgian paratroopers.

Dieu countercharged that the Congolese held him in jail for five days without benefit of counsel and had beaten him. He stripped off his shirt to show the judge his wounds.

Report Issued On Communist Spy Activities

BONN (UPI)—Western intelligence organizations have estimated the Communists have 500,000 espionage agents throughout the world and spend 2 billion dollars a year on propaganda, spying and infiltration activities, an official West German report said Saturday.

The bulletin, the official government organ, published the report. It also said some intelligence experts estimate the money the Communists spent on these activities might even run as high as $4 billion annually.

Communist spies are trained at 20 schools in Prague, Czechoslovakia; Warsaw, Poland, Budapest, Hungary, and Tashkent in the Soviet Union, the bulletin said.

"The top spies are trained in schools in Moscow and Leningrad," it reported.

It said the Czech school trains for underdeveloped nations particularly in Africa, while spies for the Near East and Arab countries are schooled in Tashkent. Peiping is the training center for agents going to the Far East and Budapest trains agents with the special task of infiltrating labor unions. All the schools are camuflaged, the bulletin said.

It said there are an estimated 12,000 Communist agents in France alone, with 20,000 each in Italy, Indonesia and India. The West German Interior Ministry previously had said there were 16,000 spies in West Germany. Tens of thousands of others were reported spread through the rest of the world.

"There is no need for further proof that the cold war. . .has a far higher classification in the East than in the West," the bulletin said.

Tropical Storm Cleo Heading Over Atlantic

BOSTON (UPI)—Tropical storm Cleo, no longer a hurricane, whirled northeastward over the Atlantic Ocean Saturday without ever touching the United States mainland.

The little storm which for a time had threatened New England's south coast early Saturday passed harmlessly out to sea without causing even abnormally high tides.

Government agencies paid more attention to the hurricane watch called by the weather bureau than did the general public in southern New England.

Cape Cod was jammed with tourists and though the area was a likely target for Cleo, most visitors and residents adopted a wait-and-see attitude and went about their normal pursuits. Summer theaters reported a thriving business last night.

Kidnap-Murder Suspect's Trial May Be Delayed

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The trial of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., charged with the kidnap-murder of a Virginia couple and their two young daughters, may not be held before December.

Leon H. A. Pierson, U. S. attorney for Maryland, said lawyers for Rees have indicated they will be unable to try the case Sept. 19 as he suggested.

Rees, 31, of Hyattsville, Md., will be tried in U.S. District Court here on federal charges of kidnapping and murdering Mrs. Carroll Jackson, 27, of Apple Grove, Va. and her daughter, daughter, Susan Ann, 5. Virginia authorities have charged him with killing Carroll Jackson, 29, and the couple's other daughter, Janet, 18-months.

The family disappeared from their automobile on a Virginia highway in January, 1959. Federal charges applied only to the mother and older daughter since only those two victims allegedly were transported from Virginia into Maryland where they were killed.

He Learns While He Earns

WORDS SHE WILL NEVER HEAR...

A great deal is being said and printed these days about juvenile delinquency. Many prominent educators, judges, statesmen, clergymen, and others are saying that a better use of leisure time by young people could greatly reduce the delinquency. One neighbor of Johnny Green's said this: "Kids don't know how to work these days." Another commented: "Some teenagers don't grow up; they just sit."

There may be much truth in what these people say. But the comments which they are making are not directed to the mother of Johnny Green. For Johnny is a newspaperboy. He has a business of his own — and work to do. He keeps busy—building his route, keeping accurate records, figuring out better ways to serve his customers. He's learning to accept responsibility as a way of everyday living. He's using his leisure time to grow up!

HOLLYWOOD NOTES

Star Julie Newmar Scared Of Height

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Julie Newmar takes sun baths under a blanket; believes movie acting is better than stage acting; thinks of gay Paris to feel sadness; relaxes by hurrying and is so tall her legs measure 33 inches from thigh to heel —yet is scared of height.

In a word, Julie is somewhat of a screwball, but delightfully so.

She has been a screwball since she first danced in movie musicals eight years ago. Reporters didn't quote her then.

They do now. Like another chorus girl of those days—Gwen Verdon, Julie went to New York and became a star.

SAME PART

She is playing the same part that got her Broadway's Tony award—and wearing the same scanty wardrobe.

Julie is a tall girl of exquisite architecture. She says she is 5 feet 11 but she looks much taller. That's because she likes 4-inch heels. She has no complex about her height.

"I can breathe in elevators. I can watch parades," she says. [illegible] tall prefer big girls. We remind them of their mothers, I guess.

"Tall people don't have to waste energy trying to look important. Little people get ahead because of frustration. We get ahead because of superiority."

Julie is big all over. For the statistic-minded, she is 39-23-39 and doesn't know her exact weight.

She drives the smallest car on the 20th Century-Fox lot and usually commands a goodly male audience every time she crawls into it.

Physically, her size doesn't do her any good fighting off men. That's why she thinks Paris is so depressing.

"A little man on the street there once hit me on the ear. I landed in the hospital for three days and couldn't hear for a month."

SHIELDED

She takes sunbaths by the pool with a blanket over her because "I like to feel blonde. It's a feminine color. Men look great dark but women don't. Blondes always need protection."

Julie owns 200 pairs of shoes and wears clinging jersey dresses when she wants to look sexy—or sexier. She never wears lipstick.

"I might want to kiss someone," she explains.

She has never been married.

"I've never been that much in love with anyone. When I do, it will be a rich, handsome genius. I think they make ideal husbands."

Julie, an exceptional dancer, might have gone along for years portraying showgirls or sexpots like "Stupefyin' Jones" in "Li'l Abner," which she did in both movie and stage versions.

Then her agent asked her to read for Joe Anthony, the director of "Marriage-Go-Round."

"I don't lie but I exaggerate so I told him I was Swedish and could speak Swedish."

The part called for a sexy Swede who wants a happily married man to father her baby eugenically—her body and beauty plus his brains.

"Mr. Anthony has hypnotic eyes. He gave me something to read in Icelandic. I thought it was Swedish. He didn't know either—so I got the part."

Investigate Two Thefts In Monroe

Monroe police are investigating two thefts and two attempted thefts that were reported to them yesterday.

Officers arrested a 16-year-old Negro boy for shoplifting in a downtown store. The boy was accused of taking an item valued at $1.50 from Morgan and Lindsey.

He is being held in the juvenile detention home and will be tried in juvenile court.

The theft of a fan from the Christian Children's Fund Headquarters at 721 DeSiard St. is still unsolved.

A worker at the establishment told police that she placed a 16-inch oscillating fan in the front part of the building yesterday morning and went to the back of the building. She said that when she returned, the fan was gone.

Mrs. Roy, of Frosty Kream, 1701 Jackson St., reported to police that someone tried to gain entrance to a cigarette machine which was situated just outside the building.

Investigating officers stated that the lock had been pried off the door of the machine, but that nothing had been taken from it.

In another theft attempt, it was reported that someone tried to break into a drink machine at the Lion Service Station at 1900 Jackson St. Friday night. A quarter-inch blade screwdriver was found near the machine, and police believe that it was used to pry the door of the machine.

Officers said that nothing was taken from the machine.

Man Injured In Two-Car Collision

A West Monroe man fell asleep behind the wheel of his car yesterday morning, causing a two-car collision which brought minor injuries to the driver of the second vehicle.

Injured was Ellis B. Peddy Jr., 30, of 102 Gulpha Drive, and the "sleepy" driver, Howard L. Hobson, 22, of 1110 Arkansas Rd., was charged with reckless driving.

The accident occurred at 5:20 a.m. at the intersection of Slack and Trenton streets, according to police. Damages amounted to over $100.

Hobson was traveling south on Trenton street when he stated that he fell asleep and his automobile strayed into the northbound traffic lane.

His vehicle struck the Peddy car, which was going south on Trenton Street.

Peddy was taken to the St. Francis hospital by a Kilpatrick's ambulance where he was treated and released yesterday afternoon.

Gen. Lemnitzer Wins Approval As Staff Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer won unanimous approval Saturday from the Senate Armed Services Committee for the top military post of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The committee also recommended confirmation for Gen. George Henry Decker, 58, as Army chief of staff to succeed Lemnitzer in that post.

It also approved retirement of Air Force Gen. Nathan F. Twining, present chairman of the military chiefs, as a four-star general. The exact retirement date is undetermined.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), chairman, said the favorable committee actions would be reported to the Senate this week, after lapse of the week of time the group always has observed before approving nominations.

Lemnitzer, 60, and Decker, one of the few Army chiefs who is not a West Point graduate, testified in person before the committee approved their promotions.

Negro Held In Valve Theft

Monroe Dixon, 34, of Route Three, Swartz, was arrested at noon yesterday in Monroe for the theft of a water valve.

Dixon allegedly picked the valve up, valued at less than $20, and was trying to sell it. The valve had been dug up by the city, and when workers came to pick it up, the valve was missing.

Dixon is being held on a $200 bond.

Consider Meeting

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President William V. S. Tubman says African nations are considering a meeting of chiefs of state or foreign ministers on the Congo situation. He told his weekly news conference he shuddered when he heard that Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba said the Congo regime had lost confidence in U. N. Secretary.

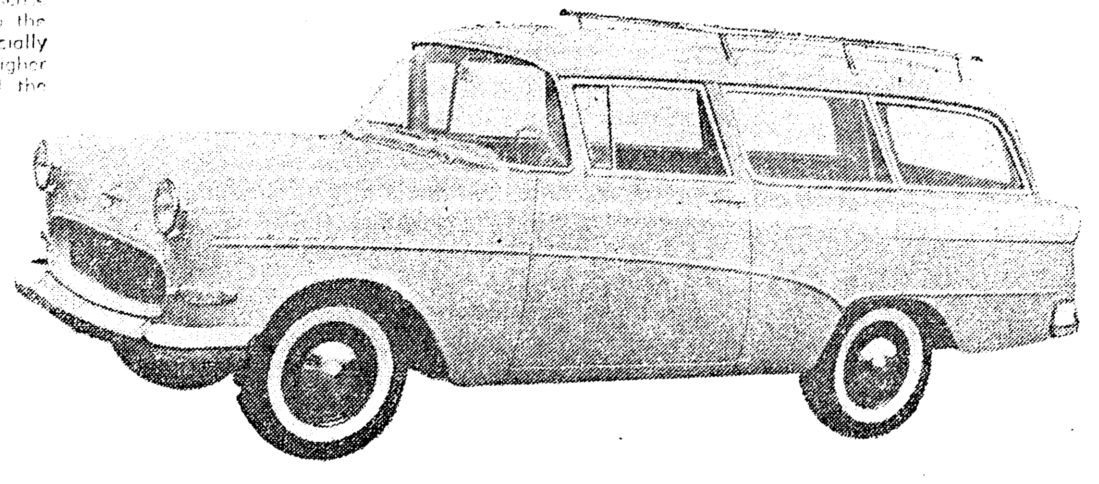
OPEL REKORD

Opel's trim 5-passenger Rekord sedan makes good motoring sense from every point of view. The styling is smooth and pleasant to the eye—nothing faddish about it. Performance is smart with especially good response at low speed as well as effortless cruising at higher speeds. All this plus gas mileage up to 30 M.P.G. makes Opel the "Luxurious Economy Car".



OPEL CARAVAN

Probably the most unusual thing about the Opel Caravan station wagon—aside from its economy of price and operation is the amount of cargo it can carry in relation to its size and weight . . . better than 2000 pounds. Opel pioneered in the use of utilized body construction. The present strength, rigidity, quietness and durability of the Opel body is the result of continuous design improvements over a period of more than 20 years.

We invite you to see and drive the OPEL soon.

SEGREGATION ROUNDUP

Spotlight This Fall Is On Situation At New Orleans

ATLANTA, (UPI) — The nation's school desegregation spotlight this fall is on New Orleans where a serious crisis could develop and involve both major presidential candidates in a few weeks, the Southern regional council said today.

In New Orleans, the council said, "the Deep South at last faces the demand that it comply with the law."

It warned of a danger of riots and violence attending the controversy in Louisiana.

But the council sad that "when desegregation breaches the Deep South the myth of Southern ability to defy the law will have been fatally punctured: the consequence could be an emotional release in the upper South to move without the lash of the law.

"If, on the other hand, the imminent (school closing) crisis in New Orleans is not overcome, or even if New Orleans treads the bitter path of Little Rock between 1957-59, the prospects will be gloomy for the South and for national self-respect."

The council is an organization of white and Negro Southerners interested in "equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Its annual report tonight on school desegregation for 1960-61 underscored the gravity of the New Orleans situation. It forecast a "distinct possibility" that under Louisiana's school closing laws public classrooms will be shuttered not only in New Orleans but in each parish of the state.

The city is under orders by Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright to desegregate its public schools beginning with the first grade at the 1960-61 term opening little more than a week away.

"What lies ahead in the next few weeks for New Orleans no one can forecast," it said. But it cited responsible beliefs that the city's schools would be closed. "And if the governor does not extend the closure throughout the state the federal courts, under the Norfolk precedent (equal protecton clause of the U. S. Constitution) almost certainly will."

"Within the existing claimate of Louisiana politics, there is also a danger of riots and violence.

"A serious crisis in New Orleans, especially if prolonged or violent, would almost force the presidential candidates to state what they would do about it if in office, and would surely involve the present national administration. The attendant controversy would be an omnipresent issue of the presidential campaign."

Louisiana's Gov. Jimmie H. Davis this week seized the New Orleans public school system from the school board and directed them to open Sept. 7 on a segregated basis until the legislature votes otherwise.

The NAACP previously asked Wright to enjoin Davis and state attorney general Jack Gremillion from any action to block the desegregation order.

Gremillion said Davis' seizure order was designed to let the legislature alone come up with a plan for integration and "leave to them what is deliberate speed in desegregating schools.

"The people of Louisiana are dead set on being left alone to run their schools as they see fit," he said.

New Orleans is the third largest segregated school system in the country, behind Houston and Dallas, Tex., neither of which were regarded in the report as Deep South locations. Atlanta, Ga., has been given until September, 1961, to come up with a desegregation plan.

"In a way," SRC said, "there is cause to regret that New Orleans, rather than Atlanta, wll be the first city of the Deep South to meet the test of desegregation. Unlike Atlanta, where the problem has been under vigorous citizen discussion since at least January, 1959, New Orleans has steadily, almost determinedly, ignored the likelihood that it would be affected."

It said a few citizens groups have been formed to defend open schools. But it said anti-integration sentiment in the city is strong and "there seems little doubt that extreme segregationist forces will, for a time at least, dominate opinion in the state at large, and will press the state government toward intransigence."

Other highlights of the SEC report:

—Houston, Tex. (under orders by Federal Judge Ben C. Connally to desegregate ts public schools system, sixth largest in the nation, this September) Houston's "defense of segregation...has been marked in ingenious procrastination" but unless the Court of Appeals decides differently, Houston schools will be desegregated in September. "The city has been curiously quiet, even in recent weeks."

Knoxville, Tenn. (faces the prospect of desegregation next term wth a stairstep integration plan.) "Community opinion does not seem to be particularly aroused, but it is believed to be willing to accept desegregation in stride."

—Pine Bluff, Ark. (where the Dollarway school district may be desegregate next month.) "The history of its conflict to date would suggest the possibility of another challenge to law and order."

—Florida. It is the state "where the most varied and most demanding challenges on school segregation are being carried out."

For the South as a whole, the report cited nearly 50 school desegregation cases on federal court dockets.

Dairy Princess Receives Crown

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana's dairy pricess for 1960 is 17-year-old Martha Ann Burford of Gloster.

The brown-eyed Grand Cane High School graduate was selected from a field of seven in the competition sponsored by the American Dairy Assn., of Louisiana.

Miss Burford was crowned by the 1959 dairy pricess, Sandra Girouard of Kaplan, who will represent the state in the American Dairy Assn. contest in Chicago this fall.

Dorothy Williams, Keithville, was chosen first runner-up. Margaret Troth, 19, Zachary, was second runner-up. Shirley Ann Vincent of New Iberia won the Miss Congeniality title.

OAS Ministers Vote To End Dominican Diplomatic Ties

CONGO CRISIS DEEPENS

Soviets Demand U.N. Withdraw Canadian Forces

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Russia Saturday denounced the United Nations plan for rehabilitation of the Congo as being designed only to please the United States and its allies.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov in a protest to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold also demanded the immediate withdrawal of all Canadian troops from the Congo because Canada is a NATO ally of Belgium.

Kuznetsov refused to tell a news conference whether Russia would offer at a Security Council session called for 12:30 p.m. EDT Sunday a resolution calling for an end to Hammarskjold's policies in the Congo.

AGAINST PROGRAM

However, he did say that if the issue came to a vote Russia would vote against the program followed in the U.N. Congo operation.

As delegates gathered for the emergency Sunday council session the Soviets sought to espouse the cause of the Congolese government by accusing the U.N. forces of "unlawful actions" in the Congo.

Kuznetsov told Hammerskjold in a private meeting that Russia "strongly objects" to the fact that U.N. forces were ordered to open fire if necessary at the Leopoldville airport in the Congo.

He accused Canadian troops at the airport of "launching an aggression" against the Congo and demanded that they be "immediately withdrawn" from the country.

Kuznetsov, in a 30-minute session with the U.N. chief, insisted that the Congolese government must have control over all airports in the country. He said that attacks against Congolese forces by U.N. troops "contradicted" the Security Council's order that U.N. forces "render military assistance to the government of the Republic of Congo."

Congo May Request Aid Outside U.N.

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo, (AP)—Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba said Saturday his government has authorized him to seek military and other aid outside the United Nations if his demands are not satisfied by the U. N. Security Council Sunday.

Lumumba said his Cabinet has authorized him to "make contact for direct aid from any country in all fields as from tomorrow."

GETS APPLAUSE

Government supporters attending the news conference and one or two Communist correspondents applauded when the Premier made his statement.

"That," said Lumumba, "is the applause of 14 million Congolese."

Asked where he would apply for aid if the Security Council did not agree to send the African-Asian observer group he has requested and meet other demands, Lumumba said: "I don't think it will be necessary. And anyway it is an affair of state."

Correspondents asked whether he would apply to African countries or white nations and he replied: "I do not make any distinction."

Lumumba said he called his news conference to "clarify international opinion."

"We can always tell the United Nations to withdraw," Lumumba said. "The United Nations came here at our request and we can ask them to leave."

But the Premier went on to say he knows "the United Nations understands its role here."

He took pains to repeat he had confidence in the United Nations, if he had lost confidence in Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold.

"We do not want to replace the Belgian occupation with a United Nations occupation," he said. "The United Nations task here is limited."

U.S. Excludes Buying Of Cuba Sugar In Loan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has refused to allow Morocco to buy Cuban sugar with American loan dollars, it was disclosed Saturday.

An official told United Press International that, depending on future developments, the action might be the first step in a general policy of forbidding other countries to use U.S. loans to trade with Cuba.

An International Cooperation Administration (ICA) official confirmed that a $10 million U.S. loan made to Morocco for the purpose of buying sugar was rewritten this week to exclude Cuba as the source.

He said there were two reasons for the action.

—Under normal conditions, Morocco would order the sugar through a commercial broker in New York. The broker would import the sugar from one of the American - owned Cuban sugar firms. But now that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's pro-Communist government has seized all the sugar firms, the broker must make his payment directly to the Cuban government. Officials and sugar industry executives felt this would constitute implied recognition of the expropriation of American property.

—Under the terms of U.S. loans half the goods purchased must be shipped in American flagships. The ships have run into difficulties in Cuban ports. Some have been detained long after the normal loading time. Hence, U. S. shipowners have been reluctant to send their vessels to Havana.

Officials said they felt the best way to get this country out of both problems was to remove U.S. dollars from any transactions involving Cuba.

The action was confined to Morocco because it was the only country with an outstanding sugar loan authorization which probably would use the money in Cuba.

Still Chance Of Rain Here

Skies will be partly cloudy through tonight and there is still a chance of an afternoon thundershower in the area, so predicts the weatherman.

Little temperature change is expected with the high around 92 and the low near 72. Temperature range yesterday was 91 to 72 and there was .13 inches of rainfall recorded at Selman Field by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Mostly southerly winds will prevail from 5 to 15 miles per hour, except in the vicinity of thundershower activity.

SOVIETS REPORT

Dogs Survive Trip In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Saturday its dog-carrying space ship has been returned to earth with its live cargo safe.

The Soviets triumphantly announced the historical first of orbiting living creatures into space and returning them alive.

The dogs, named Arrow and Squirrel and about the size of large fox terriers, were whizzed around the globe at a height of 198.8 miles at a rate of 227 miles a minute. They circled the earth 18 times before they were landed at a predetermined spot, Tass said.

CLAIM FIRST

While the United States has recovered vehicles from outer space, it has not returned a living being from beyond the earth's atmosphere.

The Soviets said they brought back to earth both the space ship and "the capsule with the experimental animals detached from the ship."

Radio Moscow said in addition to the two dogs, the 4½-ton space ship carried several rats and mice, flies, plants, fungi, microscopic water plants and some seeds. It also carried television cameras to observe the dogs' behavior and a raft of scientific instruments.

It was launched Friday just in time for the feat to be announced at the height of excitement over the trial of the American U2 plane pilot, Francis Gary Powers.

FOR SENTENCE CUT

Wife Of Powers Planning Appeal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Barbara Powers said Saturday night she would appeal to the president of the Soviet Union on Monday to reduce the 10-year sentence of her confessed American spy-pilot husband and "do everything in the world" to help him. But she sadly admitted her husband doubted her chances.

The 25-year-old brunette from Milledgeville, Ga., who was "all cried out" after the strain and tension of the three - day trial of her husband, Francis Gary Powers, told newsmen in a trembling voice that she never would give up trying to win leniency for him.

In addition to her appeal to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, who heads the 14-member Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament), attorneys for the Powers family planned a separate desperate appeal to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev—although by law any clemency can come only from Brezhnev.

TELLS OF REUNION

Barbara, with eyes downcast, her chin quivering with emotion, told of her tearful 75-minute reunion with her 31-year-old husband after his sentencing Friday to three years imprisonment and seven years "deprivation of liberty."

"I told him I would try to do everything in the world I could," she said in her soft drawl, "he didn't think anything would help."

There were "hardly any words." She and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Powers of Pound, Va., met him in an anteroom of the court Friday.

"As Gary walked into the room he stretched out both arms and was crying," she said. "I went to him. Then we had a conference around a large table."

She said firmly that he was "quite definitely" the husband she had known, emotionally and mentally.

Her father-in-law, a shoemaker,

Sicily Island Negroes Drown In Catahoula

HARRISONBURG (Special) — Three Negro boys from Sicily Island drowned late yesterday afternoon in the Ouachita River at the locks and dams near Harrisonburg.

The dead were tentatively identified as brothers, Duke Jones, 15, James Jones, 13, and Cordell Jones Jr., 11, by another Sicily Island Negro, Albert Mickens.

Mickens said that they were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Cordell Jones, of Sicily Island.

DRAGGING

The rescue squad from the Natchez, Miss., fire department, along with Catahoula Parish Sheriff George McGee and his deputies, began dragging operations for the bodies immediately.

According to witnesses, the accident occurred about 5 p.m. when the boys were either wading or fishing on the south side of Lock No. 2, about 175 feet from the lock which is located about one-fourth mile from Harrisonburg.

Two of the witnesses, Paul Rodriguez and W. A. Porter, both of Monroe, working with the U. S. Corps of Engineers, were fishing in a small boat just north on the south side, and saw the three boys go under, but were unable to reach them.

They told Catahoula officials that the trio were approximately 175 feet from the dam itself, on the south side, and about 200 feet from the west bank of the river. They said that evidently the three got into a deep hole, and that the current there was very swift.

Another witness, H. N. Sutton

Nixon Splits With Ike On Medical Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon split with the Eisenhower administration's proposal on medical care for the aged Saturday and endorsed a new plan featuring a broader program of "preventive" care.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., presented the plan in a Senate speech and later claimed Nixon's support at a news conference. A Nixon spokesman then confirmed that the GOP presidential nominee had worked in the preparation of the plan and favored its adoption.

BILL APPROVED

The Senate Finance Committee has already approved a bill that would provide medical care of persons over 65 under public assistance machinery administered by the states. A similar bill was approved by the House.

The Eisenhower administration has indicated it would accept either approach but has served notice that it opposes any move to finance medical benefits by increasing Social Security payroll taxes.

Democrats are backing a measure to provide medical care at age 68 under the Social Security system.

Richard Bean, Nixon's assistant press secretary, told newsmen that Arthur S. Flemming, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, also had worked on the Javits proposal. That statement suggested the administration may be ready to shift its position, but Javits made no such claim.

Among co-sponsors of Javits' proposal, however, was Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., who had offered the administration's "medicare" program. Aides said Saltonstall will support the new plan instead.

Javits offered his proposal as an addition to the plan approved by the finance committee as the Senate began debate on the controversial questions. Committee Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., opened debate with an endorsement of the committee bill.

Although it presents three alternative plans, the Javits proposal

Pressure Of Sun Forcing Echo I To Destruction

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say the infinitesimal pressure of sunlight is forcing the Echo I balloon satellite toward destruction in the earth's atmosphere.

Every 24 hours the giant balloon's orbit drops 2.2 miles closer to earth at its perigee, the lowest point. After it was launched Aug. 12 the perigee was 945 miles. Now it's down to 930 miles.

"At this rate," said Duane Muhleman, research group supervisor at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, "it would hit the ground 450 days after launch—if you discounted the effect of the atmosphere."

But the atmosphere is what will keep the 100-foot balloon from hitting earth. As it sinks lower into the thin borderline of earth's atmosphere, the friction will mount—finally turning Echo I into a streak of flame like the flash of a falling meteorite.

"We don't know enough about the upper atmosphere to know just when this would happen," a Caltech spokesman said.

The balloon's vast size and small weight—about 80 pounds—makes it susceptible to the slightest pressure, Caltech experts said. The force of solar radiation at 1,000 miles is .0000001 pounds per square feet, enough to nudge Echo earthward.

Embargo On Arms Also Is Declared

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Western hemisphere foreign ministers in an unprecedented action voted Saturday to break off diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic and embargo all arms shipments to its strongman.

Dominican delegates walked out of the meeting as the ministers forwarded their resolution to the Organization of American States for its certain approval.

Dominican Foreign Minister Porfirio Herrera Baez refused to comment on the condemnation of his government. His departure does not necessarily mean Dominican withdrawal from the OAS, however, as all Latin-American states and the United States have automatic membership.

CUBA CASE NEXT

The strong action against the Dominican Republic was without precedent in Latin-American history and diplomatic sources said the mood of the ministers spells trouble for leftist Cuba when its case comes up next week. Cuba's charges of U.S. aggression got a cool reception when first voiced earlier this week.

The foreign ministers convicted Dominican strongman regime of aggression against Venezuela. Venezuela accused Trujillo officials of backing a recent plot to assassinate President Romulo Betancourt and overthrow his Venezuelan government. The Dominican Republic denied the charges.

In agreeing with Venezuela, the ministers passed over a U.S. suggestion that the OAS appoint a special committee to assure an orderly transition to a new regime in the Dominican Republic.

ORLEANS SCHOOLS

State Officials Spin Legal Web

BATON ROUGE (UPI) — With Gov. Jimmie Davis providing an entertaining diversion, state officials moved this week to further tangle a legal web they hope won't be unraveled until after New Orleans schools open on a segregated basis Sept. 8.

Attorney general Jack Gremillion was reported in Montgomery, Ala., to study Alabama's pupil placement law-model for a similar law adopted in the Louisiana Legislature this year.

The state sovereignty commission planned a meeting in New Orleans Monday to add whatever complications it is empowered to do, accompanied by a platoon of experts on law and opinion-forming.

Gov. Davis' own skirmish—or rather, disappearance act while federal marshals tried to serve him summonses may further complicate matters. Aides of the governor claimed—in addition to Davis' claim that he was not served legally—that as governor of a state he cannot be hailed into court.

Davis' move to seize control of the New Orleans schools from the school board came as several members of the board wavered uncertainly between a maze of federal court orders and state laws in direct conflict.

But Davis has apparently turned to the pupil placement law as the mainstay of his fight for segregated classrooms. Act 492 of 1960 would bar any wholesale integration, and measure Negroes against a yardstick elastic and elaborate enough to bar practically all applying individually for admission to white schools.

The school board—or Gov. Davis in the case of the New Orle-

Space Capsule Instruments To Receive Study

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP)—The capsule of Discoverer XIV, snatched out the skies near Hawaii Friday, will be studied at the Lockheed laboratories here and not be flown to Washington.

The capsule arrived Saturday aboard an Air Force C130 from Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii. This was only 11 hours after the crew of a C119 Flying Boxcar achieved a historical first by snatching the parachuting capsule at 8,500 feet, 390 miles southwest of Hawaii.

Instruments will be removed and their recordings evaluated by scientists at Lockheed's space and missile division Sunnyvale. Lockheed builds the Agena orbiting vehicle used to put Discoverer aloft.

Discoverer XIV was launched at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Thursday and on its 17th trip around the earth it ejected the capsule over Alaska.

The Air Force happily called the recovery another step toward the solution of the problem of bringing back a man to earth alive and well after outer space travel.

It materially advances the space efforts of the United States," said Reginald R. Kearton,

Former Official Predicts Revolt Against Castro

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fall of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and his government within six months was predicted Saturday by a former prime minister of the island republic.

Dr. Manuel Antonio De Varona, here to rally support for his revolutionary Democratic Front, said that the days of Castro's rule are numbered.

"The people realize that Castro's promises are all lies," he said. "Each day we gain more and more support from Cubans on the island and we have that fled to other American nations."

He said that even Castro's troops who fought with him on the Cuban hillsides for six years are now deserting him and that a revolution could break forth at any time.

Pressed for an estimate on the remaining time of the Castro regime, Varona said "not more than six months."

The 51-year old Varona served as prime minister of Cuba under President Carlos Prio from 1948 to 1952. He was ousted when Fulegcio Batista assumed the dictatorship of the country on March 10, 1952.

He said that he joined forces with Castro after the latter began his revolutionary movement in Oriente Province.

"But I disagreed with Castro after he gained control," he added "because he didn't carry out his promises of free elections."

He said that Castro has turned Communist and that the people of Cuba are basically anti-Communist.

"The people are being denied their freedom of expression. They have even less rights than before Castro came to power. They are losing their jobs and their rights to protest."

UNDER NEW EDICT

Desk-Bound Pilots Face Financial Clip

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Several thousand desk-bound pilots of the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine Corps are about to get their financial wings clipped, Defense Department officials said Saturday.

Their flight pay, which runs as high as $245 a month, is to be cut off at the end of this year under a congressional edict limiting to 99,046 the number of officers on flying status.

The Air Force Friday issued detailed criteria for selection of its share of the cut. It has notified 3,799 potential victims that they will be screened by a review board Oct. 10-21.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Air Force pilots will be cut off flying status. An Air Force spokesman said the exact number will not be known until the Defense Department fixes the break-down of the total cut among the services.

Navy and Army spokesmen said they expected fewer of their pilots would be affected. The Navy already has trimmed the number of its fliers in non-flying jobs by giving up flight pay, and it is reactivating two air groups.

An Army spokesman said he expected that the Army would not have to take any immediate action to reduce the number of its officers in flight pay status. But officers who draw flight pay said they think anything would be made by the Defense Department.

The order will be a sharp blow to officers who have based their living standards on the assumption of continued flight pay. Pentagon corridors this week were full of talk about sending wives to work, selling that second car, and moving out of homes that were being bought through mortgage installments covered by flight pay.

Suspect Held In Bomb Hoax

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The FBI Saturday night announced the arrest of a 29-year-old railroad employe at Ft. Worth, Tex., on charges of making a false report of a bomb aboard a commercial airliner.

The FBI office here said James Vander Waddle of Pine Bluff, Ark., was taken into custody by agents at Amon-Carter Airport, Ft. Worth, after he reportedly told an airport guard:

Waddle, described as a car man with the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt Railroad in Pine Bluff, was the 30th person to be charged under a new federal law making false bomb reports a crime.

Agents here said as a result of Waddle's statement to a guard, one flight which already had departed was called back and another flight delayed for a search.

AT CONGRESS MEET

Rumors Of Manned Space Flights Buzz

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Rumors of impending manned space flights by the Soviet Union and rockets to Mars and Venus buzzed Saturday among delegates to the International Space Congress. These came on the day the Soviet Union reported it had brought its space menagerie safely back to earth.

Prof. Leonid I. Sedov, space committee chairman at the Soviet Academy of Science, renewed an assertion that rockets to Mars or Venus ought to be possible "in the near future."

But he said automatic space vehicles — such as the one launched Friday and brought back Saturday—are the first and major means of cosmic research.

Dr. Juri A. Barinov, assistant to the Soviet Union's top rocket expert, Prof. Anatoli Blagonravov, said: "The Soviet Union does not intend to send a man into space until a 100 per cent safe return to earth can be guaranteed." This assurance has been given by the academician, Blagonravov.

An American rocket propulsion expert at the congress estimated that the booster rocket needed to get the Soviet five-ton flying menagerie into orbit Friday had a thrust of 800,000 pounds.

Congress highlights included German rocket pioneer Dr. Wernher von Braun's illustrated report on the progress of the American Saturn project, and pictures and a map of the moon's reverse side shown by Prof. Alexander Mikhailov, head of the Pokovo Observatory near Leningrad.

Asked what was new to him in the Von Braun report a Soviet delegate said "the illustrations."

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Saturday its dog-carrying space ship has been returned to earth with its live cargo safe.

The Soviets triumphantly announced the historical first of orbiting living creatures into space and returning them alive.

The dogs, named Arrow and Squirrel and about the size of large fox terriers, were whizzed around the globe at a height of 198.8 miles at a rate of 227 miles a minute. They circled the earth 18 times before they were landed at a predetermined spot, Tass said.

CLAIM FIRST

While the United States has recovered vehicles from outer space, it has not returned a living being from beyond the earth's atmosphere.

The Soviets said they brought back to earth both the space ship and "the capsule with the experimental animals detached from the ship."

Radio Moscow said in addition to the two dogs, the 4½-ton space ship carried several rats and mice, flies, plants, fungi, microscopic water plants and some seeds. It also carried television cameras to observe the dogs' behavior and a raft of scientific instruments.

It was launched Friday just in time for the feat to be announced at the height of excitement over the trial of the American U2 plane pilot, Francis Gary Powers.

Wife Of Powers Planning Appeal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Barbara Powers said Saturday night she would appeal to the president of the Soviet Union on Monday to reduce the 10-year sentence of her confessed American spy-pilot husband and "do everything in the world" to help him. But she sadly admitted her husband doubted her chances.

The 25-year-old brunette from Milledgeville, Ga., who was "all cried out" after the strain and tension of the three - day trial of her husband, Francis Gary Powers, told newsmen in a trembling voice that she never would give up trying to win leniency for him.

In addition to her appeal to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, who heads the 14-member Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament), attorneys for the Powers family planned a separate desperate appeal to Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev—although by law any clemency can come only from Brezhnev.

TELLS OF REUNION

Barbara, with eyes downcast, her chin quivering with emotion, told of her tearful 75-minute reunion with her 31-year-old husband after his sentencing Friday to three years imprisonment and seven years "deprivation of liberty."

"I told him I would try to do everything in the world I could," she said in her soft drawl. "he didn't think anything would help."

There were "hardly any words," when she, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Powers of Pound, Va., met him in an anteroom of the court Friday.

"As Gary walked into the room he stretched out both arms and was crying," she said. "I went to him. Then we had a conference around a large table."

She said firmly that he was "quite definitely" the husband she had known, emotionally and mentally.

Her father-in-law, a shoemaker,

Sicily Island Negroes Drown In Catahoula

HARRISONBURG (Special) — Three Negro boys from Sicily Island drowned late yesterday afternoon in the Ouachita River at the locks and dams near Harrisonburg.

The dead were tentatively identified as brothers, Duke Jones, 15, James Jones, 13, and Cordell Jones Jr., 11, by another Sicily Island Negro, Albert Mickens.

Mickens said that they were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Cordell Jones, of Sicily Island.

DRAGGING

The rescue squad from the Natchez, Miss., fire department, along with Catahoula Parish Sheriff George McGee and his deputies, began dragging operations for the bodies immediately.

According to witnesses, the accident occurred about 5 p.m. when the boys were either wading or fishing on the south side of Lock No. 2, about 175 feet from the lock which is located about one-fourth mile from Harrisonburg.

Two of the witnesses, Paul Rodriguez and W. A. Porter, both of Monroe, working with the U. S. Corps of Engineers, were fishing in a small boat just north of the dam and saw the three boys go under, but were unable to reach them.

They told Catahoula officials that the trio were approximately 175 feet from the dam itself, on the south side, and about 200 feet from the west bank of the river. They said that evidently the three got into a deep hole, and that the current there was very swift.

Another witness, H. N. Sutton

UNDER NEW EDICT

Desk-Bound Pilots Face Financial Clip

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Several thousand desk-bound pilots of the Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine Corps are about to get their financial wings clipped, Defense Department officials said Saturday.

Their flight pay, which runs as high as $245 a month, is to be cut off at the end of this year under a congressional edict limiting to 99,046 the number of officers the armed services may keep on flying status.

The Air Force Friday issued detailed criteria for selection of its share of the cut. It has notified 3,799 potential victims that they will be screened by a review board Oct. 10-21.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Air Force pilots will be cut off flying status. An Air Force spokesman said the exact number will not be known until the Defense Department fixes the break-down of the total cut among the services.

Navy and Army spokesmen said they expected fewer of their pilots would be affected. The Navy already has trimmed the number of its fliers in non-flying jobs who draw flight pay, and it is reactivating two air groups.

An Army spokesman said he expected that the Army would not have to take any immediate action to reduce the number of its officers in flight pay status. But final allocation of the cut among the services has not yet been made by the Defense Department.

The order will be a sharp blow to officers who have based their living standards on the assumption of continued flight pay.

Pentagon corridors this week were full of talk about sending wives to work, selling that second car, and moving out of homes that were being bought through mortgage installments covered by flight pay.

Suspect Held In Bomb Hoax

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The FBI Saturday night announced the arrest of a 29-year-old railroad employe at Ft. Worth, Tex., on charges of making a false report of a bomb aboard a commercial airliner.

The FBI office here said James Vander Waddle of Pine Bluff, Ark., was taken into custody by agents at Amon-Carter Airport, Ft. Worth, after he reportedly told an airport guard:

Waddle, described as a car man with the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt Railroad in Pine Bluff, was the 30th person to be charged under a new federal law making false bomb reports a crime.

Agents here said as a result of Waddle's statement to a guard, one flight which already had departed was called back and another flight delayed for a search.

Nixon Splits With Ike On Medical Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon split with the Eisenhower administration's proposal on medical care for the aged Saturday and endorsed a new plan featuring a broader program of "preventive" care.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., presented the plan in a Senate speech and later claimed Nixon's support at a news conference. A Nixon spokesman then confirmed that the GOP presidential nominee had worked in the preparation of the plan and favored its adoption.

BILL APPROVED

The Senate Finance Committee has already approved a bill that would provide medical care of persons over 65 under public assistance machinery administered by the states. A similar bill was approved by the House.

The Eisenhower administration has indicated it would accept either approach but has served notice that it opposes any move to finance medical benefits by increasing Social Security payroll taxes.

Democrats are backing a measure to provide medical care at age 68 under the Social Security system.

Richard Bean, Nixon's assistant press secretary, told newsmen that Arthur S. Flemming, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, also had worked on the Javits proposal. That statement suggested the administration may be ready to shift its position, but Javits made no such claim.

Among co-sponsors of Javits' proposal, however, was Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., who had offered the administration's "medicare" program. Aides said Saltonstall will support the new plan instead.

Javits offered his proposal as an addition to the plan approved by the finance committee as the Senate began debate on the controversial questions. Committee Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., opened debate with an endorsement of the committee bill.

Although it presents three alternative plans, the Javits proposal

Pressure Of Sun Forcing Echo I To Destruction

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say the infinitesimal pressure of sunlight is forcing the Echo I balloon satellite toward destruction in the earth's atmosphere.

Every 24 hours the giant balloon's orbit drops 2.2 miles closer to earth at its perigee, the lowest point. After it was launched Aug. 12 the perigee was 945 miles. Now it's down to 930 miles.

"At this rate," said Duane Muhleman, research group supervisor at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, "it would hit the ground 450 days after launch—if you discounted the effect of the atmosphere."

But the atmosphere is what will keep the 100-foot balloon from hitting earth. As it sinks lower into the thin borderline of earth's atmosphere, the friction will mount—finally turning Echo I into a streak of flame like the flash of a falling meteorite.

"We don't know enough about the upper atmosphere to know just when this would happen," a Caltech spokesman said.

The balloon's vast size and small weight—about 80 pounds—makes it susceptible to the slightest pressure, Caltech experts said. The force of solar radiation at 1,000 miles is .0000001 pounds per square feet, enough to nudge Echo earthward.

Schedule For Echo Satellite

4:39 a.m. south, 25 degrees, southeast;

5:35 p.m., south, eight degrees, northeast.

7:50 p.m., north, 87 degrees, northeast.

9:54 p.m., north, 37 degrees, northeast.

11:59 p.m., north, 33 degrees, southeast.

ORLEANS SCHOOLS

State Officials Spin Legal Web

BATON ROUGE (UPI) — With Gov. Jimmie Davis providing an entertaining diversion, state officials moved this week to further tangle a legal web they hope won't be unraveled until after New Orleans schools open on a segregated basis Sept. 8.

Attorney general Jack Gremillion was reported in Montgomery, Ala., to study Alabama's pupil placement law-model for a similar law adopted in the Louisiana Legislature this year.

The state sovereignty commission planned a meeting in New Orleans Monday to add whatever complications it is empowered to do, accompanied by a platoon of experts on law and opinion-forming.

Gov. Davis' own skirmish—or rather, disappearance act while federal marshals tried to serve him summonses may further complicate matters. Aides of the governor claimed—in addition to Davis' claim that he was not served legally—that as governor of a state he cannot be hailed into court.

Davis' move to seize control of the New Orleans schools from the school board came as several members of the board wavered uncertainly between a maze of federal court orders and state laws in direct conflict.

But Davis has apparently turned to the pupil placement law as the mainstay of his fight for segregated classrooms. Act 492 of 1960 would bar any wholesale integration, and measure Negroes against a yardstick elastic and elaborate enough to bar practically all applying individually for admission to white schools.

Space Capsule Instruments To Receive Study

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP)—The capsule of Discoverer XIV, snatched out the skies near Hawaii Friday, will be studied at the Lockheed laboratories here and not be flown to Washington.

The capsule arrived Saturday aboard an Air Force C130 from Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii. This was only 11 hours after the crew of a C119 Flying Boxcar achieved a historical first by snatching the parachuting capsule at 8,500 feet, 390 miles southwest of Hawaii.

Instruments will be removed and their recordings evaluated by scientists at Lockheed's space and missile division Sunnyvale. Lockheed builds the Agena orbiting vehicle used to put Discoverer aloft.

Discoverer XIV was launched at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Thursday and on its 17th trip around the earth it ejected the capsule over Alaska.

The Air Force happily called the recovery another step toward the solution of the problem of bringing man back to earth alive and well after outer space travel.

It materially advances the space efforts of the United States," said Reginald R. Kearton,

AT CONGRESS MEET

Rumors Of Manned Space Flights Buzz

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Rumors of impending manned space flights by the Soviet Union and rockets to Mars and Venus buzzed Saturday among delegates at the International Space Congress. These came on the day the Soviet Union reported it had brought its space menagerie safely back to earth.

Prof. Leonid I. Sedov, space committee chairman at the Soviet Academy of Science, renewed an assertion that rockets to Mars or Venus ought to be possible "in the near future."

But he said automatic space vehicles — such as the one launched Friday and brought back Saturday—are the first and major means of cosmic research.

Dr. Juri A. Barinov, assistant to the Soviet Union's top rocket expert, Prof. Anatoli Blagonravov, said: "The Soviet Union does absolutely not intend to send a man into space until a 100 per cent safe return to earth can be guaranteed. This assurance has been given by the academician, Blagonravov."

An American rocket propulsion expert at the congress estimated that the booster rocket needed to get the Soviet five-ton flying menagerie into orbit Friday had a thrust of 800,000 pounds.

Congress highlights included German rocket pioneer Dr. Wernher von Braum's illustrated report on the progress of the American Saturn project, and pictures and a map of the moon's reverse side shown by Prof. Alexander Mikhailov, head of the Pokovo Observatory near Leningrad.

Asked what was new to him in the Von Braun report a Soviet delegate said "the illustrations."

Embargo On Arms Also Is Declared

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Western hemisphere foreign ministers in an unprecedented action voted Saturday to break off diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic and embargo all arms shipments to its strongman

Dominican delegates walked out of the meeting as the ministers forwarded ther resolution to the Organization of American States for its certain approval.

Dominican Foreign Minister Porfirio Herrera Baez refused to comment on the condemnation of his government. His departure does not necessarily mean Dominican withdrawal from the OAS, however, as all Latin-American states and the United States have automatic membership.

CUBA CASE NEXT

The strong action against the Dominican Republic was without precedent in Latin-American history and diplomatic sources said the mood of the ministers spells trouble for leftist Cuba when its case comes up next week. Cuba's charges of U.S. aggression got a cool reception when first voiced earlier this week.

The foreign ministers convicted Dominican strongman regime of aggression against Venezuela. Venezuela accused Trujillo officials of backing a recent plot to assassinate President Romulo Betancourt and to overthrow his Venezuelan government. The Dominican Republic denied the charges.

In agreeing with Venezuela, the ministers passed over a U.S. suggestion that the OAS appoint a special committee to assure an orderly transition to a new regime in the Dominican Republic.

The foreign ministers decided to pass the question of a special com-

Former Official Predicts Revolt Against Castro

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fall of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and his government within six months was predicted Saturday by a former prime minister of the island republic.

Dr. Manuel Antonio De Varona, here to rally support for his revolutionary Democratic Front, said that the days of Castro's rule are numbered.

"The people realize that Castro's promises are all lies," he said. "Each day we gain more and more support from Cubans on the island and those that have fled to other American nations."

He said that even Castro's troops who fought with him on the Cuban hillsides for six years are now deserting him and that a revolution could break forth at any time.

Pressed for an estimate on the remaining time of the Castro regime, Varona said "not more than six months."

The 51-year old Varona served as prime minister of Cuba under President Carlos Prio from 1948 to 1952. He was ousted when Fulegcio Batista assumed the dictatorship of the country on March 10, 1952.

He said that he joined forces with Castro after the latter began his revolutionary movement in Oriente Province.

"But I disagreed with Castro after he gained control," he added "because he didn't carry out his promises of free elections."

He said that Castro has turned Communist and that the people of Cuba are basically anti-Communist.

"The people are being denied their freedom of expression. They have even less rights than they had before Castro came to power. They are losing their jobs and their rights to protest."

confirmed that he was "the same old boy that I raised. He has not been brainwashed."

But physically, Powers showed the effects of 108 days in solitary confinement since his U-2 plane was shot down over Sverdlovsk on May 1.

He lost "quite a bit of weight," Barbara said, and was "very, very nervous."

Nevertheless, he "looked very good" to her.

Apparently, Powers had been kept in the dark about everything going on outside his prison cell. Barbara said he received one magazine, just last Wednesday, and he did not even know she and his parents and sister, Mrs. Jessica Hileman of Glass Manor, Md., were in Moscow until he saw them at the trial which opened Wednesday.

"I had sent him a telegram when I arrived in Moscow but he said he had not received it," his wife said.

She repeated that her husband "felt badly" because his court-appointed defense lawyer Mikhail Grinev, had attacked the United States during the trial.

Grinev Saturday advised the family to make their plea to President Brezhnev in non-legal, informal language and deliver it in person to his Kremlin office.

American attorneys Alexander Parker and Frank Rodgers, advisers to the family, said such petitions usually take a month to reach the president himself, but this time "it might be handled sooner."

The lawyers said they learned that the three years in prison to which Powers was sentenced might be reduced to 18 months for good behavior.

Assuming that the seven years "deprivation of liberty" in the sentence meant a term in a penal colony, Parker said he asked whether this meant Siberia and was told "Oh, no, there are labor camps in this (Moscow) area."

Barbara has said she wants to remain in the Soviet capital, perhaps working at the U.S. Embassy, so she can be as near as possible to her husband.

Some Soviet prisons permit wives to visit husbands for as much as two days a month and wives may live with husbands at some prison farms.

Barbara said defense attorney Grinev told her that Powers could receive gifts in prison, now, according to Grinev, he was smoking Russian cigarettes and reading "Gone With The Wind" and "Moby Dick."

Barbara was expected to be permitted to see Powers again on Monday.

The flier's parents and sister planned to leave Moscow Wednesday for home. Barbara was to remain behind.

mittee over to a second meeting Monday on foreign threats to the hemisphere, where U.S. charges of Communist penetration in Cuba will be considered.

Some Latin-American delegates were said to feel that to give a special committee the powers outlined by the United States would be intervention in internal affairs. Latin-Americans are traditionally opposed to such intervention.

The application of sanctions, or penalties, comes under the 1947 Treaty of Rio de Janeiro and the charter of the OAS, and hence is not considered intervention.

The ministers were not swayed in their voting by a Dominican report that the new president, Joaquin Balaguer, announced new general elections would be held in 1962. Balaguer said his government agreed in principle to permit an OAS committee to observe the voting.

The United States, while voting with the other nations for sanctions, expressed fear that unless the OAS committee entered the Caribbean nation after sanctions are applied, Communist or other leftist groups might take over. Other foreign ministers apparently did not share this fear.

Eight Latin-American nations already have broken relations with the Dominican Republic.

The first speaker at the plenary session, Roa said Herter's comments Thursday on the Cuban's attack on the United States were "Hitlerite." Herter had arisen in reply to Roa and said the Cuban's speech reminded him "of a direct parallel of speeches I have heard coming from representatives of the Soviet Union."

In Saturday's speech, Roa protested because Herter had been allowed to make a short rebuttal. Roa said Cuba was no satellite of anyone but "a small planet making a historical orbit."

Eleven Sitters Face Charges

HOPEWELL, Va. (UPI) — Eleven Negroes were arrested Saturday night when they refused to leave two downtown drugstores after being turned down for service at the lunch counters.

All 11, including one juvenile, were charged with trespassing under a new Virginia law enacted to curb sit-down protests against segregation. Additional charges of resisting arrest and conspiring to violate the law were placed against Lee Roy Wyche, 35, of Hopewell.

The sit-down was the second move against segregation in Hopewell in as many days.

"It is the first time in history that living beings safely returned to the earth after covering over 700,000 kilometers (437,500 miles) in outer space.

"The apparatus and the braking worked well and provided for the landing at a predetermined point."

The launching and the return to earth of the cosmic satellite space ship created by the genius of Soviet scientists, engineers, technicians and workers is the forerunner of man's flight into interplanetary space."

The announcement did not say where the landing point was. It said that planes and helicopters delivered medicine for the dogs. It said scientists are now checking all the animals which underwent the space flight.

Tass said the deviation from the calculated point of landing was less than seven miles. Earlier Saturday it was announced that the flying menagerie had completed its 16th revolution at 10:30 a.m.

The first Soviet satellite was launched in October 1957. Soon afterwards the Soviets rocketed the dog Laika out of the atmosphere but that dog died in orbit.

The Soviet Union has given this account of the so-called space menagerie: The two dogs were kept in separate compartments. They could see one another through a glass partition. Scientific instruments attached to them connected with electronic devices which transmitted to stations in the U.S.S.R. their pulse rate, breathing rate, blood pressure and temperature. They were able to lie down and move forward and backward somewhat.

Their cells were equipped with chemicals to absorb moisture and purify the air, just as on an atomic submarine. They were fed with an automatic device which they were trained to use before being launched into space.

Their movements were televised periodically and pictures were transmitted to the scientific academy here which analyzed the moves. White dogs were chosen because they show up better on TV.

Arrow's breathing rate was more moderate and as the hours wore on established a rate of 30 pants per minute. Normal breathing for dogs ranges from 20 to 40.

The dogs were trained to wear space suits and live in cramped quarters.

The original announcement said the Sputnik was launched as part of an experiment testing how to bring a living being back alive from the cosmos.

The statement announcing the launching said the ship's cabin was equipped with everything necessary for a future manned flight. It said several medical and biological experiments were planned during the flight.

features a broad program of "preventive" medical care which would be avilable to all persons over 65 who had an annual income under $3,000 a year ($4,500 for a couple).

The "preventive" alternative of the Javits plan could finance, for example, the regular periodic visits of a physician, laboratory and X-ray services, home nursing care and a relatively small period of hospital treatment. The catastrophic illness programs are designed to finance long hospitalization periods of perhaps six months, a surgical expenses, constant home nursing and such results of crippling illness.

The administration plan is designed to underwrite only the major costs of catastrophic illness.

On the overriding issue of the medical care controversy, however, the Javits proposal goes along with the approach favored by President Eisenhower, the finance committee and the House-approved bill. It would be financed by federal and state matching grants rather than through higher payroll taxes under Social Security.

Major showdown on the bill is expected early next week when a group of Senate Democrats, led by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, N.M. and supported by Sen. John F. Kennedy, Mass., the Democratic presidential nominee, try to add to the committee-approved bill an addition which would finance a board range of medical benefits for the elderly under Social Security.

from the Congolese as well as from the Soviets.

The Soviet statement presented to Hammarskjold charged that on Thursday Congolese troops clashed at the airport with Canadian forces "as a result of the unlawful actions of the latter."

On that day Congolese troops attacked a group of 14 Canadians, beating at least three of them so severely with rifle butts that they were taken to a hospital. Congolese officials said the Canadians were mistaken for "Belgian spies."

Russia's efforts to woo the government of Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba deepened the crisis which led Hammarskjold to call together the 11-nation security council Sunday for a session on the Congo.

Ghana, a key unit in the U.N. Congo force and an avowed friend of all other African nations, meanwhile reaffirmed full support of the U.N. in the Congo and proposed that the world organization's troops be permitted to attack to restore order.

With permission to open fire as warranted, said Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's contingent in the U.N. force alone "can bring the situation in Leopoldville back to normal within one week."

Nkrumah's pledge and recommendation came in response to a message from the hard-pressed Hammarskjold stating that actions of Ghanian troops in the Congo were questionable and demanding from Ghana "full and unconditional support" of the Congo, actions decided upon by the Security Council.

Nkrumah said in reply that he was "only too pleased" to give the assurances Hammarskjold requested, and attached a report from British Maj. Gen. Henry Templre Alexander, commander of Ghana forces, which was highly critical of the failure of the U.N. command to use force.

—Psychological qualifications of the new students for the type of teaching and association involved:

—Possibilities of disorder among pupils, breaches of the peace, and economic retaliation within the community.

For practical purposes, the words "new students" may be translated as "Negro students." Such a law in Alabama has been declared constitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court as long as it is not abused.

Davis' three-day game of hide-and-seek with federal marshals prompted numerous jokes from kibitzing state employes.

A Baton Rouge disc jockey entered the act, dedicating the tune "maybe you'll be there" to the governor in behalf of the marshals.

Davis' statement that he would do anything—"including going to jail"—to keep the state's schools segregated appeared to be coming true to one worried state worker, but another assured him it was a safe, calculated remark, considering the nearing presidential election.

Wife Of Powers Planning Appeal

confirmed that he was "the same old boy that I raised. He has not been brainwashed."

But physically, Powers showed the effects of 108 days in solitary confinement since his U-2 plane was shot down over Sverdlovsk on May 1.

He lost "quite a bit of weight," Barbara said, and was "very, very nervous."

Nevertheless, he "looked very good" to her.

Apparently, Powers had been kept in the dark about everything going on outside his prison cell. Barbara said he received one magazine, just last Wednesday, and he did not even know she and his parents and sister, Mrs Jessica Hileman of Glass Manor, Md., were in Moscow until he saw them at the trial which opened Wednesday.

"I had sent him a telegram when I arrived in Moscow but he said he had not received it," his wife said.

She repeated that her husband "felt badly" because his court-appointed defense lawyer Mikhail Grinev, had attacked the United States during the trial.

Grinev Saturday advised the family to make their plea to President Brezhnev in non-legal, informal language and deliver it in person to his Kremlin office.

American attorneys Alexander Parker and Frank Rodgers, advisers to the family, said such petitions usually take a month to reach the president himself, but this time "it might be handled sooner."

The lawyers said they learned that the three years in prison to which Powers was sentenced might be reduced to 18 months for good behavior.

Assuming that the seven years "deprivation of liberty" in the sentence meant a term in a penal colony, Parker said he asked whether this meant Siberia and was told "Oh, no, there are labor camps in this (Moscow) area."

Barbara has said she wants to remain in the Soviet capital, perhaps working at the U.S. Embassy, so she can be as near as possible to her husband.

Some Soviet prisons permit wives to visit husbands for as much as two days a month and wives may live with husbands at some prison farms.

Barbara said defense attorney Grinev told her that Powers could receive gifts in prison, now, according to Grinev, he was smoking Russian cigarettes and reading "Gone With The Wind" and "Moby Dick."

Barbara was expected to be permitted to see Powers again on Monday.

The flier's parents and sister planned to leave Moscow Wednesday for home. Barbara was to remain behind.

mittee over to a second meeting Monday on foreign threats to the hemisphere, where U.S. charges of Communist penetration in Cuba will be considered.

Some Latin-American delegates were said to feel that to give a special committee the powers outlined by the United States would be intervention in internal affairs. Latin-Americans are traditionally opposed to such intervention.

The application of sanctions, or penalties, comes under the 1947 Treaty of Rio de Janeiro and the charter of the OAS, and hence is not considered intervention.

The ministers were not swayed in their voting by a Dominican report that the new president, Joaquin Balaguer, announced new general elections would be held in 1962. Balaguer said his government agreed in principle to permit an OAS committee to observe the voting.

The United States, while voting with the other nations for sanctions, expressed fear that unless the OAS committee entered the Caribbean nation after sanctions are applied, Communist or other leftist groups might take over. Other foreign ministers apparently did not share this fear.

Eight Latin-American nations already have broken relations with the Dominican Republic.

The first speaker at the plenary session, Roa said Herter's comments Thursday on the Cuban's attack on the United States were "Hitlerite." Herter had arisen in reply to Roa and said the Cuban's speech reminded him "of a direct parallel of speeches I have heard coming from representatives of the Soviet Union."

In Saturday's speech, Roa protested because Herter had been allowed to make a short rebuttal. Roa said Cuba was no satellite of anyone but "a small planet making a historical orbit."

Eleven Sitters Face Charges

HOPEWELL, Va. (UPI) — Eleven Negroes were arrested Saturday night when they refused to leave two downtown drugstores after being turned down for service at the lunch counters.

All 11, including one juvenile, were charged with trespassing under a new Virginia law enacted to curb sit-down protests against segregation. Additional charges of resisting arrest and conspiring to violate the law were placed against Lee Roy Wyche, 35, of Hopewell.

The sit-down was the second move against segregation in Hopewell in as many days.

Speaking at the dedication ceremony of a memorial plaque was Attorney Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, Ohio, a leading lay religious leader and humanitarian. Dogs Survive Trip In Space

the earth the second Soviet space ship landed in the preset area at the 18th revolution around the globe.

"The space ship and the capsule with the experimental animals detached from the ship landed safely.

"It is the first time in history that living beings safely returned to the earth after covering over 700,000 kilometers (437,500 miles) in outer space.

"The apparatus and the braking worked well and provided for the landing at a predetermined point."

The launching and the return to earth of the cosmic satellite space ship created by the genius of Soviet scientists, engineers, technicians and workers is the forerunner of man's flight into interplanetary space."

The announcement did not say where the landing point was. It said that planes and helicopters delivered medicine for the dogs. It said scientists are now checking all the animals which underwent the space flight.

Tass said the deviation from the calculated point of landing was less than seven miles. Earlier Saturday it was announced that the flying menagerie had completed its 16th revolution at 10:30 a.m.

The first Soviet satellite was launched in October 1957. Soon afterwards the Soviets rocketed the dog Laika out of the atmosphere but that dog died in orbit.

The Soviet Union has given this account of the so-called space menagerie: The two dogs were kept in separate compartments. They could see one another through a glass partition. Scientific instruments attached to them connected with electronic devices which transmitted to stations in the U.S.S.R. their pulse rate, breathing rate, blood pressure and temperature. They were able to lie down and move forward and backward somewhat.

Their cells were equipped with chemicals to absorb moisture and purify the air, just as on an atomic submarine. They were fed with an automatic device which they were trained to use before being launched into space.

Their movements were televised periodically and pictures were transmitted to the scientific academy here which analyzed the moves. White dogs were chosen because they show up better on TV.

Arrow's breathing rate was more moderate and as the hours wore on established a rate of 30 pants per minute. Normal breathing for dogs ranges from 20 to 40.

The dogs were trained to wear space suits and live in cramped quarters.

The original announcement said the Sputnik was launched as part of an experiment testing how to bring a living being back alive from the cosmos.

The statement announcing the launching said the ship's cabin was equipped with everything necessary for a future manned flight. It said several medical and biological experiments were planned during the flight.

The aerial pickup followed by only eight days recovery from the sea near Hawaii of a capsule ejected from Discoverer XIII.

That episode, too, was hailed as historical. It was the first time in 13 Discoverer launchings that a nose capsule was recovered.

The capsule was packed with instruments whose recordings are needed to further development of sky-spy and missile warning space vehicles. Lockheed's Agena power plant also will be used in the Midas (missile defense alarm system) and Samos, or picture-taking satellites.

Sheriff McGee pointed out that there are signs on the dam stating "No trespassing beyond these signs," but evidently the Negores didn't see them.

Another witness to the accident, Mrs. S. R. Hendricks, saw the boys go under from her home located about 400 yards from the river on the levee. She notified the Catahoula sheriff's department, who called the rescue squad from Natchez.

Sheriff McGee said last night that they would continue to drag the river all night or until the bodies were recovered.

features a broad program of "preventive" medical care which would be avilable to all persons over 65 who had an annual income under $3,000 a year ($4,500 for a couple).

The "preventive" alternative of the Javits plan could finance, for example, the regular periodic visits of a physician, laboratory and X-ray services, home nursing care and a relatively small period of hospital treatment. The catastrophic illness programs are designed to finance long hospitalization periods of perhaps six months, a surgical expenses, constant home nursing and such results of crippling illness.

The administration plan is designed to underwrite only the major costs of catastrophic illness.

On the overriding issue of the medical care controversy, however, the Javits proposal goes along with the approach favored by President Eisenhower, the finance committee and the House-approved bill. It would be financed by federal and state matching grants rather than through higher payroll taxes under Social Security.

Major showdown on the bill is expected early next week when a group of Senate Democrats, led by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, N.M. and supported by Sen. John F. Kennedy, Mass., the Democratic presidential nominee, try to add to the committee-approved bill an addition which would finance a board range of medical benefits for the elderly under Social Security.

Soviets Demand U.N. Withdraw

from the Congolese as well as from the Soviets.

The Soviet statement presented to Hammarskjold charged that on Thursday Congolese troops clashed at the airport with Canadian forces "as a result of the unlawful actions of the latter."

On that day Congolese troops attacked a group of 14 Canadians, beating at least three of them so severely with rifle butts that they were taken to a hospital. Congolese officials said the Canadians were mistaken for "Belgian spies."

Russia's efforts to woo the government of Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba deepened the crisis which led Hammarskjold to call together the 11-nation security council Sunday for a session on the Congo.

Ghana, a key unit in the U.N. Congo force and an avowed friend of all other African nations, meanwhile reaffirmed full support of the U.N. in the Congo and proposed that the world organization's troops be permitted to attack to restore order.

With permission to open fire as warranted, said Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's contingent in the U.N. force alone "can bring the situation in Leopoldville back to normal within one week."

Nkrumah's pledge and recommendation came in response to a message from the hard-pressed Hammarskjold stating that actions of Ghanian troops in the Congo were questionable and demanding from Ghana "full and unconditional support" of the Congo, actions decided upon by the Security Council.

Nkrumah said in reply that he was "only too pleased" to give the assurances Hammarskjold requested, and attached a report from British Maj. Gen. Henry Templre Alexander, commander of Ghana forces, which was highly critical of the failure of the U.N. command to use force.

ans schools, may allow transfers of students based on these factors:

—The effect the new students will have upon the academic programs;

—Adequacy of the new students' academic preparation;

—Scholastic aptitude and relative intelligence of the new students;

—Psychological qualifications of the new students for the type of teaching and association involved;

—Effect of the new students upon the academic standards of other students;

—Possibilities of disorder among pupils, breaches of the peace, and economic retaliation within the community.

For practical purposes, the words "new students" may be translated as "Negro students." Such a law in Alabama has been declared constitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court as long as it is not abused.

Davis' three-day game of hide-and-seek with federal marshals prompted numerous jokes from kibitzing state employes.

A Baton Rouge disc jockey entered the act, dedicating the tune "maybe you'll be there" to the governor in behalf of the marshals.

Davis' statement that he would do anything—"including going to jail"—to keep the state's schools segregated appeared to be coming true to one worried state worker, but another assured him it was a safe, calculated remark, considering the nearing presidential election.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Thomas O. Jones, 23, had the perfect answer Saturday for friends who asked about his bandaged hand: "I got bit by a crocodile."

It happened Friday night as Jones and other Forest Park Zoo employes moved 600 reptiles from temporary quarters into the zoo's new reptile house.

Jones leaped into the crocodile pit and grabbed a six-foot resident. He hopped back out with a bitten thumb.

Demo Revises Vote Kickoff Drive Plans

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy switched Saturday the formal full-scale opening of his campaign for the White House from Hawaii to Alaska.

The Democratic campaign still will have a double kickoff Sept. 3—Kennedy at Anchorage, Alaska, and his vice presidential teammate, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, on the same day at Honolulu. Originally they had planned to launch their "New Frontiers" campaign together in the newest state.

This had to go by the board when it became apparent that Congress will run on beyond Sept. 1. Kennedy had planned to go to Hawaii, Alaska and then get to Detroit by Labor Day, Sept. 5. The senator still hopes to work Hawaii into his campaign itinerary later on.

The first big swing of the Democratic presidential nominee is being expanded to at least eight days, five states and 11 cities. More may be added later. It will cover something like 10,000 miles.

The states: Alaska, Michigan, Washington, Oregon, California, with a total of 70 of the 269 electoral votes required for victory in November.

The schedule still is dependant on a congressional adjournment by Sept. 2. The Democratic national chairman, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, said the chances of an adjournment by then are looking better.

Jackson announced the general outlines of the trip aboard Kennedy's plane en route from Washington. Kennedy flew west Saturday for a political reconciliation with former President Harry S. Truman at nearby Independence.

This is the schedule, with political meetings or rallies at each point:

Saturday, Sept. 3: Kennedy takes off from Washington, flies nonstop to San Francisco for a two-hour politicking stop at the airport, and on to Anchorage for the night.

Sunday, Sept. 4: The Massachusetts nominee will deliver the party's traditional Labor Day speech in Detroit's Cadillac Square.

Tuesday, Sept. 6: Kennedy lunches in Spokane and ines in Seattle, Wash., at political gatherings.

Billings, Mont., originally on the schedule, now is out. But Kennedy still hopes to get in a Montana visit. He will spend the night at Seattle.

Wednesday, Sept. 7: The Democratic nominee flies into Oregon for barnstorming at Salem, Eugene and Portland, and spends the night at Portland.

Professor Says Soviets To Put Man In Space

LONDON (AP)—Prof. Bernard Loveil, Britain's leading authority on space satellites, said Saturday night he expects the Soviet Union to put a man into space "at any time—perhaps within a couple of months."

Lovell, director of the world's biggest radio telescope at Jodrell Bank research station, called the Soviet achievement in bringing back their dog-carrying satellite "simply magnificent."

He added: "It shows that the Russians are on the verge of sending a man into space. The progress over the past few weeks has been tremendously dramatic.

"First the Americans successfully recovered a space capsule from a satellite, and now the Russians have accomplished this.

"It is a tremendous feat of 20th century technology—and not least a tribute to the cooperation of Soviet and American scientists in this field."

SURVIVES DEADLY BITE

Tiger Snake Helps Man Quit Smoking

Kenneth Earnest, 22-year-old reptile curator who recently became one of the few persons to survive a bite from the snake with the deadliest venom in the world, said he couldn't smoke while hospitalized because he couldn't breath without the aid of an iron lung.

"When I got out of the hospital, I decided I'd give it up," he said. "I'd already gotten over the rough part."

"We didn't give him much chance," said Dr. Findlay E. Russell, who specializes in snake bite cases at Los Angeles County Hospital.

Earnest, now back at work at his father's California alligator farm, rattled off these figures scientific detachment:

"It takes about two milligrams of tiger snake venom to kill a human being weighing 150 pounds; 20 milligrams from an Indian Cobra, or 140 milligrams from a western diamond back rattler."

Two milligrams isn't even a drop, no more than you would get by dipping the point of a needle into the venom.

"Drop for drop, the tiger snake has the most toxic venom of any known land snake," Earnest said in explaining that the seriousness of a snake bite also depends upon how much venom a snake can inject into its victim. "A tiger can inject about 20 lethal doses, and a western diamond back about two," he continued. "If you get a full bite, with both fangs, you get a good injection.

Earnest demonstrated by holding up the three-foot snake that bit him on the hand when he reached into its cage last May 17.

Ken blamed himself for the near-tragedy: "Anybody who gets bitten by a snake in captivity is a darned fool, and that includes me."

He has been bitten before, once by a rattler and another time by a cottonmouth moccasin. He thinks he may be bitten again.

Soviet Union Protests Act Of U.S. Ship

TOKYO (UPI) — The Soviet Union accused the U.S. Navy Saturday of taking "provocative action" against a Soviet scientific survey ship 100 miles off the coast of Japan.

Radio Moscow, in a Japanese language broadcast, said that a U.S. Navy cruiser approached a Soviet ship and radioed it for identification and details concerning its crew and destination.

When the Soviet ship replied, the broadcast said, the cruiser disappeared. But it soon reappeared and launched a helicopter which flew over the Russian vessel at an altitude of from 10 to 70 meters (33 to 228 feet) and took photographs of the Soviet ship.

The broadcast, beamed to Japan, said the U.S. helicopter circled the Soviet survey ship about 10 times before flying back to the cruiser.

The Soviet broadcast did not identify the American warship nor did it give the exact position of the Russian ship when the alleged incident occurred. The name of the Soviet ship was given (phonetically) as the "Shokarisuky."

Radio Moscow also said an unidentified warship trailed the Soviet vessel for about six hours on the same day as the "alleged provocative action" by the American cruiser.

(In Washington, a U.S. Navy spokesman said no dispatches on the reported incident had been received from the Seventh Fleet, the American naval command in the Western Pacific.

He said it is common practice to maintain aerial surveillance over unusual Communist bloc shipping which comes near South Korea or U.S. naval bases, but he doubted that a Navy helicopter would have flown so low over the Soviet ship as the Moscow broadcast stated.)

Long, McSween Launch Final Vote Appeals

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP)—Rep. Harold B. McSween and his rival for the Eighth Congressional District seat, former Gov. Earl K. Long, Saturday began their final week of campaigning for the Aug. 27 Democratic runoff primary.

McSween, high man in the July primary, has the support of former State Rep. Ben Holt of Alexandria who ran third.

McSween repeated his challenge to Long to explain how his net worth rose from $150,000 to $275,000 during his last term as governor.

Long continued to ask McSween to explain an affidavit by Mrs. Mary Helen Foster that she was on the congressman's payroll last year but never performing any services for him. This affidavit has been repudiated by Mrs. Foster.

Meanwhile, Richard Davis of Alexandria announced he had quit as Long's chauffeur and bodyguard.

"I am sick and exhausted," Davis said. "I am through."

Davis said in Lake Providence that he quit because his mother insist that he break away from Long and also because the former governor tried to persuade him to sign an affidavit that he had taken money from Mrs. Foster and given it to McSween.

FPC To Rule On Natural Gas Question

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Can an interstate pipeline company legally ignore home and commercial consumers and arbitrarily sell natural gas to more profitable industrial customers?

The Federal Power Commission will rule on this question soon.

FPC examiner Francis L. Hall said "no," emphatically, in a July 29 decision against the Mississippi River Fuel Corp., St. Louis, Mo.

The company had claimed the so-called "grandfather clause" of the natural gas act gave it the right, "without FPC regulation," to service industrial buyers if it saw fit.

The clause was written into the act Feb. 7, 1942. It gave the commission blanket authority to issue certificates for continuation of all services existing the day the clause became law.

Hall firmly rejected Mississippi's argument. He reminded the company that it was brought under commission control when Congress passed the gas act in 1938 and hence its plea "for self-regulation of all aspects of its industrial business is wholly untenable."

"Moreover," Hall added, "No public utility may pick and choose customers it finds more profitable, without regard to the overall public interest."

Hall's decision, subject to commission approval, directed Mississippi to begin service to Red Bud, Ill., "even if it necessitates curtailing service to industrial customers."

Mississippi had contended that it would either have to build new facilities or cut its industrial sales. Hall countered that this was not so.

Young Mother, Two Children Die On Highway

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — A young mother and her two small daughters were killed and two men injured critically Saturday in a highway collision five miles west of here on a rural paved road.

Killed almost instantly were:

Mrs. Jo Ann Lewis, 21, believed to be from Memphis, Tenn. and her daughters, Janet Gale, 2, and Diane Sue, 1.

Mrs. Lewis' husband, Bill Lewis, 22, was in critical condition at Parkview Hospital here. Also in "very critical" condition was the driver of the other car involved, Clarence Kimes, about 25.

Kimes was driving a car, a 1957 Ford, with Arkansas license plates and was believed to be from Arkansas. The Lewis family was in a 1958 Chevrolet with a Memphis tag.

The accident occurred near the Lenox community five miles west of here on Tennessee 20. The road is near the Mississippi River and there is a ferry crossing to Caruthersville, Mo., and the Missouri-Arkansas side of the river a few miles from where the accident occured.

Demos Claim Farm Belt For Kennedy

The rally, they said, grew largely out of producers' demands to be heard on their woes.

Farmers and their leaders from 14 states lined up to tell a panel of party officials about rural conditions, which most described as being economically depressed. Most of them urged bolder federal efforts to improve farm income.

This demonstration came a day ahead of the appearance of Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the party's presidential nominee, and Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, his running mate.

They will give their first major talks on the farm issue here Sunday afternoon. Kennedy has said the farm issue is the major demestic one of the campaign.

Saturday's session originally had called for a series of conferences with farm and party leaders from the farm belt. These were designed primarily to set up regional, state and county campaign units for the Kennedy-Johnson team.

But the original program was changed, said Iowa Gov. Herschel C. Loveless, because he was flooded with requests from farmers asking that they be given a chance to appear individually and speak out on the problem.

"This in itself testifies to the troubles farmers face and to the favorable prospects for the Democratic ticket," Loveless said. "If farmers had been prosperous, they wouldn't be here."

Active in the rally were officials of the National Farmers Union, an organization which, in recent elections, has been closely associated with the Democrats.

On hand Sunday to help bring the gathering to a climax will be such big party names as Sens. Stuart Symington of Missouri, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

It will be Kennedy's first opportunity to stand before a farm audience on a party platform which promises greater federal aid for agriculture—a promise which is in sharp contrast to policies of the Eisenhower administration designed to get the government out of agriculture.

U.S. Employes' Link With Drug Firms Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charles H. Kendall, head of a special unit investigating the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), said Saturday there is a "possibility" some of the agency's employes may have been too closely associated with the drug industry.

Kendall said in a UPI interview that "it is still too early to say" what the result of his inquiry would be but that he had the impression the FDA staff in general "is a pretty good crowd of people who have done a pretty good job."

Kendall is general counsel of the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization. He is on loan until Oct. 1 to health and welfare secretary Arthur F. Flemming to examine congressional charges the FDA has been lax in regulating the drug industry and that its employes have been too closely influenced by it.

Flemming named Kendall to head a special three-man investigative unit following the dismissal of Dr. Henry Welch, chief of the FDA division which passes on antibiotics. Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate drug investigators turned up the fact that Welch had earned more than a quarter of a million dollars from his side work for two antibiotics magazines.

WARY OF POLLS

Undecided Voters Worrying Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign strategists Saturday viewed with a wary eye national polls showing Nixon running well ahead of Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy. They said they felt the number of undecided voters is greater than the latest major poll shows.

Robert H. Finch, Nixon's campaign director, told newsmen he felt Nixon is "ahead at this point," largely as a result of the Republican National Convention, the vice president's acceptance speech and other factors. But, Finch said, he was not taking undue comfort from the latest national poll showing Nixon running 50 to 44 ahead of Kennedy, with six per cent of the voters undecided.

"I still think the large group of undecided voters is higher than the six per cent that shows in the poll," Finch added.

Nixon has taken the position all along that about 10 per cent of genuinely independent voters may decide the election by making up their minds in the closing days.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, said that while the GOP presidential nominee is "optimistic over progress made" since his nomination, the Nixon camp "still feels the election will be very close."

Also, Klein said, he expected the poll ratings of the two candidates would "change from time to time" as the campaign progresses. The Nixon forces, Klein added, still feel "that the election will be decided in the last three weeks."

Finch said the factor apparently working in Nixon's favor so far is lack of enthusiasm in some Northern states for Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), Kennedy's vice presidential running mate. The Nixon campaign director said this opposition is particularly strong in New York and Michigan.

Also, he said, the GOP now feels that Henry Cabot Lodge, Nixon's vice presidential candidate, is adding more the Republican slate than originally anticipated.

Finch enthusitiastically termed the Nixon - Lodge lineup "about as close to a dream ticket as we could have hoped for" to combat the Kennedy-Johnson combination.

Nixon passed up the campaign trail this weekend to remain here. He spent much of the day at his downtown campaign headquarters, meeting among others with the 19-man team assembled to do the advance work for his tours.

The so-called "Frog Men"—because of their leap-frogging schedules ahead of the candidate—are being trained under the leadership of Harry R. (Bob) Haldeman, 33-year-old New York advertising man on leave to work with the Nixon forces. Haldeman is a veteran advance man from Nixon's 1956 and 1958 campaigns.

Both Nixon and Lodge will use the same pool of advance men. They make all detailed arrangements for the candidates, local stops.

The Nixon forces are expected to rely heavily on the "National volunteers for Nixon - Lodge" organization in seeking to woo independent and "swing" voters whom the vice president feels will decide the election.

They give themselves privately, a fighting chance in some Southern states, mainly Texas, Virginia, Florida and North Carolina and feel they have an outside chance in Missouri.

Kennedy's Farm Parley Assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican National Chairman Thruston B. Morton Saturday labeled as "a transparent political gimmick" the Democratic farm conference arranged by Sen. John F. Kennedy.

Kennedy, the Democratic presidential nominee and his running-mate, Senator Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas meet with party farm leaders in Des Moines, Iowa, Sunday.

Morton said in a statement that the Democrats "propose to ratify publicly the agricultural policy decisions which have already been reached aboard the Kennedy yacht at Hyannis Port, Mass."

"Sen. Kennedy is no friend of the American farmer," the Kentucky senator said. "His voting record shows he has flipped and flopped on the issue and is without a basic philosophy of sympathy for the farmer."

Kennedy's rival for the presidency, Vice President Richard M. Nixon, held a conference here Friday with top leaders of the National Farm Bureau Federation, the Farmers Union, and National Grange. Nixon said he is still gathering ideas for solving the farm problem and will be ready to make public his views toward the end of September.

Kennedy announced formation of a "Farmers for Kennedy-Johnson Committee" headed by Gov. Herschel C. Loveless of Iowa. Claude Wickard, former secretary of agriculture, will head an executive committee and Stephen Pace, former Georgia congressman, will serve as vice chairman.

Kennedy said the newly formed committee will send representatives "from farm-gate to farm-gate" throughout the nation seeking support for the Democratic ticket.

Sen. Morton fired a series of questions at Kennedy.

"What happened to your grandoise promise to lead the fight for an 'emergency' farm bill during the August session of the Congress?" He asked.

He said Kennedy was quoted as saying at the Los Angeles nominating convention that farmers "cannot afford to wait until next year for legislation."

"Now your spokesmen announce that there will be no drive for a farm bill, even though you and your party control the Congress by 2-1 majorities," Morton said.

The GOP chairman said Kennedy seemed determined "to boost already inflated farm costs further by increasing minimum wages and covering millions of additional workers."

"Are you fully aware of the disastrous results, the harsh controls and regimentation which would immediately follow enactment of the major proposals set forth in the farm plank of the Democratic platform?" Morton asked Kennedy.

Morton said the Democrats pledged to reinstate price supports at 90 per cent of parity but Kennedy had said in 1955 that farm prices had declined under such a program.

FOR FACTORY FOREMAN

Dialing Error Pays Off With Vacation

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — "I'll go along with a gag—and it looks like I'm going a long way," says Melvin Miller, 40, genial tractor factory foreman.

He thought a minute. "Those take charge characters! Well, I just have to meet them."

Miller chuckled Saturday about an all-expense one-week California vacation arranged for him by a group of Marines of Camp Pendleton and El Toro Marine Air Base.

Miller's life with his wife, Sally, and their three children—Bob, 10, Don, 9, and Judy, 7—was moderately predictable until last Labor Day.

That's when Marine Capt. Joe Gestson of Camp Pendleton picked up a telephone at a bar in Laguna Beach, Calif., to call a friend.

Gestson's finger dialed into the long-lines system and by some quirk spun out Miller's Peoria phone number instead of a buddy he was trying to reach in California.

"I was out in my front yard painting when I heard the phone," Miller said. "Some guy wanted to know if I knew where his car was."

"It sounded like somebody I knew, so I tried to help him out. Things were a little complicated, though. Seemed like he though he was in California.

"He called me back later to tell me he had found his car all right."

Miller said Gestson phoned several times thereafter. Sometimes he put a fellow Marine on the line for a few words, sometimes he talked to Mrs. Miller. The Millers thought their callers were idling in some Peoria oasis.

Gestson sent post cards from Laguna Beach to prove his whereabouts. Then, as Christmas approached, he handed out Christmas cards to airmen and sailors who wree shipping out, making sure they were addressed to the Millers. So, the Millers got a shower of Yule greetings from various corners of the globe.

The Mel Miller legend grew in Laguna Beach, and a movement was launched by Gestson and bartender Grant Maxwell to bring Miller to California.

Maxwell ket a 120mm shell casing on the bar for the collection, and the money mounted up.

Miller explained to Gestson that he had already taken his vacation from his job at Caterpillar Tractor Co. and couldn't get away for a visit.

"That Gestson! He called up my boss. Before I knew it, they had plane reservations made for me to leave O'Hare Airport in Chicago Aug. 31. The plant community relations manager called me in and told me."

Sally and the youngsters won't go along, but Mrs. Miller understands.

"I just told those boys to send my husband back in one piece," she said. "They told me, 'Sure, in one piece, but badly wrinkled.'"

The Marines say Miller's going to get VIP treatment such as has never been accorded any visitor before.

Miller knows Marines, and he trembles a bit when he thinks what the shindig could involve.

"Those El Toro guys who want to give me jet plane rides worry me the most," he said.

WARY OF POLLS

Undecided Voters Worrying Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign strategists Saturday viewed with a wary eye national polls showing Nixon running well ahead of Democratic nominee John F. Kennedy. They said they felt the number of undecided voters is greater than the latest major poll shows.

Robert H. Finch, Nixon's campaign director, told newsmen he felt Nixon is "ahead at this point," largely as a result of the Republican National Convention, the vice president's acceptance speech and other factors. But, Finch said, he was not taking undue comfort from the latest national poll showing Nixon running 50 to 44 ahead of Kennedy, with six per cent of the voters undecided.

"I still think the large group of undecided voters is higher than the six per cent that shows in the poll," Finch added.

Nixon has taken the position all along that about 10 per cent of genuinely independent voters may decide the election by making up their minds in the closing days.

Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's press secretary, said that while the GOP presidential nominee is "optimistic over progress made" since his nomination, the Nixon camp "still feels the election will be very close."

Also, Klein said, he expected the poll ratings of the two candidates would "change from time to time" as the campaign progresses. The Nixon forces, Klein added, still feel "that the election will be decided in the last three weeks."

Finch said the factor apparently working in Nixon's favor so far is lack of enthusiasm in some Northern states for Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), Kennedy's vice presidential running mate. The Nixon campaign director said this opposition is particularly strong in New York and Michigan.

Also, he said, the GOP now feels that Henry Cabot Lodge, Nixon's vice presidential candidate, is adding more the Republican slate than originally anticipated.

Finch enthusitiastically termed the Nixon - Lodge lineup "about as close to a dream ticket as we could have hoped for" to combat the Kennedy-Johnson combination.

Nixon passed up the campaign trail this weekend to remain here. He spent much of the day at his downtown campaign headquarters, meeting among others with the 19-man team assembled to do the advance work for his tours.

The so-called "Frog Men"—because of their leap-frogging schedules ahead of the candidate—are being trained under the leadership of Harry R. (Bob) Haldeman, 33-year-old New York advertising man on leave to work with the Nixon forces. Haldeman is a veteran advance man from Nixon's 1956 and 1958 campaigns.

Both Nixon and Lodge will use the same pool of advance men. They make all detailed arrangements for the candidates, local stops.

The Nixon forces are expected to rely heavily on the "National volunteers for Nixon - Lodge" organization in seeking to woo independent and "swing" voters whom the vice president feels will decide the election.

They give themselves privately, a fighting chance in some Southern states, mainly Texas, Virginia, Florida and North Carolina and feel they have an outside chance in Missouri.

IN 1959 YEAR

Taxpayers Shell Out $100 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans paid a record total of 100 billion dollars in taxes to Federal, state and local governments in 1959, the Census Bureau said Saturday.

The payments, which compared with $98,400,000,000 a year earlier, were made during the fiscal years which ended at different times during 1959, varying with the government concerned.

On a per person basis, taxes totaled $567.04. This was less than the 1958 level of $567.86 because the population grew a bit faster than tax collections.

The record for collections per person—$579.19—was recorded in 1957.

Federal tax collections per person during fiscal 1959 amounted to $381.35. State and local governments collected $185.69.

The biggest revenue producer was, as usual, the federal individual income tax. It brought in $208.20 per person. At the state and local level, the biggest taxes were property levies, $87.03 per person; sales taxes, $59.18; and income taxes, $11.31.

Federal tax revenues declined from 68 billion dollars to $67,300,000,000 in fiscal 1959 because of the delayed tax effect of the 1958 recession. However, the drop was more than offset by an increase in state and local tax collections from $30,400,000,000 to $32,700,000,000.

The three levels of government spent $124,800,000,000 during fiscal 1959, or considerably more than they received from taxes. The difference was financed through non-tax revenues and borrowings.

Federal spending totaled $75,300,000,000, while the states spent 17½ billions and local governments close to 32 billions.

On a per person basis, the biggest single item was federal defense spending at $274.37. State and local spending of $99.13 for education and $54.59 for streets and highways ranked next.

Lumumba's Actions Ire Africa Bloc

PARIS (AP)—Premier Patrice Lumumba of the Congo appeared Saturday to be antagonizing more and more African leaders with his attacks on U. N. authorities.

The most open signs of discontent appear in Arab North Africa, some former French states of Africa, and in Liberia, where President William V. Tubman acknowlenged being "perplexed and frustrated" by Lumumba's remarks.

There was no evidence, however, that anyone was getting ready to disclaim Lumumba. The general feeling seemed to be discontent over how Lumumba is conducting his afaifrs, not over his basic policies.

The first open African affront to Lumumba came last week when the French Congo, just across the river from the Belgian Congo, proclaimed its independence. Lumumba was pointedly left off the guest list, although Congo President Joseph Kasavubu was invited and turned up in a general's full uniform.

The French Congo probably accurately reflected the views of leaders in other former French areas of Africa. These men, many once ardent nationalists, have made their peace with France and now want stability and French economic aid in large quantities to build up their countries.

Premier Ahmadou Ahidjo of the newly independent Cameroon has shown signs of irritation with Lumumba. It is reported from his capital of Yaounde that he has sent cables to African leaders suggesting a postponement of the Lumumba-inspired inter-African conference scheduled at Leopoldville later this month.

Tunisia and Morocco, both with troops with the U. N. forces in the Congo, have shown concern over Lumumba's actions.

It was reported in Rabat that pro-Western King Mohamed V of Morocco had exchanged notes on the congo situation with president Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic and premier Sekou Toure of Guinea, both of whom have expressed support for Lumumba.

In Tunisia, the newspaper of President Habib Bourguiba's Neo-Destour party pointedly took issue with Lumumba's contention that U. N. troops should restore Congo government control over secessionist Katanga Province.

The ties between provinces of the Belgian Congo are a matter for the Congolese themselves, the paper said, "and the United Nations has no right to intervene, and the Congo government has no right to ask for such intervention."

This is the view taken by U. N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in rejecting Lumumba's demands. As a result, Lumumba has made Hammarskjold his chief target in assailing U. N. action in the Congo.

Bourguiba himself, in a radio speech Friday, said "There is a limit to how far Tunisia will go along with the Congo...Tunisian solidarity is not unconditional."

Lumumba's strongest African support has come from Premier Toure of Guinea and President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana. Both have pledged troops to help Lumumba subdue Katanga.

ONE OF THESE two youngsters is a girl. She wanted a crewcut hairdo like the boys in the neighborhood, and she also wanted to play cowboys with her male friends. COURSES GET TOUGHER

Schools In Nation 'Beefing Up' Studies

By G. K. HODENFIELD
Associated Press education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's public schools may be soft, as many critics contend, but they are moving toward toughness.

Across the country the school day is being lengthened, courses in both the sciences and the humanities are being beefed up, and more attention is being paid to both the gifted and the dullard. The teaching of foreign languages is spreading. In at least one city it starts in the kindergarten.

A cross-country survey made by the National Education Assn. showed new programs and developments as the 1960-61 school year approached.

In Denver, Colo., 35 minutes a day has been added to the elementary school program, the equivalent of three weeks additional instruction time for the school year. Thirty minutes has been added to the junior high school day, and 15 minutes to the senior high program.

In Elizabeth, N. J., a new arithmetic course, developed at the University of Illinois, is to be offered in the first grade, with one grade to be added each year. The aim is to teach in six years what is now being taught in eight. In Ridgewood, N. J., the University of Illinois' new algebra program will be offered in the eighth and ninth grades. A new math program also is being started in East Baton Rouge, La.

The use of TV as a teaching tool is spreading. In New York City it will be used in workshop programs for teachers of English and science, reaching them at school half an hour before they leave for the day. Dallas, Tex., has scheduled a series of 10 half-hour TV shows before the opening of school aimed primarily at the 13,000 six-year-olds due to enroll this year.

Miami, Fla., has scheduled "early-bird classes" at 7:30 a. m. for students who want to work extra courses into their schedule. Syracuse and White Plains, N. Y., and Wichita, Kan., also have scheduled a longer school day.

In Atlanta, Ga., particular emphasis is being placed on the humanities, in an effort to restore history, the fine arts, literature and ethical and esthetic values "to a position of fundamental and basic importance." A new course in social studies, kindergarten through high school, has been developed in St. Louis, Mo.

Gifted students will be offered advanced physics and electronics in Oakland, Calif. Across the bay in San Francisco a new biochemistry laboratory has been established and plans are under way for special courses in astronomy, biology, geology, mathematics and chemistry.

In Erie, Pa., there will be special classes for gifted high school students who will do college-level work. In Newark, N. J., an accelerated mathematics course will give college work to high school seniors. Mineola, N. Y., goes into the final year of a controlled experiment to see if able students, attending school 11 months a year, can do four year's work in three.

In Columbus, Ohio, junior high students will be given remedial reading classes on early morning TV in the elementary schools with courses in art, foreign languages, music, physical education and science. Biology, geneal science, and U. S. history will be telecast to high school students. In Kansas City, Kan., a new educational TV station will go on the air four hours daily, programmed primarily for elementary school children.

Beverly Hills, Calif., will start daily instruction in French and Spanish to all pupils in the first, third, and fifth grades. The second, fourth and sixth grades will be added next year, and the seventh and eighth in 1962. The goal: a 12-year sequence in foreign languages. In Highland Park, Ill., Spanish instruction will start in kindergarten.

In Hawaii, five specialists have been hired to teach Chinese, Japanese and Hindi to classroom teachers as well as their pupils.

In Akron, Ohio, an eight-year program in French and Spanish will get under way, starting in the fifth grade and continuing through high school.

There are other developments. Chicago is undertaking a major study on why students drop out of school. Yonkers, N. Y., has a special program for emotionally disturbed children. Special programs for culturally deprived children, seeking talent and curbing delinquency, are being sponsored by the Ford Foundation in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

In Knoxville, Tenn., there will be a pilot experiment with students in the 80-90 I. Q. class—100 is considered average—in junior occupational training school, aimed at preparing them for such jobs as nurses' aides, waitresses, retail clerks and shop workers.

In Birmingham, Ala., blind children will be taught alongside those with normal vision in one elementary school. In Tacoma, Wash., three new elementary schools will combine regular facilities and those for the handicapped so that students who need physical occupational or other therapy may spend part of the day in regular school attendance.

Long Memory

WINDSOR, N. S. (AP) — John Crossley of Boston found the Nova Scotian memory long and true on his return to his boyhood home for a vacation. Mrs. Walter Salter handed him a check for $60 and said, "My father borrowed it from you 50 years ago."

IN NEW ORLEANS

Archbishop Asks School Prayers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel will tell Roman Catholics of the New Orleans archdiocese Sunday there is "danger of chaos and moral irresponsibility" in efforts to prevent federally-ordered integration of public schools here.

A pastoral letter to be read to all 182 Catholic churches in the Archdiocese described as "a flagrant action" the proposal to close all public schools "rather than integrate them even on a moderate installment basis."

U.S. Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright last May 16 ordered public schools to integrate the first grade next month. Under state law, the governor is authorized to close every public school in the state to prevent any of them from being integrated.

Gov. Jimmie Davis took over control of the 100 million dollar Orleans Parish public school system last Wednesday. Davis said the schools would open Sept. 7 on the traditional segregated basis.

A three-judge federal court next Friday will hold a hearing on a motion by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People to bar the state from interfering with the federal order of May 16. At the same time, the court will hear a suit by 31 white parents seeking to prevent closure of public schools. About 41,000 white pupils and 50,000 Negroes attend public schools.

The archbishop's letter was for the guidance of the Catholic parents of the 15,000 to 18,000 children in the public school system here. About 46,250 white and Negro students are enroled in the Catholic school system which is segregated. The archbishop recently said no definite date has been set for the integration of the Catholic schools.

"The private school plan, like the 'close our school' plan is no solution but dissolution, offers no constructive prospect of a 'dream come true' but only a dull grey dawn of illusion and frustration," the pastoral letter said. "Both plans have been tried and found wanting elsewhere."

The letter closed with a notice that Sunday would be ordained as a day of prayer throughout the archbishop for Catholics to pray for "an early solution of the race problem in our midst" and "a propitious response to the challenge for compliance with the ruling on the integration of our public system of education."

During the last few weeks, groups of Protestant ministers have adopted resolutions urging preservation of the public school system here.

Federal marshals finally left Baton Rouge after four days of attempts to serve the governor with a notice of the Aug. 26 court hearing. A. P. Tureaud, Louisiana attorney for the NAACP, said personal service on Davis was not required.

Davis planned to make a statewide television appearance next Thursday night. The subject was not announced but it was assumed he would discuss the school integration problem.

The governor said Friday the time had come for a showdown between the federal and state government on the question of states' rights and that segregation is just one of the issues.

Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans said he thought the question of state sovereignty had been "settled in the Civil War."

Morrison also said the city's attorney, Alvin Liska, had grave doubts that Davis could keep the public schools open and segregated.

IN 1959 YEAR

Taxpayers Shell Out $100 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans paid a record total of 100 billion dollars in taxes to Federal, state and local governments in 1959, the Census Bureau said Saturday.

The payments, which compared with $98,400,000,000 a year earlier, were made during the fiscal years which ended at different times during 1959, varying with the government concerned.

On a per person basis, taxes totaled $567.04. This was less than the 1958 level of $567.86 because the population grew a bit faster than tax collections.

The record for collections per person—$579.19—was recorded in 1957.

Federal tax collections per person during fiscal 1959 amounted to $381.35. State and local governments collected $185.69.

The biggest revenue producer was, as usual, the federal individual income tax. It brought in $208.20 per person. At the state and local level, the biggest taxes were property levies, $87.03 per person; sales taxes, $59.18; and income taxes, $11.31.

Federal tax revenues declined from 68 billion dollars to $67,300,000,000 in fiscal 1959 because of the delayed tax effect of the 1958 recession. However, the drop was more than offset by an increase in state and local tax collections from $30,400,000,000 to $32,700,000,000.

The three levels of government spent $124,800,000,000 during fiscal 1959, or considerably more than they received from taxes. The difference was financed through non-tax revenues and borrowings.

Federal spending totaled $75,300,000,000, while the states spent 17½ billions and local governments close to 32 billions.

On a per person basis, the biggest single item was federal defense spending at $274.37. State and local spending of $99.13 for education and $54.59 for streets and highways ranked next.

Lumumba's Actions Ire Africa Bloc

PARIS (AP)—Premier Patrice Lumumba of the Congo appeared Saturday to be antagonizing more and more African leaders with his attacks on U. N. authorities.

The most open signs of discontent appear in Arab North Africa, some former French states of Africa, and in Liberia, where President William V. Tubman acknowlenged being "perplexed and frustrated" by Lumumba's remarks.

There was no evidence, however, that anyone was getting ready to disclaim Lumumba. The general feeling seemed to be discontent over how Lumumba is conducting his afaifrs, not over his basic policies.

The first open African affront to Lumumba came last week when the French Congo, just across the river from the Belgian Congo, proclaimed its independence. Lumumba was pointedly left off the guest list, although Congo President Joseph Kasavubu was invited and turned up in a general's full uniform.

The French Congo probably accurately reflected the views of leaders in other former French areas of Africa. These men, many once ardent nationalists, have made their peace with France and now want stability and French economic aid in large quantities to build up their countries.

Premier Ahmadou Ahidjo of the newly independent Cameroon has shown signs of irritation with Lumumba. It is reported from his capital of Yaounde that he has sent cables to African leaders suggesting a postponement of the Lumumba-inspired inter-African conference scheduled at Leopoldville later this month.

Tunisia and Morocco, both with troops with the U. N. forces in the Congo, have shown concern over Lumumba's actions.

It was reported in Rabat that pro-Western King Mohamed V of Morocco had exchanged notes on the congo situation with president Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic and premier Sekou Toure of Guinea, both of whom have expressed support for Lumumba.

In Tunisia, the newspaper of President Habib Bourguiba's Neo-Destour party pointedly took issue with Lumumba's contention that U. N. troops should restore Congo government control over secessionist Katanga Province.

The ties between provinces of the Belgian Congo are a matter for the Congolese themselves, the paper said, "and the United Nations has no right to intervene, and the Congo government has no right to ask for such intervention."

This is the view taken by U. N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in rejecting Lumumba's demands. As a result, Lumumba has made Hammarskjold his chief target in assailing U. N. action in the Congo.

Bourguiba himself, in a radio speech Friday, said "There is a limit to how far Tunisia will go along with the Congo...Tunisian solidarity is not unconditional."

Lumumba's strongest African support has come from Premier Toure of Guinea and President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana. Both have pledged troops to help Lumumba subdue Katanga.

COURSES GET TOUGHER

Schools In Nation 'Beefing Up' Studies

By G. K. HODENFIELD
Associated Press education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's public schools may be soft, as many critics contend, but they are moving toward toughness.

Across the country the school day is being lengthened, courses in both the sciences and the humanities are being beefed up, and more attention is being paid to both the gifted and the dullard. The teaching of foreign languages is spreading. In at least one city it starts in the kindergarten.

A cross-country survey made by the National Education Assn. showed new programs and developments as the 1960-61 school year approached.

In Denver, Colo., 35 minutes a day has been added to the elementary school program, the equivalent of three weeks additional instruction time for the school year. Thirty minutes has been added to the junior high school day, and 15 minutes to the senior high program.

In Elizabeth, N. J., a new arithmetic course, developed at the University of Illinois, is to be offered in the first grade, with one grade to be added each year. The aim is to teach in six years what is now being taught in eight. In Ridgewood, N. J., the University of Illinois' new algebra program will be offered in the eighth and ninth grades. A new math program also is being started in East Baton Rouge, La.

The use of TV as a teaching tool is spreading. In New York City it will be used in workshop programs for teachers of English and science, reaching them at school half an hour before they leave for the day. Dallas, Tex., has scheduled a series of 10 half-hour TV shows before the opening of school aimed primarily at the 13,000 six-year-olds due to enroll this year.

Miami, Fla., has scheduled "early-bird classes" at 7:30 a. m. for students who want to work extra courses into their schedule. Syracuse and White Plains, N. Y., and Wichita, Kan., also have scheduled a longer school day.

In Atlanta, Ga., particular emphasis is being placed on the humanities, in an effort to restore history, the fine arts, literature and ethical and esthetic values "to a position of fundamental and basic importance." A new course in social studies, kindergarten through high school, has been developed in St. Louis, Mo.

Gifted students will be offered advanced physics and electronics in Oakland, Calif. Across the bay in San Francisco a new biochemistry laboratory has been established and plans are under way for special courses in astronomy, biology, geology, mathematics and chemistry.

In Erie, Pa., there will be special classes for gifted high school students who will do college-level work. In Newark, N. J., an accelerated mathematics course will give college work to high school seniors. Mineola, N. Y., goes into the final year of a controlled experiment to see if able students, attending school 11 months a year, can do four year's work in three.

In Columbus, Ohio, junior high students will be given remedial reading classes on early morning TV in the elementary schools with courses in art, foreign languages, music, physical education and science. Biology, geneal science, and U. S. history will be telecast to high school students. In Kansas City, Kan., a new educational TV station will go on the air four hours daily, programmed primarily for elementary school children.

Beverly Hills, Calif., will start daily instruction in French and Spanish to all pupils in the first, third, and fifth grades. The second, fourth and sixth grades will be added next year, and the seventh and eighth in 1962. The goal: a 12-year sequence in foreign languages. In Highland Park, Ill., Spanish instruction will start in kindergarten.

In Hawaii, five specialists have been hired to teach Chinese, Japanese and Hindi to classroom teachers as well as their pupils.

In Akron, Ohio, an eight-year program in French and Spanish will get under way, starting in the fifth grade and continuing through high school.

There are other developments. Chicago is undertaking a major study on why students drop out of school. Yonkers, N. Y., has a special program for emotionally disturbed children. Special programs for culturally deprived children, seeking talent and curbing delinquency, are being sponsored by the Ford Foundation in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

In Knoxville, Tenn., there will be a pilot experiment with students in the 80-90 I. Q. class—100 is considered average—in junior occupational training school, aimed at preparing them for such jobs as nurses' aides, waitresses, retail clerks and shop workers.

In Birmingham, Ala., blind children will be taught alongside those with normal vision in one elementary school. In Tacoma, Wash., three new elementary schools will combine regular facilities and those for the handicapped so that students who need physical occupational or other therapy may spend part of the day in regular school attendance.

Long Memory

WINDSOR, N. S. (AP) — John Crossley of Boston found the Nova Scotian memory long and true on his return to his boyhood home for a vacation. Mrs. Walter Salter handed him a check for $60 and said. "My father borrowed it from you 50 years ago."

IN NEW ORLEANS

Archbishop Asks School Prayers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel will tell Roman Catholics of the New Orleans archdiocese Sunday there is "danger of chaos and moral irresponsibility" in efforts to prevent federally-ordered integration of public schools here.

A pastoral letter to be read to all 182 Catholic churches in the Archdiocese described as "a flagrant action" the proposal to close all public schools "rather than integrate them even on a moderate installment basis."

U.S. Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright last May 16 ordered public schools to integrate the first grade next month. Under state law, the governor is authorized to close every public school in the state to prevent any of them from being integrated.

Gov. Jimmie Davis took over control of the 100 million dollar Orleans Parish public school system last Wednesday. Davis said the schools would open Sept. 7 on the traditional segregated basis.

A three-judge federal court next Friday will hold a hearing on a motion by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People to bar the state from interfering with the federal order of May 16. At the same time, the court will hear a suit by 31 white parents seeking to prevent closure of public schools. About 41,000 white pupils and 50,000 Negroes attend public schools.

The archbishop's letter was for the guidance of the Catholic parents of the 15,000 to 18,000 children in the public school system here. About 46,250 white and Negro students are enroled in the Catholic school system which is segregated. The archbishop recently said no definite date has been set for the integration of the Catholic schools.

"The private school plan, like the 'close our school' plan is no solution but dissolution, offers no constructive prospect of a 'dream come true' but only a dull grey dawn of illusion and frustration," the pastoral letter said. "Both plans have been tried and found wanting elsewhere."

The letter closed with a notice that Sunday would be ordained as a day of prayer throughout the archbishop for Catholics to pray for "an early solution of the race problem in our midst" and "a propitious response to the challenge for compliance with the ruling on the integration of our public system of education."

During the last few weeks, groups of Protestant ministers have adopted resolutions urging preservation of the public school system here.

Federal marshals finally left Baton Rouge after four days of attempts to serve the governor with a notice of the Aug. 26 court hearing. A. P. Tureaud, Louisiana attorney for the NAACP, said personal service on Davis was not required.

Davis planned to make a statewide television appearance next Thursday night. The subject was not announced but it was assumed he would discuss the school integration problem.

The governor said Friday the time had come for a showdown between the federal and state government on the question of states' rights and that segregation is just one of the issues.

Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans said he thought the question of state sovereignty had been "settled in the Civil War."

Morrison also said the city's attorney, Alvin Liska, had grave doubts that Davis could keep the public schools open and segregated.

Truman 'Buries Hatchet,' Pledges Kennedy Support

By ALVIN SPIVAK

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI)—Former President Harry S. Truman greeted Sen. John F. Kennedy like a long-lost son Saturday and vowed all out support in the presidential campaign Truman once tried to keep Kennedy out of.

The 76-year-old former chief executive didn't take back any of the things he said about Kennedy July 2 at the Truman library when he said the Democratic convention had been "fixed" for Kennedy and suggested Kennedy was too young to be president.

But joining the 43-year-old nominee on the same platform where he had made those statements, Truman told a news conference that the Democratic National Convention had nominated Kennedy and that was good enough for him.

"It's the law of the Democratic party, and I'm a Democrat," Truman said. "I follow their law."

In a session marked by much smiling and laughter by Kennedy and Truman, and a number of quips by the former president, Truman was asked point blank if he still felt the convention had been "fixed" by Kennedy backers.

"I did not say that," Truman replied. "I said it looked to me as if the convention was already made up the way it was supposed to go, and that is what the trouble was. And it was, and it has been done all right, and they nominated this man, and I am going to support him. What are you going to do about that?"

Truman gave Kennedy a warm reception from the moment the nominee entered the door of the library building. They met privately for about a half hour in Truman's office, held their joint news conference and afterward Truman personally gave Kennedy a guided tour of the library. On Kennedy's last visit to Independence Nov. 19, 1959, Truman had delegated the tour job to library director Dr. Philip Brooks.

Entering the auditorium with a broad smile on his face, Truman held out a chair for Kennedy and they sat side-by-side to answer questions from newsmen. They were flanked by Democratic National Chairman Henry M. Jackson and by Sen. Stuart Symington, (D-Mo.), who had been Truman's choice over Kennedy for the Democratic nomination.

The warmth of their meeting had been apparent from the start when Truman, after clasping hands with Kennedy at the library door, ushered him inside and said, "Come on in here, young man, I want to talk to you alone and then we'll go out and talk to all of them."

Truman said the only date firmly set so far was for him to speak at a Labor Day meeting at Marion, Ind. Kennedy said Truman also would visit New York City later, among other points on a court-to-coast speaking tour.

Truman predicated Kennedy would carry Missouri by a "overwhelming majority" in the November election, but he would not get specific about other states.

"I don't have any faith in political prophets or pollsters," Truman said. "That's all there is to it."

As for polls, Truman laughingly said "they don't mean a thing" when a newsman asked his opinion of a recent Gallup poll giving Kennedy's rival, vice president Richard M. Nixon, a 50-44 per cent advantage.

Truman said he could remember a Gallup poll that gave Republican candidate Thomas E. Dewey a victory edge over him in 1948.

Kennedy said he planned to use Truman as "a source of advice and counsel on all issues, including foreign policy."

Truman said the overriding 1960 issues are what he called "destruction of foreign policy," along with agricultural programs and what he described as "operation of the national debt and handling of finances which are a disgrace."

Truman was asked how he now feels about his July 2 question of whether Kennedy was too young for the White House. Truman snapped back that "the Democratic National Convention solved that, and that's all there is to it."

Kennedy, who flew here from Washington Saturday in his private twin-engine Convair, went with Truman from Indepedence to nearby Kansas City for a luncheon with Missouri political leaders.

From there, Kennedy's schedule included:

— A flight late Saturday afternoon to Offut Air Force Base at Omaha, Neb., for an inspection tour of Strategic Air Command headquarters and an overnight stay as the guest of Gen. Curtis Lemay, Air Force vice chief of staff.

—Participation Sunday in a farm conference at Des Moines, Iowa, with Midwestern Democratic and farm leaders. Kennedy's vice presidential running mate, Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, also will attend.

Kennedy plans to fly back to Washington from Des Moines, arriving about 1 a.m. (EDT) Monday, to attend next week's Senate session.

Religious Issue Divides Family

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Knoxville housewife has charged in a separate maintenance bill that her husband refused to let her take their 3-year-old son to the Baptist church because "Baptist preachers are against" Sen. John F. Kennedy for president.

Loretta Smith Clotfelter, 38, filed the bill in Domestic Relations Court Friday against Joe Lafayette Clotfelter, 46, a Tennessee Valley Authority carpenter.

In her petition, Mrs. Clotfelter said that an argument arose Thursday over the question of going to church and that he struck her and told her "to get out of the house and leave him."

Robber Copping Top Art Prizes

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—A convicted robber is stealing the show at a San Quentin Prison art exhibit.

Joseph Calderon of Phoenix, Ariz., won four first prizes, one third prize and best of show honors at the exhibit which opened today.

He's sulking because he set low prices for his award winning works and can't increase them. The prison won't allow it.

WHITE HOUSE TRAIL

Both Sides Woo Southern Votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats made it clear last week there's room for all in their campaign tent: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi came in.

Republicans weren't turning anybody away either, whether they be conservatives who admire Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona or union members who think well of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

And both sides wooed the South while accusing each other of playing politics for Negro votes in the North on the matter of transporting African students to the United States.

Democratic presidential nominee John F. Kennedy went to Hyde Park, N. Y., to talk things over with Mrs. Roosevelt, who had tried to block him from the nomination.

Kennedy reported afterward: "I asked for her help, and she said that she would help."

Eastland's support for Kennedy was volunteered in a statement at Washington.

But the senator, who fights civil rights bills as vigorously as Mrs. Roosevelt demands them, stopped abruptly short of swallowing the Democratic platform.

Anyhow, it was a rare example of togetherness.

During the Republican convention that nominated Richard M. Nixon for president and Henry Cabot Lodge for vice president, some fears were expressed that conservatives might sit out the election this year.

But Goldwater, whom some have come to regard as the noblest conservative of them all, reported last week: "Conservative leaders from all over the country have been writing me, volunteering to do what they can for the ticket."

And further in the Republican version of togetherness, Mitchell predicted the rank and file of union labor will vote Republican in 1960. Just as it did in 1956, he added.

One of the campaign's most spirited quarrels flared over the question of who should pay the travel costs of 250 Africans coming here to study.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa) charged that a Kennedy family foundation used its tax-exempt funds to pick up the $100,000 tab, for "blatant political purposes."

Not so, retorted Kennedy. He said the foundation acted with the stipulation that it not be identified as the donor, and only after the State Department had refused to help the students.

Democrats demanded that the department say whether a Nixon campaign aide engineered a switch by which the department offered to pay the $100,000 after all.

Nixon found reason, in the hearty cheers of a big crowd at Greensboro, N. C., to believe he might do quite well in the South this year.

He said he was encouraged to hope that North Carolina, which came close to going Republican in 1956, would make it all the way over this time.

President Eisenhower didn't hurt the Republicans down South, either, with a tribute to Robert E. Lee as "one of the supremely gifted men produced by our nation—noble as a leader and as a man."

But in Atlanta, Matthew McCloskey of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, declared confidently: "The Democratic party will carry every state in the South in November."

The religious issue took two roads.

Dr. Ramsey Pollard of Memphis, president of the nine-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, predicted that most Baptist preachers in the South will use their pulpits to argue against the election of Kennedy because he is a Roman Catholic.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY), a Jew, reported a campaign is under way to charge Nixon, a Quaker, with anti-semitism. Javits denounced this as "a vicious canard about which there is not and never has been the slightest shred of truth."

Special campaign groups:

A Gallup poll showed Nixon with 50 per cent of the vote and Kennedy with 44 per cent, with 6 per cent undecided.

Nixon's people said they were encouraged but not complacent; Kennedy's camp said he was not disillusioned, that he "has always felt it would be a tough, hard fight."

Ransom Elected Cotton Contact Committee Head

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Paul Ransom, Monroe cotton grower, has been re-elected chairman of the Louisiana Cotton Contact Committee, an industry-wide group devoted to more efficient cotton growing and to promotion of agricultural research. The committee selected officers for the coming year at a meeting held at Louisiana State University in conjunction with Farm and Home Week.

Charles Roemer of Bossier City was re-elected vice-chairman of the contact committee and Dalton Gandy of Ruston was again named secretary.

The Cotton Contact Committee named a 16-man steering committee which includes, in addition to the three officers, Sam Thornton, Boyce; James Parrish, Girard; Roane Hathorne, Alexandria; Harvey Grant, Delhi; Archie Manuel, Eunice; Dan P. Logan, Gilliam; Phillip Wemple, Cheneyville; Richard Sanders, Morrow; Jack Dillard, Shreveport; Jim Henry Gilfoil, Lake Providence; Charles Grayson, Fort Necessity; Joe Mott, Oak Ridge; and Adrian Land, Natchitoches.

At its meeting during Farm and Home Week the committee heard talks by Dr. J. Norman Efferson, dean of the LSU College of Agriculture, and Dr. J. J. Mikell, assistant director of the LSU Agricultural Experiment Station, and received reports on cotton research now bieng conducted by the University.

STICKS WITH DEMO PARTY

Truman 'Buries Hatchet,' Pledges Kennedy Support

By ALVIN SPIVAK

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI)— Former President Harry S. Truman greeted Sen. John F. Kennedy like a long-lost son Saturday and vowed all out support in the presidential campaign Truman once tried to keep Kennedy out of.

The 76-year-old former chief executive didn't take back any of the things he said about Kennedy July 2 at the Truman library when he said the Democratic convention had been "fixed" for Kennedy and suggested Kennedy was too young to be president.

But joining the 43-year-old nominee on the same platform where he had made those statements, Truman told a news conference that the Democratic National Convention had nominated Kennedy and that was good enough for him.

"It's the law of the Democratic party, and I'm a Democrat," Truman said. "I follow their law."

In a session marked by much smiling and laughter by Kennedy and Truman, and a number of quips by the former president, Truman was asked point blank if he still felt the convention had been "fixed" by Kennedy backers.

"I did not say that," Truman replied. "I said it looked to me as if the convention was already made up the way it was supposed to go, and that is what the trouble was. And it was, and it has been done all right, and they nominated this man, and I am going to support him. What are you going to do about that?"

Truman gave Kennedy a warm reception from the moment the nominee entered the door of the library building. They met privately for about a half hour in Truman's office, held their joint news conference and afterward Truman personally gave Kennedy a guided tour of the library. On Kennedy's last visit to Independence Nov. 19, 1959, Truman had delegated the tour job to library director Dr. Philip Brooks.

Entering the auditorium with a broad smile on his face, Truman held out a chair for Kennedy and they sat side-by-side to answer questions from newsmen. They were flanked by Democratic National Chairman Henry M. Jackson and by Sen. Stuart Symington, (D-Mo.), who had been Truman's choice over Kennedy for the Democratic nomination.

The warmth of their meeting had been apparent from the start when Truman, after clasping hands with Kennedy at the library door, ushered him inside and said, "Come on in here, young man, I want to talk to you alone and then we'll go out and talk to all of them."

Truman said the only date firmly set so far was for him to speak at a Labor Day meeting at Marion, Ind. Kennedy said Truman also would visit New York City later, among other points on a court-to-coast speaking tour.

Truman predicated Kennedy would carry Missouri by a "overwhelming majority" in the November election, but he would not get specific about other states.

"I don't have any faith in political prophets or pollsters," Truman said. "That's all there is to it."

As for polls, Truman laughingly said "they don't mean a thing" when a newsman asked his opinion of a recent Gallup poll giving Kennedy's rival, vice president Richard M. Nixon, a 50-44 per cent advantage.

Truman said he could remember a Gallup poll that gave Republican candidate Thomas E. Dewey a victory edge over him in 1948.

Kennedy said he planned to use Truman as "a source of advice and counsel on all issues, including foreign policy."

Truman said the overriding 1960 issues are what he called "destruction of foreign policy," along with agricultural programs and what he described as "operation of the national debt and handling of finances which are a disgrace."

Truman was asked how he now feels about his July 2 question of whether Kennedy was too young for the White House. Truman snapped back that "the Democratic National Convention solved that, and that's all there is to it."

Kennedy, who flew here from Washington Saturday in his private twin-engine Convair, went with Truman from Indepedence to nearby Kansas City for a luncheon with Missouri political leaders.

From there, Kennedy's schedule included:

— A flight late Saturday afternoon to Offut Air Force Base at Omaha, Neb., for an inspection tour of Strategic Air Command headquarters and an overnight stay as the guest of Gen. Curtis Lemay, Air Force vice chief of staff.

—Participation Sunday in a farm conference at Des Moines, Iowa, with Midwestern Democratic and farm leaders. Kennedy's vice presidential running mate, Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, also will attend.

Kennedy plans to fly back to Washington from Des Moines, arriving about 1 a.m. (EDT) Monday, to attend next week's Senate session.

Religious Issue Divides Family

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Knoxville housewife has charged in a separate maintenance bill that her husband refused to let her take their 3-year-old son to the Baptist church because "Baptist preachers are against" Sen. John F. Kennedy for president.

Loretta Smith Clotfelter, 38, filed the bill in Domestic Relations Court Friday against Joe Lafayette Clotfelter, 46, a Tennessee Valley Authority carpenter.

In her petition, Mrs. Clotfelter said that an argument arose Thursday over the question of going to church and that he struck her and told her "to get out of the house and leave him."

Robber Copping Top Art Prizes

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)— A convicted robber is stealing the show at a San Quentin Prison art exhibit.

Joseph Calderon of Phoenix, Ariz., won four first prizes, one third prize and best of show honors at the exhibit which opened today.

He's sulking because he set low prices for his award winning works and can't increase them. The prison won't allow it.

WHITE HOUSE TRAIL

Both Sides Woo Southern Votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats made it clear last week there's room for all in their campaign tent: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi came in.

Republicans weren't turning anybody away either, whether they be conservatives who admire Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona or union members who think well of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

And both sides wooed the South while accusing each other of playing politics for Negro votes in the North on the matter of transporting African students to the United States.

Democratic presidential nominee John F. Kennedy went to Hyde Park, N. Y., to talk things over with Mrs. Roosevelt, who had tried to block him from the nomination.

Kennedy reported afterward: "I asked for her help, and she said that she would help."

Eastland's support for Kennedy was volunteered in a statement at Washington.

But the senator, who fights civil rights bills as vigorously as Mrs. Roosevelt demands them, stopped abruptly short of swallowing the Democratic platform.

Anyhow, it was a rare example of togetherness.

During the Republican convention that nominated Richard M. Nixon for president and Henry Cabot Lodge for vice president, some fears were expressed that conservatives might sit out the election this year.

But Goldwater, whom some have come to regard as the noblest conservative of them all, reported last week: "Conservative leaders from all over the country have been writing me, volunteering to do what they can for the ticket."

And further in the Republican version of togetherness, Mitchell predicted the rank and file of union labor will vote Republican in 1960. Just as it did in 1956, he added.

One of the campaign's most spirited quarrels flared over the question of who should pay the travel costs of 250 Africans coming here to study.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa) charged that a Kennedy family foundation used its tax-exempt funds to pick up the $100,000 tab, for "blatant political purposes."

Not so, retorted Kennedy. He said the foundation acted with the stipulation that it not be identified as the donor, and only after the State Department had refused to help the students.

Democrats demanded that the department say whether a Nixon campaign aide engineered a switch by which the department offered to pay the $100,000 after all.

Nixon found reason, in the hearty cheers of a big crowd at Greensboro, N. C., to believe he might do quite well in the South this year.

He said he was encouraged to hope that North Carolina, which came close to going Republican in 1956, would make it all the way over this time.

President Eisenhower didn't hurt the Republicans down South, either, with a tribute to Robert E. Lee as "one of the supremely gifted men produced by our nation—noble as a leader and as a man."

But in Atlanta, Matthew McCloskey of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, declared confidently: "The Democratic party will carry every state in the South in November."

The religious issue took two roads.

Dr. Ramsey Pollard of Memphis, president of the nine-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, predicted that most Baptist preachers in the South will use their pulpits to argue against the election of Kennedy because he is a Roman Catholic.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY), a Jew, reported a campaign is under way to charge Nixon, a Quaker, with anti-semitism. Javits denounced this as "a vicious canard about which there is not and never has been the slightest shred of truth."

FLEES STRONGHOLD

Armed Man Eludes Police After Siege

TULARE, S. D. (AP) — Police broke into the stronghold of a heavily armed farmer Saturday night to find him gone.

They completed a search after a 39-hour siege of a machine shed at the farm of Donald Blume, 38, a bachelor sought on an assault warrant.

Police first used a loudspeaker urging Blume to come out. They fired sporadically around the farm buildings but there was no return fire or other response.

Officers then lobbed gas cartridges into the building with no reaction before they inaugurated a through search of the shed and surrounding buildings.

State's Atty. Richard Battey said an alert was sent out to law authorities over the state, warning that Blume, a former mental patient, apparently was still armed with a rifle and shotgun. Some weapons were left behind in the shed.

The siege force was dispersed and no active pursuit of Blume was planned. Battey said the large force used to surround the farm was needed because of Blume's "very dangerous propensities."

Police records showed Blume resisted arrest one month ago when an officer tried to pick him up for drunken driving. He also menaced a sheriff by pointing a rifle at the sheriff as he drove by recently, and had a reputation for carrying a rifle with him most everywhere.

Police fired from behind the home of Russell Harms, about 500 feet across the road from the Blume place. Blume was thought to be armed with two rifles and a pistol.

Harms was the complaining witness in a case that brought on the siege.

He reported Blume took a shot at him as he drove into his driveway Wednesday night. A charge of assault to kill was issued and Sheriff Curtiss Buss, with supporting officers, took it to the Blume farm.

Reportedly, a shot was heard when the officers drew near the farm. Reinforcements were called and 19 officers ringed the Blume home until late Friday night. Several persons were reported unsuccessful in attempts to get Blume to give himself up.

Blume, described as a dark-haired, good-looking man who keeps to himself, was committed for a short time in 1958 at Yankton State Mental Hospital.

Neighbors said animosity built up between Harms and Blume and that Harms once reportedly shot Blume's dog years ago.

Harms also was a witness seeing commitment of his neighbor to a mental hospital.

War Exercises Fatal For One, Others Injured

FT. BRAGG N.C. (UPI)—More than 7,100 paratroopers playing the role of friendly forces in a mock war staged the largest single day Army airborne assault exercise since World War II Saturday.

One trooper was killed and five others hospitalized with jump injuries. Fourteen others suffered minor injuries but joined their units in the Pine Woods Battle Ground after emergency treatment.

The name of the trooper who was killed was withheld pending notification of next of kin. He died of multiple injuries, including fractures of the skull, arms, leg and spine.

The maneuver, called Exercise Bright Star-Pine Cone III, was designed to test the ability of units of the Strategic Army Corps to handle limited "brush fire" wars.

Using a script patterned after several recent international incidents the Army set up aggressor forces in the mythical nation identified as a satellite of an aggressor state.

The paratroopers in the mass drop were members of the 101st Airborne Division from Ft. Campbell, Ky., carrying out the type mission envisioned when STRAC was established more than two years ago. They were rushed here to repell the invaders from Platka's soil and restore peace.

The script called for them to win in about a week.

Pair Charged With Thefts

Monroe police arrested two men yesterday, charging both with theft and one of them with disturbing the peace.

Arrested late yesterday afternoon was Leon Brewster, 42, no permanent address. He was charged with theft, item valued at more than $20, and with disturbing the peace. He is being held on a $350 bond.

Also charged with theft and placed on $350 bond was George Dyer, 39, of 617 Wood St. He was arrested at 9 p.m.

Snake Handler Bitten By Cobra

MIAMI (UPI)— Bill Haast, director of the Miami Serpentarium, was bitten by a poisonous snake for the 64th time Saturday.

Haast, 49, was struck on the right thumb by a four-foot Indian Cobra from which he was attempting to extract venom.

The veteran snake handler, who has built up considerable immunity to poisonous bites over the years, said he took some anti-venom injections, but didn't plan to enter the hospital.

"My thoart's a little hoarse," he said, "and my hand is swollen to the wrist. But those are the only effects."

He said it was the 30th time a cobra has bitten him. He was last bitten about three months ago, by a rattlesnake, and was hospitalized for several days that time.

Editor Horace Greeley, nominally a Republican, was the Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1872. He lost to Ulysses S. Grant.

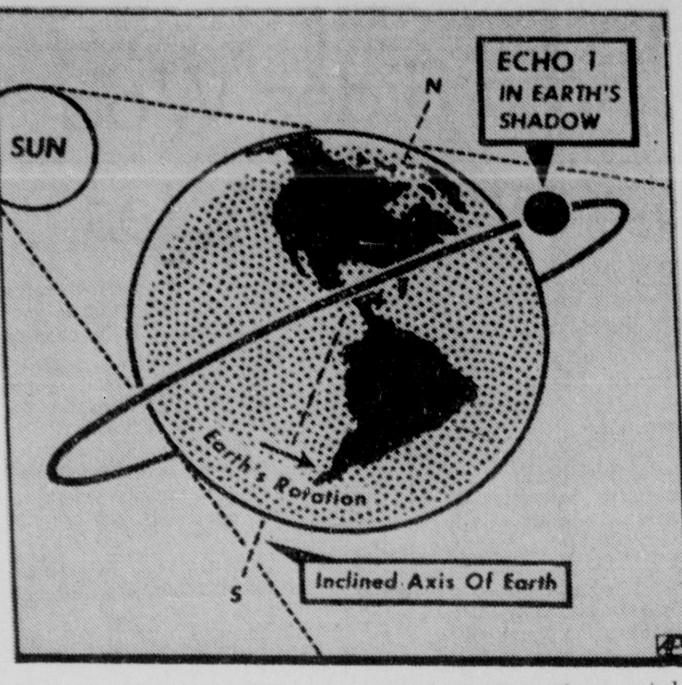

DIAGRAM SHOWS how Echo I communications satellite will be in earth's shadow for first time Sunday night. Although it will be in shadow only briefly the first night, dark periods will increase until satellite spends 60 per cent of time in darkness, then pattern will be reversed. The reason for the change is due to tilt of Earth's axis in relation to its plane of orbit around the sun. Since satellite's orbit is at constant incline in relation to Earth's axis it shifts in and out of full sunlight as Earth moves around sun. (AP Wirephoto)

FULFILLS STRANGE VOW

Dancer Drives Car Into Stone Bridge

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

ATLANTA (UPI) — Striptease dancer Chilli Evans slammed her new car into a stone bridge abutment on an Atlanta expressway early Saturday and fulfilled a strange and lonely suicide vow made in the dim lights backstage.

Two other exotic dancers and a burlesque band trumpet player tried to prevent the attractive redhaired performer from carrying out her vow. But no one in the audience at her last show knew of the dancer's despair. Her routine was daring and gay.

Before the last show at the Atlanta's Harem Club, Chilli sobbed in her dressing room and told another stripper, Peggy Jones, that "I have nothing to live for.

"I know a beautiful brick wall that I'm going to drive my car into at 90 miles an hour — 90 miles, Hell, I'm going to cram into that wall at 120."

Police estimated she was driving at least 100 m.p.h. when her car hit the abutment.

Miss Evans, 30, was the mother of four. Her real name was Marguerite Suzanne Galento, the estranged wife of a Memphis, Tenn., wrestler.

She had just bought a new home in Forest Park, an Atlanta suburb, and last week was as gay and happy buying furniture and making plans for the house and sending the children to school as she was in her exotic routines behind the footlights on the uptown show club.

"She was always dramatic, and often despondent," Peggy Jones said. "She would look in the mirror and say 'You're no good, You're no good.' She was moody, but not hard to get along with. She had a boyfriend and had even talked about marrying him."

The house buying was an interlude, her friends said. Friday night, she telephoned someone and told them "she was leaving. This was it, and she mentioned Highway 41," stripper Myra Lane, who overheard the conversation, said.

"She kept saying she couldn't make the next show—but she did, and put it on beautifully. She was always saying she couldn't go on, but she would, and she was a good dancer and usually received or shared top billing." Her last routine was an oriental-tye dance.

After the last show Chilli broke down. Myra, Peggy and trumpet player took her to a restaurant around the corner, and she drank four cups of coffee. "We didn't want to leave her or let her get in that car alone. Don (the trumpet player) asked her to take him home, and we followed them downtown," Peggy said.

"She let Don out, and he talked to her for a long time. We stayed behind but kept her in sight. Then she tore out the expressway. We ran one red light trying to keep up, but we lost her. She was just around the bend. She went into that wall without a waver."

"Before she left the restaurant, I hugged her and talked to her but she was crying and had been crying for hours...it was after 2 a.m. I talked about her fine, beautiful children, and she said they'd be better off without her. I told her 'You don't mean it. I don't believe it."

The dancer's body was wedged in the crushed wreckage of the car and she died in route to a hospital.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER
SENATOR FROM ARIZONA

Recently a thoughtful reader addressed the following letter to this column:

"I think your column this morning is a false fingerpost directing us toward national, if not global, obliteration. I do not question your good faith when you write, 'I am not suggesting preventive war or war of any kind involving shooting or bombing,' but none the less, that is exactly what your article, taken as a whole, does suggest — not advocates, but suggests.

"Is it not a fact that your proposals for the conduct of the cold war actually call for the following ultimatum from our government to the world's two most populous nations?: 'Quit being communist, get "democratic" — or fight.'

"Could there be any course more suicidal thus to force into each other's arms those two powerful potential foes instead of cannily seeking to promote the mutual jealousy and mistrust now evident between them?"

I appreciate the concern expressed by this writer. Apparently, the column which aroused this response failed to clearly express my intended meaning.

Since the end of World War II we have, through our various programs of foreign aid, attempted to inspire many countries to remake their political structure in the pattern of the United States of America. It is obvious from one glance at the world situation today that our efforts have been a failure.

I did not and do not advocate preventive war. My position on foreign policy does not suggest such action. I do not propose that we issue an ultimatum to any other nation: "Quit being communist, get democratic or fight!"

What I am advocating is this: we should make it clear that we have no intention of becoming communist, or surrendering the individual freedoms purchased for us by the devotion and blood of our forefathers.

It may be, as the writer suggests, there is some jealousy and mutual distrust between Russia and Red China. But the point of difference is not over their objective, which is to communize the world, it is rather over the means they are now employing to achieve that objective. The Red Chinese apparently would prefer to use force immediately. The Red Russians apparently prefer the less costly procedure of subversion and political action — counting on our apathy to permit them a victory.

What I am suggesting, sir, is that we put our own military establishment in order and then proclaim to the world, as we have done repeatedly, that we have no intention of using our military power to interfere in the internal affairs of Red Russia or Red China. They can remain communist if they choose but we will not permit them to force communism on us or on any of our friends and allies who now being free desire to remain free.

The avowed purpose of communism is to conquer the world. Mr. K. boasted: "We will bury you."

Now consider this: if the communists are determined to conquer the world and willing to fight to achieve their objective, then how do we increase the possibility of war by declaring our intention to resist and implementing our capacity to resist?

The only alternative is to surrender — if not formally, then inferentially by admitting that we will not fight to defend our freedom — to keep Khrushchev from "burying" us.

It seems to me the safest course, the surest way to avoid war, is to make this nation militarily superior to any aggressor or combination of aggressors and then to announce to the world our determined intention to resist aggression.

It is my opinion that only by so doing can we prevent: a war of conquets being waged against us; or, being compelled by our fear of war to make piecemeal surrender and eventually accept the dictates of the Russian masters. How do you stand, sir?

Envoys Changed By U.N. Chief

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —U. N. Secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold announced Saturday that Rajeshwar Dayal, an Indian diplomat, will succeed Ralph J. Bunche as the secretary-general's personal representative in the Congo.

Dayal, who formerly headed India's delegation to the U. N., now is India's high commissioner to Pakistan. He will come here for conferences before going to Leopoldville.

Bunche, an American Negro undersecretary in the U. N., was assigned to the job in the Congo when the emergency flared in July. He has been ignored and snubbed in recent days by Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Stock Market Shows Only Slight Gain

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week managed a moderate gain on average while "digesting" the wide advance of the previous week.

It was a narrowly-moving, cautious market with only one three-million-share day. Volume declined to 13,702,603 shares from 14,699,940 the prior week.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.09 to 629.27 as it nudged through a theoretical upside resistance level.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 1.70 to 221.40.

The first four sessions were evenly divided—two small gains and two narrow losses, according to the averages. Friday provided a fairly sharp rise. It came as a surprise because it was a sluggish day. The boost resulted from a combination of gains by blue chips represented in the averages while the list as a whole performed indifferently.

AVERAGES

Even on the days when the averages were declining, however, more stocks advanced than declined. By Friday, this superiority of plus over minus signs had continued for 12 straight sessions.

The steady predominance of gains over losses, plus the ability of the market to absorb profit-taking despite the previous large advance and the rather drab background of news, were encouraging technical factors. In a quiet way, considerable investment buying was under way.

General Motors, frequently cited as a bellwether of the entire list, wa a beneficiary of this high quality buying and it rose 1⅞ as third most active stock.

ACTIVE

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Continental Industries, up ⅞ at 8⅞ on 160,300 shares.

For the third week in a row Treasury bond prices declined while corporates gained ground this week. Trading was lackluster in both markets.

Despite advances late in the week, losses of U.S. government securities raeched a full point for the week. Meanwhile, all sections of the corporate list except foreign bonds closed out their fifth consecutive week at 1960 weekly peaks, according to the Associated Press average.

Industrials turned in the best performance in the corporate market, gaining more than half a point on the AP index. Rails, utilities and high grade issues recorded moderate advances and foreign bonds posted a minimum drop.

Volume totaled $23,894,000 par value on the New ork Stock Exchange compared with $24,655,000 last week and $24,811,000 a year ago. Daily average volume dropped to $4,778,800 from near the five million level.

Again the long term treasury issues lost the most.

FLEES STRONGHOLD

Armed Man Eludes Police After Siege

TULARE, S. D. (AP) — Police broke into the stronghold of a heavily armed farmer Saturday night to find him gone.

They completed a search after a 39-hour siege of a machine shed at the farm of Donald Blume, 38, a bachelor sought on an assault warrant.

Police first used a loudspeaker urging Blume to come out. They fired sporadically around the farm buildings but there was no return fire or other response.

Officers then lobbed gas cartridges into the building with no reaction before they inaugurated a through search of the shed and surrounding buildings.

State's Atty. Richard Battey said an alert was sent out to law authorities over the state, warning that Blume, a former mental patient, apparently was still armed with a rifle and shotgun. Some weapons were left behind in the shed.

The siege force was dispersed and no active pursuit of Blume was planned. Battey said the large force used to surround the farm was needed because of Blume's "very dangerous propensities."

Police records showed Blume resisted arrest one month ago when an officer tried to pick him up for drunken driving. He also menaced a sheriff by pointing a rifle at the sheriff as he drove by recently, and had a reputation for carrying a rifle with him most everywhere.

Police fired from behind the home of Russell Harms, about 500 feet across the road from the Blume place. Blume was thought to be armed with two rifles and a pistol.

Harms was the complaining witness in a case that brought on the siege.

He reported Blume took a shot at him as he drove into his driveway Wednesday night. A charge of assault to kill was issued and Sheriff Curtiss Buss, with supporting officers, took it to the Blume farm.

Reportedly, a shot was heard when the officers drew near the farm. Reinforcements were called and 19 officers ringed the Blume home until late Friday night. Several persons were reported unsuccessful in attempts to get Blume to give himself up.

Blume, described as a dark-haired, good-looking man who keeps to himself, was committed for a short time in 1958 at Yankton State Mental Hospital.

Neighbors said animosity built up between Harms and Blume and that Harms once reportedly shot Blume's dog years ago.

Harms also was a witness seeing commitment of his neighbor to a mental hospital.

War Exercises Fatal For One, Others Injured

FT. BRAGG N.C. (UPI)—More than 7,100 paratroopers playing the role of friendly forces in a mock war staged the largest single day Army airborne assault exercise since World War II Saturday.

One trooper was killed and five others hospitalized with jump injuries. Fourteen others suffered minor injuries but joined their units in the Pine Woods Battle Ground after emergency treatment.

The name of the trooper who was killed was withheld pending notification of next of kin. He died of multiple injuries, including fractures of the skull, arms, leg and spine.

The maneuver, called Exercise Bright Star-Pine Cone III, was designed to test the ability of units of the Strategic Army Corps to handle limited "brush fire" wars.

Using a script patterned after several recent international incidents the Army set up aggressor forces in the mythical nation identified as a satellite of an aggressor state.

The paratroopers in the mass drop were members of the 101st Airborne Division from Ft. Campbell, Ky., carrying out the type mission envisioned when STRAC was established more than two years ago. They were rushed here to repell the invaders from Platka's soil and restore peace.

The script called for them to win in about a week.

Pair Charged With Thefts

Monroe police arrested two men yesterday, charging both with theft and one of them with disturbing the peace.

Arrested late yesterday afternoon was Leon Brewster, 42, no permanent address. He was charged with theft, item valued at more than $20, and with disturbing the peace. He is being held on a $350 bond.

Also charged with theft and placed on $350 bond was George Dyer, 39, of 617 Wood St. He was arrested at 9 p.m.

Snake Handler Bitten By Cobra

MIAMI (UPI)— Bill Haast, director of the Miami Serpentarium, was bitten by a poisonous snake for the 64th time Saturday.

Haast, 49, was struck on the right thumb by a four-foot Indian Cobra from which he was attempting to extract venom.

The veteran snake handler, who has built up considerable immunity to poisonous bites over the years, said he took some anti-venom injections, but didn't plan to enter the hospital.

"My thoart's a little hoarse," he said, "and my hand is swollen to the wrist. But those are the only effects."

He said it was the 30th time a cobra has bitten him. He was last bitten about three months ago, by a rattlesnake, and was hospitalized for several days that time.

Editor Horace Greeley, nominally a Republican, was the Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1872. He lost to Ulysses S. Grant.

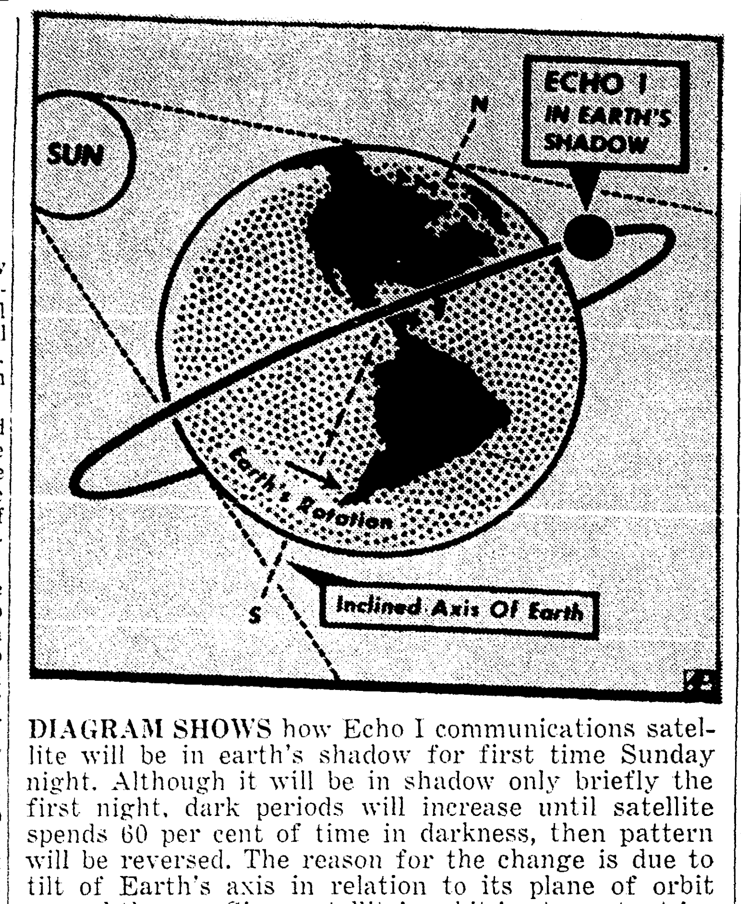

DIAGRAM SHOWS how Echo I communications satellite will be in earth's shadow for first time Sunday night. Although it will be in shadow only briefly the first night, dark periods will increase until satellite spends 60 per cent of time in darkness, then pattern will be reversed. The reason for the change is due to tilt of Earth's axis in relation to its plane of orbit around the sun. Since satellite's orbit is at constant incline in relation to Earth's axis it shifts in and out of full sunlight as Earth moves around sun. (AP Wirephoto)

FULFILLS STRANGE VOW

Dancer Drives Car Into Stone Bridge

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES

ATLANTA (UPI) — Striptease dancer Chilli Evans slammed her new car into a stone bridge abutment on an Atlanta expressway early Saturday and fulfilled a strange and lonely suicide vow made in the dim lights backstage.

Two other exotic dancers and a burlesque band trumpet player tried to prevent the attractive redhaired performer from carrying out her vow. But no one in the audience at her last show knew of the dancer's despair. Her routine was daring and gay.

Before the last show at the Atlanta's Harem Club, Chilli sobbed in her dressing room and told another stripper, Peggy Jones, that "I have nothing to live for.

"I know a beautiful brick wall that I'm going to drive my car into at 90 miles an hour — 90 miles. Hell, I'm going to cram into that wall at 120."

Police estimated she was driving at least 100 m.p.h. when her car hit the abutment.

Miss Evans, 30, was the mother of four. Her real name was Marguerite Suzanne Galento, the estranged wife of a Memphis, Tenn., wrestler.

She had just bought a new home in Forest Park, an Atlanta suburb, and last week was as gay and happy buying furniture and making plans for the house and sending the children to school as she was in her exotic routines behind the footlights on the uptown show club.

"She was always dramatic, and often despondent," Peggy Jones said. "She would look in the mirror and say 'You're no good. You're no good.' She was moody, but not hard to get along with. She had a boyfriend and had even talked about marrying him."

The house buying was an interlude, her friends said. Friday night, she telephoned someone and told them "she was leaving. This was it, and she mentioned Highway 41," stripper Myra Lane, who overheard the conversation, said.

"She kept saying she couldn't make the next show—but she did, and put it on beautifully. She was always saying she couldn't go on, but she would, and she was a good dancer and usually received or shared top billing." Her last routine was an oriental-tye dance.

After the last show Chilli broke down. Myra, Peggy and trumpet player took her to a restaurant around the corner, and she drank four cups of coffee. "We didn't want to leave her or let her get in that car alone. Don (the trumpet player) asked her to take him home, and we followed them downtown," Peggy said.

"She let Don out, and he talked to her for a long time. We stayed behind but kept her in sight. Then she tore out the expressway. We ran one red light trying to keep up, but we lost her. She was just around the bend. She went into that wall without a waver."

"Before she left the restaurant, I hugged her and talked to her but she was crying and had been crying for hours...it was after 2 a.m. I talked about her fine, beautiful children, and she said they'd be better off without her. I told her 'You don't mean it. I don't believe it."

The dancer's body was wedged in the crushed wreckage of the car and she died in route to a hospital.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

SENATOR FROM ARIZONA

Recently a thoughtful reader addressed the following letter to this column:

"I think your column this morning is a false fingerpost directing us toward national, if not global, obliteration. I do not question your good faith when you write, 'I am not suggesting preventive war or war of any kind involving shooting or bombing,' but none the less, that is exactly what your article, taken as a whole, does suggest — not advocates, but suggests.

"Is it not a fact that your proposals for the conduct of the cold war actually call for the following ultimatum from our government to the world's two most populous nations?: 'Quit being communist, get "democratic" — or fight.'

"Could there be any course more suicidal thus to force into each other's arms those two powerful potential foes instead of cannily seeking to promote the mutual jealousy and mistrust now evident between them?"

I appreciate the concern expressed by this writer. Apparently, the column which aroused this response failed to clearly express my intended meaning.

Since the end of World War II we have, through our various programs of foreign aid, attempted to inspire many countries to remake their political structure in the pattern of the United States of America. It is obvious from one glance at the world situation today that our efforts have been a failure.

I did not and do not advocate preventive war. My position on foreign policy does not suggest such action. I do not propose that we issue an ultimatum to any other nation: "Quit being communist, get democratic or fight!"

What I am advocating is this: we should make it clear that we have no intention of becoming communist, or surrendering the individual freedoms purchased for us by the devotion and blood of our forefathers.

It may be, as the writer suggests, there is some jealousy and mutual distrust between Russia and Red China. But the point of difference is not over their objective, which is to communize the world, it is rather over the means they are now employing to achieve that objective. The Red Chinese apparently would prefer to use force immediately. The Red Russians apparently prefer the less costly procedure of subversion and political action — counting on our apathy to permit them a victory.

What I am suggesting, sir, is that we put our own military establishment in order and then proclaim to the world, as we have done repeatedly, that we have no intention of using our military power to interfere in the internal affairs of Red Russia or Red China. They can remain communist if they choose but we will not permit them to force communism on us or on any of our friends and allies who now being free desire to remain free.

The avowed purpose of communism is to conquer the world. Mr. K. boasted: "We will bury you."

Now consider this: if the communists are determined to conquer the world and willing to fight to achieve their objective, then how do we increase the possibility of war by declaring our intention to resist and implementing our capacity to resist?

The only alternative is to surrender — if not formally, then inferentially by admitting that we will not fight to defend our freedom — to keep Khrushchev from "burying" us.

It seems to me the safest course, the surest way to avoid war, is to make this nation militarily superior to any aggressor or combination of aggressors and then to announce to the world our determined intention to resist aggression.

It is my opinion that only by so doing can we prevent: a war of conquets being waged against us; or, being compelled by our fear of war to make piecemeal surrender and eventually accept the dictates of the Russian masters. How do you stand, sir?

Launching Slated For Nuclear Ship

CAMDEN, N.J. (UPI)—Within a few months the N. S. Savannah will become the first nuclear powered merchant ship to set sail anywhere in the world.

The $42.5 million vessel is in the final stages of construction at the New York Shipbuilding Corp. Yards in Camden. Her atom fuel is scheduled to be installed soon, and she will begin sea trials before the end of the year.

The keel for the world's first non-military, atom-powered ship was laid May 22, 1958, and the ship was launched into the Delaware River a little more than a year ago, July 21, 1959. Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower christened the long white hull.

The N. S. Savannah (N. S. for nuclear ship) is named for another ship of history — the Savannah which, on May 22, 1819, became the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. President Eisenhower suggested that the atom ship be named after the old steamer.

On April 25, 1955, President Eisenhower announced plans for the atomic powered vessel which would be able to travel for three-and-half years without refueling, and which would show the world the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Eisenhower originally suggested that a Nautilus-type engine be installed in the proposed merchant ship, but Congress decided the Savannah should be a new ship of experimental design from bow to stern. The President gave final approval Oct. 15, 1956.

Originally construction was expected to take about three years, but delays have slowed progress. Even now, no one will say definitely when the ship will sail. Delays have been caused by various factors, such as an overabundance of visitors, an overloaded work schedule, and changes in design during construction.

The Savannah is 595 feet long and 78 feet wide.

There is no secrecy about the ship. A guard is stationed near the reactor's containment vessel, but his only mission is to prevent visitors from taking cameras inside where the flash-bulbs would bother the workmen. The guard signs visitors in and out and checks their clothing. The first precaution is so that no one is left in the maze of the reactor, and the second so that dirt is not carried inside.

No one will be allowed to enter the containment vessel once the reactor is operating because of the radiation danger.

If something does break down in the reactor, a duplicate piece of equipment will automatically take over. Engineers watching an electronic console in another part of the ship will be able to keep tabs on everything that goes on in the reactor. With their electronic equipment they will be able to "see" more than could a man right inside the reactor.

The Savannah has been designed to survive collision with all but the very largest of ships, without damage to the reactor. The containment vessel is protected by collision bulkheads and collision mats, the latter being made of alternating layers of one-inch steel plate and three-inch redwood. The mats are 4 inches thick.

If the ship is sunk, the reactor container will be automatically flooded and sealed to prevent contamination of surrounding waters. The reactor has been designed so that it will automatically cease operation if something extraordinary happens.

Radioactive wastes will be kept in special tanks on board until international regulations on dumping waste at sea have been established. A large barge will service the reactor and take on radioactive waste whenever the Savannah enters its home port.

The captain of the Savannah will be G. R. DeGroote, 55, of Huntington, Long Island, who has had an intimate knowledge of the sea for 40 years. His crew will be one of the best ever to go to sea. Deck officers and engineers have taken 15-month courses at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va., located near the Atomic Energy Division of Babcock and Wilson Co., manufacturer of the atomic power plant.

Although the cost of the Savannah is high, and it is very doubtful that she will ever make money for her owners (presently the United States government), the technical data derived from her will lead to lower cost for similar ships in the future.

When all has been learned that can be learned from the Savannah, she will be placed in commercial service. Until then, she will be sailing the seas both as a floating laboratory and as a powerful propaganda weapon.

Prince Reports Troops Moving On Laos City

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) - Prince Souvanna Phouma reported Saturday counterrevolutionary troops were moving toward Vientiane. Souvanna Phouma is the premier appointed by neutralist rebels who seized power here two weeks ago.

"The first contact will mean bloodshed," said Souvanna Phouma.

He did not say whether the anti-coup forces were coming from north or south.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, ousted defense minister, commands the counterrevolutionary soldiers. He set up headquarters recently at Sawannakhet, 185 miles south of Vientiane. Other forces of his are in Luang Prabang, site of the royal residence, 120 miles north of Vientiane.

Both Savannakhet and Luang Prabang are on the Mekong River which forms the boundary with Thailand to the west and south.

Military authorities note that Phoumi's forces in Luang Prabang are well equipped with boats. Observers consider a ground advance almost impossible because the roads to Vientiane are poor and monsoon rains have washed out many sections.

The keel for the world's first non-military, atom-powered ship was laid May 22, 1958, and the ship was launched into the Delaware River a little more than a year ago, July 21, 1959. Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower christened the long white hull.

The N. S. Savannah (N. S. for nuclear ship) is named for another ship of history — the Savannah which, on May 22, 1819, became the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. President Eisenhower suggested that the atom ship be named after the old steamer.

On April 25, 1955, President Eisenhower announced plans for the atomic powered vessel which would be able to travel for three-and-half years without refueling, and which would show the world the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Eisenhower originally suggested that a Nautilus-type engine be installed in the proposed merchant ship, but Congress decided the Savannah should be a new ship of experimental design from bow to stern. The President gave final approval Oct. 15, 1956.

Originally construction was expected to take about three years, but delays have slowed progress. Even now, no one will say definitely when the ship will sail. Delays have been caused by various factors, such as an overabundance of visitors, an overloaded work schedule, and changes in design during construction.

The Savannah is 595 feet long and 78 feet wide.

There is no secrecy about the ship. A guard is stationed near the reactor's containment vessel, but his only mission is to prevent visitors from taking cameras inside where the flash-bulbs would bother the workmen. The guard signs visitors in and out and checks their clothing. The first precaution is so that no one is left in the maze of the reactor, and the second so that dirt is not carried inside.

No one will be allowed to enter the containment vessel once the reactor is operating because of the radiation danger.

If something does break down in the reactor, a duplicate piece of equipment will automatically take over. Engineers watching an electronic console in another part of the ship will be able to keep tabs on everything that goes on in the reactor. With their electronic equipment they will be able to "see" more than could a man right inside the reactor.

The Savannah has been designed to survive collision with all but the very largest of ships, without damage to the reactor. The containment vessel is protected by collision bulkheads and collision mats, the latter being made of alternating layers of one-inch steel plate and three-inch redwood. The mats are 4 inches thick.

If the ship is sunk, the reactor container will be automatically flooded and sealed to prevent contamination of surrounding waters. The reactor has been designed so that it will automatically cease operation if something extraordinary happens.

Radioactive wastes will be kept in special tanks on board until international regulations on dumping waste at sea have been established. A large barge will service the reactor and take on radioactive waste whenever the Savannah enters its home port.

The captain of the Savannah will be G. R. DeGroote, 55, of Huntington, Long Island, who has had an intimate knowledge of the sea for 40 years. His crew will be one of the best ever to go to sea. Deck officers and engineers have taken 15-month courses at Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va., located near the Atomic Energy Division of Babcock and Wilson Co., manufacturer of the atomic power plant.

Although the cost of the Savannah is high, and it is very doubtful that she will ever make money for her owners (presently the United States government), the technical data derived from her will lead to lower cost for similar ships in the future.

When all has been learned that can be learned from the Savannah, she will be placed in commercial service. Until then, she will be sailing the seas both as a floating laboratory and as a powerful propaganda weapon.

Prince Reports Troops Moving On Laos City

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) - Prince Souvanna Phouma reported Saturday counterrevolutionary troops were moving toward Vientiane. Souvanna Phouma is the premier appointed by neutralist rebels who seized power here two weeks ago.

"The first contact will mean bloodshed," said Souvanna Phouma.

He did not say whether the anti-coup forces were coming from north or south.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, ousted defense minister, commands the counterrevolutionary soldiers. He set up headquarters recently at Sawannakhet, 185 miles south of Vientiane. Other forces of his are in Luang Prabang, site of the royal residence, 120 miles north of Vientiane.

Both Savannakhet and Luang Prabang are on the Mekong River which forms the boundary with Thailand to the west and south.

Military authorities note that Phoumi's forces in Luang Prabang are well equipped with boats. Observers consider a ground advance almost impossible because the roads to Vientiane are poor and monsoon rains have washed out many sections.

POE'S CLASSIC

'House Of Usher' Is Masterpiece

Edgar Allan Poe's "House of Usher" was considered by the great author his finest story. American International has brought it to the screen with Vincent Price starred as Roderick Usher, Mark Damon as Philip, Myrna Fahey as Madeline Usher, and Harry Ellerbe as Bristol.

Producer - director Roger Corman has managed to squeeze out the last drop of suspense and terror from the famous Poe classic and the result is a motion picture masterpiece of the macabre. All the chills, thrills, lurking danger fear of the unknown conjured up by Poe are here and they build scene by scene to a mighty climax.

MACABRE

Edgar Allan Poe was the master of the macabre in literature and actually started that type of writing. He introduced analytic investigation into literature and today's crop of detective and crime detection writers owe a real debt of gratitude to the author who achieved no degree of success or recognition during his lifetime.

In fact, his genius received its first acclaim in France in 1858 when poet Charles Beaudelaire—himself a writer of the bizarre—"discovered" Poe and brought his works to the attention of French and other European writers. Eventually his fame trickled back to this country where he was born and where he eked out a bare living as a journalist when he was not writing his tales of death and desperation.

No one has ever outdone Poe in this line of writing and his stories remain among the world's best thrillers today. "House of Usher" is a thriller in the most chilling sense.

SUAVE

Vincent Price, whose suave characterizations of maniacal killers and whose distinctive good looks give him an air of authority in whatever role, is perfectly cast as Roderick, last of the ill-fated Usher line. Myrna Fahey as his sister, Mark Damon as her fiance, and Harry Ellerbe as the Usher family butler are all excellent.

"House of Usher" is in CinemasScope and color. The exciting musical score was written by Les Baxter, who a few years ago made "mood" music popular. The settings are elegant and the entire mood of the film is brooding, eerie, intense. Not the least of its qualities is that it brings together for the first time — on film — Vincent Price, master of the macabre in motion pictures and Edgar Allan Poe, master of the same sinister vein in literature.

SAYS PRODUCER

Trends Influence Hollywood Films

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As most everyone knows, movies are getting sexier than ever. Producer Albert Zugsmith tells why:

Zugsmith has made his share of sex pictures—"Written on the Wind," "Sex Kittens Go to College," "College Confidential," etc.

"You know why?" he asks. "The first one made money. I wanted to change pace, but every time I'd suggest a property like 'Gulliver's Travels,' the front office would say: "Make a picture like your last one."

Zugsmith finally found a way to get around the front office.

"I have a young son who reads the comic strip 'Dondi,' and he asked me why I didn't make a movie about it.

" 'Dondi' is a little boy, and a movie about him is about as sexless a story as there is. But I think it's the kind of picture that families want to see."

Zugsmith differs from most Hollywood producers. He was a millionaire before he ever hit this town. He began as a police reporter on the Atlantic City (N.J.) World and rose to publisher. Later he made a fortune buying and selling newspapers, radio stations and TV stations.

"I got tired of arguing with front offices of studios in this town, so I decided to buy stock in Allied Artists."

At the moment he is the largest single stockholder of the studio.

"I am, in effect, my own front office," he says. "That's why I'm making 'Dondi.' "

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A major studio invited high fashion model Isabella Albonico from New York for tests and auditions for a movie contract. Miss Albonico, a native of Florence, Italy, once was Dior's top model in Paris.

OPENING AT PARAMOUNT today is "The House of Usher", starring Madeline Usher, played by Myrna Fahey, and her brother, Roderick, protrayed by Vincent Price. The film is in color and CinemaScope.

Ella has fallen in love, sight unseen, with the party answering to PL 0-4433, the telephone number of playboy playwright Jeff Moss (Dean Martin). Otto Prantz (Eddie Foy, Jr.), a "bookie" who uses Susanswerphone as a cover - up; (c) she encounters romantic ompetition from the voluptuous Olga (Valerie Allen), Jeff's race - track - minded girl friend. THIS SQUIRREL was caught in the act of invading a supply of bird feed in an ash tree in the back yard of the Harold Scallon residence, 305 Rochelle. Heroic Deeds In Early Cuba Recalled

Editor's Note — Cuban-American relations traditionally are marked by heroic deeds and words — by Teddy's Rough Riders, "Remember the Maine", "A message to Garcia"—but now these relations have soured in the Castro era and the common Cuban cry is "Cuba si, Yankees no." Here is a review of these times from '98 until now.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On Feb.15, 1898, the U.S. battleship Maine was blown up in Havana's harbor while on a goodwill visit. Killed in the blast—still a mystery—were 266 American seamen.

"Remember the Maine" became a battle cry that pointed up public indignation in the United States over reported atrocities by the Spaniards against the Cubans.

It helped touch off the Spanish-American War that spelled emergence of the United States as a world power — the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and Guam were dividends in the war that crushed the Spaniards and officially came to an end in the Treaty of Paris Dec.10, 1898.

QUICK

On Aug. 10, 1960, what was described as a joyous crowd of thousands of Cubans dumped 26 coffins into Havana Bay.

They were launched in the direction of the United States. Demonstrators who had danced to the music of street bands all day said they symbolized the burial of 26 American-owned companies nationalized by Prime Minister Fidel Castro's revolutionary government.

They marked at least the temporary end of an era.

White steps lead up to 75-foot high marble shafts that support a bronze American eagle with spreading wings.

STEPPED UP

Fidel Castro has stepped up his campaign to clip those wings and depreciate the role Uncle Sam played in breaking Spain's hold on Cuba, 90-odd miles from the U.S. mainland. But it will be difficult for him to deny the benefits that resulted from the action.

Yellow fever was eradicated by the United States (remember Dr. Walter Reed and the American volunteers who died proving that one mosquito type caused yellow jack? Their sacrifice has wiped out yellow fever as a major peril.)

Highways were built under the American military occupation from the end of the war until 1902. Government administration and education were reformed under what was a prototype program for the kind of aid given underdeveloped countries today by the United States and the United Nations. Much of this work was directed by Gen. Leonard Wood, as military governor, with a few American aides but with most posts filled by Cubans, Wood and Theodore (Teddy) Roosevelt had organized the Rough Riders, volunteers who stormed San Juan Hill and demoralized the Spanish army.

And there are monuments tangible and intangible.

There is a historical monument to the memory of Lt. Col. Teddy Roosevelt's drive up San Juan Hill with the Rough Riders — the 1st Volunteer Cavalry—along with the volunteer 2nd Massachusetts and the 71st New York, and the Negro regulars in the dismounted 10th Cavalry.

There's literary history in Hobson's choice: Navy builder Richmond P. Hobson's decision on sinking the collier Merrimac in Santiago Harbor in an attempt—unsuccessful—to block the Spanish fleet.

MONUMENT

There is a monument to bravery in the exploit of Andrew S. Rowan, the American soldier who in 1898 carried the message to Cuban Gen. Calixto Garcia Iniquez advising him that the United States would help him. Rowan's adventure in finding the guerrilla leader in the wilds of Cuba was publicized by Elbert Hubbard in his inspirational essay "A Message to Garcia."

There are other monuments to that era. Whether they will stand can be answered by Castro.

Independence for Cuba under the Treaty of Paris was accompanied by a U.S. stipulation that Cuba must enter into no treaty relations with a foreign power that might endanger its independence.

The United States kept a paternal hand on Cuba's affairs with the right to intervene if the infant republic's welfare was threatened. Under that policy, when revolution threatened to tear the country apart in 1906, the United States resumed control from September 1906 until January 1909.

REBUFFED

But the United States sedulously rebuffed some demands for a complete takeover and that is another monument to U.S. relations with the island republic.

There was the financial monument that developed in 62 years.

U.S. investments in the island in 1901 were 80 million dollars.

Last week the Castro government intervened — polite way of saying took over—the 75-million-dollar Moa Bay Mining Co. It has taken over American-owned hotels valued in the millions.

The takeover process has its eye on Nicaro Nickel Processing Corp. — in the 100-million-dollar class—as well as three American banks.

ANOTHER

There was another economic monument: what amounted to a U.S. subsidy of Cuba's big cash crop, sugar, bought on an expanded quota at a price above the world quotations. It provided Cuban growers about 150 million dollars a year. That has terminated.

Another monument to U.S.-Cuban relations has fallen. The island the size of Pennsylvania, with a population less than the City of New York, had taken to American baseball.

The Havana team's place in the International League has been a Castro casualty. Tourism and the millions of dollars it represented is shrinking. Presumably American automobiles and other consumer products will not be displaced by Soviet products, however.

There remains one other big monument: the 28,000 acres of land and harbor that make up the deepwater U.S. naval base on Guantanamo Bay on the southeastern end of the island.

It was established in 1903 by mutual agreement. In 1934 a treaty made the agreement perpetual, cancellable only by mutual agreement or abandonment by the United States.

There are straws in the winds that blow around that base: Fidel Castro has denounced U.S. military aid pacts; President Osvaldo Dorticos has implied strongly that Cuba may ask surrender of the base: the Castro press has been making noises about the future of the base.

QUOTED

Fidel Castro has been quoted as saying there would be no action about it unless it was used against Cuba. But Dorticos has said the annual rental check of about $3,300 paid in June will be returned.

A six-foot steel fence separates the 100-million-dollar area and its population of about 10,000 from Castro's Cuba.

The inhabitants include about 3,000 Cuban employes who earn upwards of five million dollars in wages from the U.S. government and another two million from private employers. Cuban merchants sell about two million in local supplies to it.

The personnel inside have 20 baseball fields, 5 swimming pools, 3 beaches, a 27-hole golf course and 6 outdoor movies to keep them entertained.

Early this year there were 3,000 sailors, 3,000 dependents including 1,200 children and 650 American civilians on the base. There are barracks for three platoons of Marines, a 100-bed Navy hospital and dental clinic.

The base has been vulnerable: up until recently Cuba controlled its water and electric supply. Now emergency facilities have been installed.

Noise, Dirt, Splendor

EDITOR'S NOTE—The noise of traffic and jazz bands compete in the perpetual circus of the exotic street; yet around the corner the only sound is tinkling chimes in a Bhuddist shrine. This is Tokyo, city of contrasts. It's the biggest in the world—and the best—says AP staffer Nate Polowetzky in the sixth of a series on the world's great cities.

By NATE POLOWETZKY

TOKYO (AP) — East is east and west is west and this town tops 'em all.

Take a look out of the window. The noisiest, dirtiest, most exhilarating city in the world. Like riding on a roller coaster. Like sitting on the aisle, three rows back at the biggest and best show in the world. All for free.

Nine million people out there, fighting, laughing, crying, working, dreaming and loving, never still for a moment. Violence and beauty—a scream in the night or a lute song in spring.

TIME STOPS

The biggest city in the world and one of the most modern. Yet step 50 feet off the main drag and you're back in the 17th century and time has stopped completely.

Down in the Shimbashi area the geisha girls, all powdered and wigged, still use the ricksha to get to their appointments. If you look very carefully through the hodge podge of shops and stalls in the back alleys you can see the beautiful little shrines to ancient spirits which protected the section centuries ago.

Watch that kid on the bike, balancing a stack of lacquer noodle trays five feet high, dodging his way through that awful mess of traffic. Better than a circus.

That man there, arrogant as a Spanish dancer, daring the autos to hit him. Think he's going to let a car ruffle his dignity? The crowds of farm families in town on a short visit wandering down theater row in Asakusa, goggling at the big posters—Wild Bill Hickok and a samurai warrior competing for their yen.

TEMPLE

Take a little walk with me to Nakamise and follow the street into the temple of the Goddess of Mercy, with the incense smoke curling around your head and the pilgrims pulling the prayer rope and throwing their offerings into the altar box.

Noise and color, that's Tokyo, and you have to be deaf or blind—or dead—not to get a kick out of it. London's great and I'm not going to knock Paris, but we have things here the others don't even dream about.

Fireworks on the Sumida river, when they bombard the heavens with lights and color and dare the stars to compete: or the summer festivals when the chanting celebrants—all skinny legs and knobby knees and muscular calves—lurching down the street with golden shrines on their shoulders.

When its night, the cops direct traffic with huge, lighted paper lanterns—fireflies showing leviathan home.

And the thing a fellow remembers most after the long day:

ANCIENT TREE

A beautiful Japanese garden with a twisted pine tree 300 years old hidden behind a row of shabby shots.

Or a tiny, new shrine, to a red-bibbed Jizo, god of travelers, next to a taxi garage in a factory district; or a geisha dancing the mambo in a plush night club, while the girl who sings with the band, hair half-bleached red in defiance of nature, mournfully tells of the "Liver of Rove."

For the kind of beauty that lasts, I'll take the curve of the Imperial Palace moat, covered with snow; the majesty of Meiji shrine on a warm April day.

But seeing is only part of living, fellow. You have to keep your ears open, too—and then you can hear the heart of the city.

Sounds, sounds, sounds everywhere, a great orchestra, now loud, now soft, following some ancient and invisible score.

The mournful call of a noodle vendor's flute in a deserted office district at midnight when the rest of the world has fallen asleep. The cheerful slap-slap of wooden shoes outside your bedroom window. The musical chirp of the cricket in your kid's bamboo cricket cage on a summer night.

SHIVERS

The temple gong sounding faintly over the roar of traffic. Maybe I'm just a sentimental slob, but I get the shivers every time.

Where do you live back home? Main Street. Nice, too. But I live in a section of Tokyo which means "In the Middle of the Black Eye," and I have friends who live in "Bitter Valley," or on "Persimmon Tree Hill," or in "Six Trees."

We have poetry all the time.

Brother, you can have New York, everyone fighting for a buck and snarling. Take the service, here, for instance. The most gracious and polite in the world. None of this business of the outstretched palm.

There are straws in the winds that blow around that base: Fidel Castro has denounced U.S. military aid pacts; President Osvaldo Dorticos has implied strongly that Cuba may ask surrender of the base; the Castro press has been making noises about the future of the base.

QUOTED

Fidel Castro has been quoted as saying there would be no action about it unless it was used against Cuba. But Dorticos has said the annual rental check of about $3,300 paid in June will be returned.

A six-foot steel fence separates the 100-million-dollar area and its population of about 10,000 from Castro's Cuba.

The inhabitants include about 3,000 Cuban employees who earn upwards of five million dollars in wages from the U.S. government and another two million from private employers. Cuban merchants sell about two million in local supplies to it.

The personnel inside have 20 baseball fields, 5 swimming pools, 3 beaches, a 27-hole golf course and 6 outdoor movies to keep them entertained.

Early this year there were 3,000 sailors, 3,000 dependents including 1,200 children and 650 American civilians on the base. There are barracks for three platoons of Marines, a 100-bed Navy hospital and dental clinic.

The base has been vulnerable: up until recently Cuba controlled its water and electric supply. Now emergency facilities have been installed.

Noise, Dirt, Splendor

EDITOR'S NOTE—The noise of traffic and jazz bands compete in the perpetual circus of the exotic street; yet around the corner the only sound is tinkling chimes in a Bhuddist shrine. This is Tokyo, city of contrasts. It's the biggest in the world—and the best—says AP staffer Nate Polowetzky in the sixth of a series on the world's great cities.

By NATE POLOWETZKY

TOKYO (AP) — East is east and west is west and this town tops 'em all.

Take a look out of the window. The noisiest, dirtiest, most exhilarating city in the world. Like riding on a roller coaster. Like sitting on the aisle, three rows back at the biggest and best show in the world. All for free.

Nine million people out there, fighting, laughing, crying, working, dreaming and loving, never still for a moment. Violence and beauty—a scream in the night or a lute song in spring.

TIME STOPS

The biggest city in the world and one of the most modern. Yet step 50 feet off the main drag and you're back in the 17th century and time has stopped completely.

Down in the Shimbashi area the geisha girls, all powdered and wigged, still use the ricksha to get to their appointments. If you look very carefully through the hodge podge of shops and stalls in the back alleys you can see the beautiful little shrines to ancient spirits which protected the section centuries ago.

Watch that kid on the bike, balancing a stack of lacquer noodle trays five feet high, dodging his way through that awful mess of traffic. Better than a circus.

That man there, arrogant as a Spanish dancer, daring the autos to hit him. Think he's going to let a car ruffle his dignity? The crowds of farm families in town on a short visit wandering down theater row in Asakusa, goggling at the big posters—Wild Bill Hickok and a samurai warrior competing for their yen.

TEMPLE

Take a little walk with me to Nakamise and follow the street into the temple of the Goddess of Mercy, with the incense smoke curling around your head and the pilgrims pulling the prayer rope and throwing their offerings into the altar box.

Noise and color, that's Tokyo, and you have to be deaf or blind—or dead—not to get a kick out of it. London's great and I'm not going to knock Paris, but we have things here the others don't even dream about.

Fireworks on the Sumida river, when they bombard the heavens with lights and color and dare the stars to compete: or the summer festivals when the chanting celebrants—all skinny legs and knobby knees and muscular calves—lurching down the street with golden shrines on their shoulders.

When its night, the cops direct traffic with huge, lighted paper lanterns—fireflies showing leviathan home.

And the thing a fellow remembers most after the long day:

ANCIENT TREE

A beautiful Japanese garden with a twisted pine tree 300 years old hidden behind a row of shabby shots.

Or a tiny, new shrine, to a red-bibbed Jizo, god of travelers, next to a taxi garage in a factory district; or a geisha dancing the mambo in a plush night club, while the girl who sings with the band, hair half-bleached red in defiance of nature, mournfully tells of the "Liver of Rove."

For the kind of beauty that lasts, I'll take the curve of the Imperial Palace moat, covered with snow; the majesty of Meiji shrine on a warm April day.

But seeing is only part of living, fellow. You have to keep your ears open, too—and then you can hear the heart of the city.

Sounds, sounds, sounds everywhere, a great orchestra, now loud, now soft, following some ancient and invisible score.

The mournful call of a noodle vendor's flute in a deserted office district at midnight when the rest of the world has fallen asleep. The cheerful slap-slap of wooden shoes outside your bedroom window. The musical chirp of the cricket in your kid's bamboo cricket cage on a summer night.

SHIVERS

The temple gong sounding faintly over the roar of traffic. Maybe I'm just a sentimental slob, but I get the shivers every time.

Where do you live back home? Main Street. Nice, too. But I live in a section of Tokyo which means "In the Middle of the Black Eye," and I have friends who live in "Bitter Valley," or on "Persimmon Tree Hill," or in "Six Trees."

We have poetry all the time.

Brother, you can have New York, everyone fighting for a buck and snarling. Take the service, here, for instance. The most gracious and polite in the world. None of this business of the outstretched palm.

Is Corruption The Idea?

Governor Ross Barnett of Mississippi says that if unpledged electors in the Southern states could create an Electoral College deadlock in the presidential election, "Then we may be able to drive some hard bargains." As points of "hard bargains" he listed:

1.—Getting either Nixon or Kennedy to appoint a Southern U.S. Attorney General, meaning one who would hold back on prosecution of civil rights cases in the South.

2.—Appointment of a Southerner to the Supreme Court.

3.—Restoration of the Democratic Party Convention rule, abolished in 1936, whereby a two-thirds maority was necessary to nominate the Democratic presidential candidate. This, in effect, gave the South virtually a veto power over the Party's nominations.

Let's take a look at the "hard bargain" points:

A Southern Attorney-General: No true Southern segregationist appointed Attorney-General could possibly gain confirmation in a Senate now 5 to 1 for strong civil rights legislation. Even a Southern "moderate" or "liberal" in the political sense of the words these days probably could not get by.

But the real point is that to affect Southern civil rights cases, this "bargain" could be consumated only under this condition:—

That Nixon or Kennedy corruptly, dishonestly and crookedly would enter into a conspiracy to defile the presidency by naming an Attorney-General who would be equally corrupt in defiling his own office by non-enforcement of federal laws he is sworn to uphold.

And we do not mean Supreme Court "law of the land" but federal civil rights statutes enacted by a Democratic Congress, signed by a Republican President, and upheld thus far in all major tests by the federal judiciary. We don't like them, but as of now they are law.

Such a "bargain" would mean agreement for mass disregard of law enforcement — by the Attorney-General and sanctioned by a President who appointed the Attorney-General for the specific purpose of not enforcing law he has taken an oath to enforce.

That would be dishonest, corrupt, crooked.

For the President of the United States it would be a violation of his oath to "protect" his office — which simply means to keep it clean and honest.

For the Attorney-General it would be the same.

For each it could be malfeasance or non-feasance in office.

We don't think Mr. Nixon is corrupt, dishonest, crooked.

We don't think Mr. Kennedy is corrupt, dishonest, crooked.

We don't think the people of the South want the choice of Nixon or Kennedy even to be approached on any basis of whether one or the other could be "bargained" into dishonesty and corruption.

We are certain that such thoughts never entered Governor Barnett's mind. He was in a political press conference in which he was plugging for propaganda on his side of a hot issue about to come before his state's Democratic convention. We are sure that if he thinks it out, he will see that the whole idea is repugnant to decency. But, once again, we have a startling example of how vital it is to think out all these things.

And if there are those who do think corruption and dishonesty could be winked at, let them remember that a man who makes a crooked bargain is certainly crooked enough to break it.

There is another angle:

The Party and Vetoes: Some have contended that a presidential prospect, in bargaining, might agree to veto some types of civil rights legislation. Aside from the angle of corruption that also could enter here, it is obvious that the pro-civil rights forces in the House and the Senate easily could and would override any such presidential action.

Further, the man who becomes President must face re-election in four years. All the House members must face re-election twice in that period. Two-thirds of the Senate must face re-election. Where would a President, or his Party, be at election time if he or his Attorney-General had sought to block the civil rights courses to which they were pledged and which major ties of both parties in Congress have done everything possible to institute up to now?

Let's use a little common sense in these things — and it takes little to see that even if a bargaining situation could be created there is nothing to bargain about that a President could grant.

A Southern Supreme Court Justice: We have two now, if Texas is "South". Clark of Texas, Black of Alabama. What good are they? How could any appointee from the South other than their type — on segregation — get Senate confirmation? If both Black and Clark voted with the South and we had a third to do so, what good would it do? A 6 to 3 integration decision is just as binding as 9 to 0.

The Two-Thirds Rule: That's a matter only for the Democratic Party and its national convention. The South supplied some of the votes to surrender it in 1936 and can never get it back.

In the end all unpledged electors talk comes back to the same thing:

Nixon or Kennedy will be President.

You can make your own decision between the two or let someone else make it for you.

There is no bargain that could help the South in the segregation field that a President could keep if he made it.

If the election could be thrown into the House, Kennedy would be virtually a certain winner even if Nixon was high in the popular vote and had an electoral plurality.

So, the unpledged elector plan is exactly what South Carolina's Democratic convention dubbed it when shouting it down without even a roll call: A scheme that can thwart rather than assert the will of the people and that gives Kennedy two shots at the election — instead of one in a clearcut two-man contest.

At the press conference where he presented his "hard bargain" points Governor Barnett also repeated his frequently - made statement:

"A vote for either Nixon or Kennedy is a vote to integrate all Southern schools by 1963."

That is neither fully correct nor germaine to any issue of unpledged electors. The Democratic platform specifically sets 1963 as a target date for integration of all shools now segregated. The Republican platform specifically spurns any target date. Both parties and both candidates want speed, but no President can, by himself, control the throttle.

Nearly half of the nation's department stores have started charging for deliveries, and three-quarters charge for pickups for something that is returned.

There are now some 20,000 Catholic priests in the United States, according to Catholic Digest. Additionally, 3,500 American priests are serving as missionaries in foreign lands.

The two points in the United States most remote from each other are Attu, Alaska, and Key Largo, Fla. They are 5,509 miles apart.

Lines Of Least Resistance

In Final Analysis, Both Nixon And Kennedy Will Rely On Own Judgment Instead Of On Braintrusters

Nixon vs. Kennedy has not yet developed into a debate on issues. Kennedy has a brain trust of Harvard professors; Nixon has a brain trust of Harvard professors and some others. This is mostly window dressing. Both candidates have been in the national Legislature for 14 years. They know what they believe and what they are prepared to say are not quite the same thing. As men of great experience in politics, they will not and cannot depend on academic and business advisers to counsel them. Ultimately, they will follow those lines of least opposition which might assure election.

Nor are the academic and business advisers of either candidate particularly impressive from a vote - gathering standpoint. And elections have to do with votes; that is why they are held. Therefore, we can regard the announcement of these lists of great minds as a one-day news story and forget about them forever more.

Thus far, neither candidate has startled the nation with ideas and purposes. John Kennedy's speech at Franklin D. Roosevelt's grave was a dramatic performance of no particular vote-getting significance. The appeal to the old voters was mindful of the long-forgotten Dr. Townsend. Granted that the problem of the aged is constantly with us, the matter is not as acute, for instance, as the deterioration of the dollar. And about that neither of the candidates speaks a word.

Richard Nixon needs to take the initiative in dealing with major problems or he has to run in defense of the Eisenhower administration. He needs to prove to the country that he has the stature of a president as well as that of a vice president. In the campaign he can prove it only by words. Thus far, the Republicans have put out two propagandistic ideas: One deals with Kennedy's very bad attendance record in the Senate. The entire country witnessed Kennedy chasing hither and yon winning primaries, seeking delegates, etc. A man cannot be in two places simultaneously; therefore if Kennedy was beating Humphrey in Wisconsin and West Virginia, he could not be in the Senate.

The other is a pamphlet on what other Democrats said about Kennedy and it is a devastating indictment. Now, I suppose the Democrats will issue a pamphlet on what Republicans said about Nixon over the years. Such pamphlets are not fundamental.

Thus far, the candidates have avoided fundamentals. Ordinarily this is good politics. This has long been regarded as correct technique. But it is not going to work too well in this campaign. The conditions the country faces are too serious and many of them will grow more complicated during the campaign. The people are looking for leadership. The people want a man to stand up forthright. If both candidates will note the response in the Republican convention to the excitement over the speeches of Senator Barry Goldwater and Representative Walter Judd, they will learn much of what is in the minds of our people. And if they will have a look at the current ferment in the South, they will also discover that public opinion in this country is not made by a handful of college professors and exhibitionistic businessmen and labor leaders. If ever a people did its own, individualistic thinking, it is the American people in this election.

Both candidates face one serious problem, namely, that many will not vote for either of them unless strong leadership is exhibited. The Republicans defeated both Wendell Willkie and Thomas Dewey by not voting for them. This is demonstrable by a comparison with the vote cast in those elections for local officials. The conservative Republican and the conservative Democrat constitute a sufficiently large part of the electorate to influence the outcome of the 1960 election. The conservative Republican defeated Wendell Willkie but even more so Thomas E. Dewey. He just abstained from voting for a president of the United States. This year, that can also occur in the South among the Democrats.

Richard Nixon still has to speak up and if he means to have a fighting campaign, he must, to win, fight with ideas and sincerity. Getting canned stuff from a brain trust was possible in 1932 when Roosevelt used this device; in 1960, the nation wants a man to speak for himself. The people are on to ghost-writers.

De Gaulle 'God'

No One Ever Saw French President Without Dignity Garb

PARIS, France — President De Gaulle was on vacation — but no matter. The reporter had typewriter — would travel. Perhaps the President could be visited at his resort. "Where does he swim?" This query was received with shock and awe.

"De Gaulle swim — ? Nobody has ever seen him without all his clothes!"

It is both a true story — and a parable. De Gaulle without all the garments of dignity, without the panoply of power and the aura of mystique simply would not be De Gaulle. He is greater than a man — a god! And he has brought off miracles in the short history of the Fifth Republic.

His finest miracle, still largely unrecognized and uncelebrated, is the use he has made of France's very recent atomic capability. Two atomic bombs have been fired off in the French Sahara amid general lamentations. More fallout in the air! More armament, hence more danger of war! But De Gaulle had also exploded the French inferiority complex. He had blown up the dungeon where France was relegated in a secondary position among allies. He had begun the restoration — and this had to be a miracle! — of the "grandeur" of France.

There was no way to know what a lucky thing this would prove for the NATO partners of France. When Mr. Eisenhower took the first tumble at the called - off Summit meeting, and continued to fall with subsequent humiliations, De Gaulle became the biggest of the Big Three, the biggest single figure in the Free World. He has been a friend in need. He has made the Western alliance stronger by doing what many considered an unfriendly deed that would weaken the alliance.

Another miracle, not very discernible from a distance, is De Gaulle's equally miraculous restoration of French economic stability. He has done this by an austerity program which says in tones that will sound to Americans like those of the late Robert Taft, "Consume less!"

The Fifth Republic is a government which, among other things, withholds products from its own people. The worth of these products is transmuted into greater production through investing heavy machinery and the like. While not popular, the austerity is acceptable in France because of De Gaulle's inspiring presence. He is described as an autocrat who never hesitates to use power, as a democrat who would never misuse it. Several months ago he appointed as Finance Minister to carry out austerity a public banker named Baumgartner whose American equivalent would be William McChesney Martin, the archconservative head of the Federal Reserve Bank.

It is easy to see why the French capitalists and military authoritarians go for De Gaulle — but no free government in France can stand without Labor support. In the Fifth Republic the working people have been severely pinched by austerity — or, at least, they think so.

From 1952 - 59 there was a 30 per cent increase in purchasing power. Under De Gaulle's austerity this trend has slowly diminished as inflation has been brought under control. Although employment in France is around 99 per cent, discount over purchasing power continues. There have been recent strikes by workers in the metal and transport industries and among many government groups which in France include teachers, tobacco and match workers as well as customs and communication employees.

Views Of Our Readers

Monroe

It is deeply regrettable, but true — and the recent national conventions of both the Democratic and Republican parties have clearly pointed up the dangerous trend — that our Federal government is moving, faster and faster, further and further away from the people. Centralized government in Washington is seriously theatening, through shameful responses to political expediency, to literally destroy our constitutional system of government.

Thomas Jefferson, surely one of the greatest men in American history, warned against the danger of centralization as early as 1822. That year, he wrote:

"If ever this vast country is brought under a single government, it will be a government of corruption."

Today, 138 years later, we realize — and even more acutely so now, in the light of the extreme platform declarations of the two national political parties — how justified Thomas Jefferson was. Unfortunately, however, not only are his warnings going unheeded, but they are being repudiated by the "ultraliberal" and "liberal" elements in both major parties, the reins of control. And now, therefore, crushing momentum is being applied to the movement tamper with our Federal system for the short-lived benefit of short-sighted politicians.

A gravely dangerous example of such heedless tinkering with our precious heritage is, of course, the reckless drive — for which both the national Democratic and Republican campaign platforms have declared full speed ahead— to push the Federal government ever further into the field of so-called "civil rights." Certain of the extremist politicians have discovered that the issue of "civil rights" has all the elements of political magic.

So, these advocates of increased Federal powers are concentrating, as all of us are well aware, not only on interference with the states' control over the franchise, but also on education and numerous other vital areas of state and local jurisdiction—attacks which, in fact, constitute assaults on the Constitution itself. Once the elections and the schools, for example, should be controlled by Washington, the centralized government, of which Thomas Jefferson warned, would be upon us.

The freedoms we enjoy will endure only so long as our Federal system endures. In order to preserve that system, we must keep the Federal government out of education — especially. We cannot allow Washington to get a foot in the door of our schools. If it should succeed in penetrating our schools, there would be no stopping point. Conceivably, all the schools throughout the United States would sooner or later be coordinated so as to turn out robots in accordance with Washington blueprints.

Admittedly, we are losing the battle now. But that does not necessarily mean we will lose the ultimate victory.

We must never lose sight of the fact that our great American heritage is worth protecting and preserving. Every generation owes it to itself to safeguard that precious heritage so that succeeding generations may be the recipients of our labors and may, too, enjoy living under the greatest form of government ever conceived by the mind of man.

Our plans, all our hopes, all our dreams — indeed our very lives — depend on the continued support and defense and maintenance of constitutional government in our country.

In the long run, we will not fail.

To the Editor:

First, I would like to take this opportunity to express one housewife's and homeowner's appreciation for the many long hours of free civic service given the citizens of Monroe by members of the Monroe - Ouachita Regional Planning Commission during the past three years. Also, I feel that the citizens of Monroe should be thankful that we have a City Council that had the foresight to create this program of planning for the future and to support the work of the Planning Commission.

As Monroe grows, we all are confronted with problems that make us more and more aware of the need for city planning— it is getting harder and harder to get downtown and back home again or to get from one side of Monroe to the other. I live in a beautiful, recently developed subdivision; but my supposedly residential street is becoming a highway between two developing commercial districts. This could have been avoided if we had the benefit of city planning at the time the subdivision was started.

I am most concerned with the report I just read in your paper indicating that the zoning plan prepared by the Planning Commission does not meet with the approval of all the members of the council and that as a result, Monroe citizens must continue to wait for the many protections provided for in such an ordinance that we have needed so long.

I for one, was pleased to learn that one of the jobs of the Planning Commission was to draw up a zoning ordinance for Monroe. Now that the commission has completed that job and public meetings to explain their work held, I would like to publicly encourage the City Council to clear up the differences of opinion on the ordinance and adopt zoning for Monroe as soon as possible and also encourage my fellow citizens to get behind the Planning Commission's efforts and let the council know that the people of Monroe are in favor of zoning.

Death Of Rogers

Famous American Humorist Killed In Crash 25 Years Ago

From the time I first had a newspaper office in Washington and as long as he lived Will Rogers made that office pretty much his headquarters while in the national capital.

My recollections of this cowboy philospher are many. The first is of the time he came into this one room office in the old Washington Post Building during World War I. He wanted to read an account of the death of an old Oklahoma friend in the Tulsa World, of which I was the Washington correspondent. He was appearing at the time either in a Ziegfeld show or in vaudeville.

I recollect that President Wilson had come to see the show. He thought Wilson was the greatest statesman in the world — a belief from which he never receded. Rogers was Wilson's favorite comedian. He proudly told how Wilson had gone all the way to Baltimore to see his show a year or two before. Rogers was at that time 37 or 38 years old, I would judge, and did not have the wide Washington acquaintance he came to have.

Will Rogers stayed in my office an hour or two on that first visit. My home was in Amarillo, Texas. He told me how at 17 years of age he went there looking for a job on a cattle ranch. He told me the story of a spotted dog which did tricks in an Amarillo saloon. It was a most delightful story, but it would require more than a column of space to tell it. That story of the dog was the only one I ever heard him repeat. It was always a great pleasure to hear him tell of the philosophy he learned from a homeless canine.

Two or three weeks more than twenty - five years ago Will Rogers came into my office in the National Press Building. As he was leaving he picked up a history of cattle ranches in the southwest and said he wanted to take it with him. When I demurred he said he would finish the book on a long plane trip he was taking and return it to me.

That was the first time I ever saw Will Rogers. I went to Union Station with him. He no longer liked to ride on railroad trains, but weather conditions made flying impossible. He had become a great devotee of flying. He was preparing for a trip with Wiley Post, who like Rogers was an Oklahoman, and one of the nation's most famous flyers. He never returned from that trip.

Twenty - five years ago Will Rogers and Wiley Post were instantly killed when Post's plane nosed over on a take - off from an icy inlet in the Arctic Ocean. Only a lone Eskimo saw the tragedy which ended the life of the best - loved American of his day and his aviator friend at Point Barrow, Alaska.

I well remember Rogers' first airplane flight. It was arranged in my one - room Washington Post Building office. By that time the Milwaukee Sentinel was among the newspapers I represented and Brig. General William Mitchell, a Milwaukean, was frequently in my office. Mitchell in his effort to get support for the air service of the Army was getting into trouble with higher-ups.

Rogers came into the office. Mitchell tried to persuade him to take a trip with him in an open-cockpit plane. Rogers replied: "If God had meant for me to fly he would have put wings between my shoulders." But he finally agreed and the next day Mitchell flew Rogers around Washington. That night Mitchell got word he had been demoted from brigadier general to colonel and a few months later he was court martialed. He and Will Rogers remained close friends.

I remember the day Rogers came to my office to tell me he had slept in the White House the night before. President Coolidge had sent a limousine for him and told him he wanted him to be his guest.

If both Black and Clark voted with the South and we had a third to do so, what good would it do? A 6 to 3 integration decision is just as binding as 9 to 0.

The Two-Thirds Rule: That's a matter only for the Democratic Party and its national convention. The South supplied some of the votes to surrender it in 1936 and can never get it back.

In the end all unpledged electors talk comes back to the same thing:

Nixon or Kennedy will be President.

You can make your own decision between the two or let someone else make it for you.

There is no bargain that could help the South in the segregation field that a President could keep if he made it.

If the election could be thrown into the House, Kennedy would be virtually a certain winner even if Nixon was high in the popular vote and had an electoral pluralty.

So, the unpledged elector plan is exactly what South C a r o l i n a's Democratic convention dubbed it when shouting it down without even a roll call: A scheme that can thwart rather than assert the will of the people and that gives Kennedy two shots at the election — instead of one in a clearcut two-man contest.

At the press conference where he presented his "hard bargain" points Governor Barnett also repeated his frequently - made statement:

"A vote for either Nixon or Kennedy is a vote to integrate all Southern schools by 1963."

That is neither fully correct nor germaine to any issue of unpledged electors. The Democratic platform specifically sets 1963 as a target date for integration of all shools now segregated. The Republican platform specifically spurns any target date. Both parties and both candidates want speed, but no President can, by himself, control the throttle.

Nearly half of the nation's department stores have started charging for deliveries, and three-quarters charge for pickups for something that is returned.

There are now some 20,000 Catholic priests in the United States, according to Catholic Digest. Additionally, 3,500 American priests are serving as missionaries in foreign lands.

The two points in the United States most remote from each other are Attu, Alaska, and Key Largo, Fla. They are 5,509 miles apart.

Lines Of Least Resistance

In Final Analysis, Both Nixon And Kennedy Will Rely On Own Judgment Instead Of On Braintrusters

Nixon vs. Kennedy has not yet developed into a debate on issues. Kennedy has a brain trust of Harvard professors; Nixon has a brain trust of Harvard professors and some others. This is mostly window dressing. Both candidates have been in the national Legislature for 14 years. They know what they believe and what they are prepared to say are not quite the same thing. As men of great experience in politics, they will not and cannot depend on academic and business advisers to counsel them. Ultimately, they will follow those lines of least opposition which might assure election.

Nor are the academic and business advisers of either candidate particularly impressive from a vote - gathering standpoint. And elections have to do with votes; that is why they are held. Therefore, we can regard the announcement of these lists of great minds as a one-day news story and forget about them forever more.

Thus far, neither candidate has startled the nation with ideas and purposes. John Kennedy's speech at Franklin D. Roosevelt's grave was a dramatic performance of no particular vote-getting significance. The appeal to the old voters was mindful of the long-forgotten Dr. Townsend. Granted that the problem of the aged is constantly with us, the matter is not as acute, for instance, as the deterioration of the dollar. And about that neither of the candidates speaks a word.

Richard Nixon needs to take the initiative in dealing with major problems or he has to run in defense of the Eisenhower administration. He needs to prove to the country that he has the stature of a president as well as that of a vice president. In the campaign he can prove it only by words. Thus far, the Republicans have put out two propagandistic ideas: One deals with Kennedy's very bad attendance record in the Senate. The entire country witnessed Kennedy chasing hither and yon winning primaries, seeking delegates, etc. A man cannot be in two places simultaneously; therefore if Kennedy was beating Humphrey in Wisconsin and West Virginia, he could not be in the Senate.

The other is a pamphlet on what other Democrats said about Kennedy and it is a devastating indictment. Now, I suppose the Democrats will issue a pamphlet on what Republicans said about Nixon over the years. Such pamphlets are not fundamental.

Thus far, the candidates have avoided fundamentals. Ordinarily this is good politics. This has long been regarded as correct technique. But it is not going to work too well in this campaign. The conditions the country faces are too serious and many of them will grow more complicated during the campaign. The people are looking for leadership. The people want a man to stand up forthright. If both candidates will note the response in the Republican convention to the excitement over the speeches of Senator Barry Goldwater and Representative Walter Judd, they will learn much of what is in the minds of our people. And if they will have a look at the current ferment in the South, they will also discover that public opinion in this country is not made by a handful of college professors and exhibitionistic businessmen and labor leaders. If ever a people did its own, individualistic thinking, it is the American people in this election.

Both candidates face one serious problem, namely, that many will not vote for either of them unless strong leadership is exhibited. The Republicans defeated both Wendell Willkie and Thomas Dewey by not voting for them. This is demonstrable by a comparison with the vote cast in those elections for local officials. The conservative Republican and the conservative Democrat constitute a sufficiently large part of the electorate to influence the outcome of the 1960 election. The conservative Republican defeated Wendell Willkie but even more so Thomas E. Dewey. He just abstained from voting for a president of the United States. This year, that can also occur in the South among the Democrats.

Richard Nixon still has to speak up and if he means to have a fighting campaign, he must, to win, fight with ideas and sincerity. Getting canned stuff from a brain trust was possible in 1932 when Roosevelt used this device; in 1960, the nation wants a man to speak for himself. The people are on to ghost-writers.

HOLMES ALEXANDER

De Gaulle 'God'

No One Ever Saw French President Without Dignity Garb

PARIS, France — President De Gaulle was on vacation — but no matter. The reporter had typewriter — would travel. Perhaps the President could be visited at his resort. "Where does he swim?" This query was received with shock and awe.

"De Gaulle swim — ? Nobody has ever seen him without all his clothes!"

It is both a true story — and a parable. De Gaulle without all the garments of dignity, without the panoply of power and the aura of mystique simply would not be De Gaulle. He is greater than a man — a god! And he has brought off miracles in the short history of the Fifth Republic.

His finest miracle, still largely unrecognized and uncelebrated, is the use he has made of France's very recent atomic capability. Two atomic bombs have been fired off in the French Sahara amid general lamentations. More fallout in the air! More armament, hence more danger of war! But De Gaulle had also exploded the French inferiority complex. He had blown up the dungeon where France was relegated in a secondary position among allies. He had begun the restoration — and this had to be a miracle! — of the "grandeur" of France.

There was no way to know what a lucky thing this would prove for the NATO partners of France. When Mr. Eisenhower took the first tumble at the called - off Summit meeting, and continued to fall with subsequent humiliations, De Gaulle became the biggest of the Big Three, the biggest single figure in the Free World. He has been a friend in need. He has made the Western alliance stronger by doing what many considered an unfriendly deed that would weaken the alliance.

Another miracle, not very discernible from a distance, is De Gaulle's equally miraculous restoration of French economic stability. He has done this by an austerity program which says in tones that will sound to Americans like those of the late Robert Taft, "Consume less!"

The Fifth Republic is a government which, among other things, withholds products from its own people. The worth of these products is transmuted into greater production through investing heavy machinery and the like. While not popular, the austerity is acceptable in France because of De Gaulle's inspiring presence. He is described as an autocrat who never hesitates to use power, as a democrat who would never misuse it. Several months ago he appointed as Finance Minister to carry out austerity a public banker named Baumgartner whose American equivalent would be William McChesney Martin, the archconservative head of the Federal Reserve Bank.

It is easy to see why the French capitalists and military authoritarians go for De Gaulle — but no free government in France can stand without Labor support. In the Fifth Republic the working people have been severely pinched by austerity — or, at least, they think so.

From 1952 - 59 there was a 30 per cent increase in purchasing power. Under De Gaulle's austerity this trend has slowly diminished as inflation has been brought under control. Although employment in France is around 99 per cent, discount over purchasing power continues. There have been recent strikes by workers in the metal and transport industries and among many government groups which in France include teachers, tobacco, and match workers as well as customs and communication employees.

Views Of Our Readers

Monroe

It is deeply regrettable, but true — and the recent national conventions of both the Democratic and Republican parties have clearly pointed up the dangerous trend — that our Federal government is moving, faster and faster, further and further away from the people. Centralized government in Washington is seriously theatening, through shameful responses to political expediency, to literally destroy our constitutional system of government.

Thomas Jefferson, surely one of the greatest men in American history, warned against the danger of centralization as early as 1822. That year, he wrote:

"If ever this vast country is brought under a single government, it will be a government of corruption."

Today, 138 years later, we realize — and even more acutely so now, in the light of the extreme platform declarations of the two national political parties — how justified Thomas Jefferson was. Unfortunately, however, not only are his warnings going unheeded, but they are being repudiated by the "ultraliberal" and "liberal" elements in both major parties, the reins of control. And now, therefore, crushing momentum is being applied to the movement tamper with our Federal system for the short-lived benefit of short-sighted politicians.

A gravely dangerous example of such heedless tinkering with our precious heritage is, of course, the reckless drive — for which both the national Democratic and Republican campaign platforms have declared full speed ahead— to push the Federal government ever further into the field of so-called "civil rights." Certain of the extremist politicians have discovered that the issue of "civil rights" has all the elements of political magic.

So, these advocates of increased Federal powers are concentrating, as all of us are well aware, not only on interference with the states' control over the franchise, but also on education and numerous other vital areas of state and local jurisdiction— attacks which, in fact, constitute assaults on the Constitution itself. Once the elections and the schools, for example, should be controlled by Washington, the centralized government, of which Thomas Jefferson warned, would be upon us.

The freedoms we enjoy will endure only so long as our Federal system endures. In order to preserve that system, we must keep the Federal government out of education — especially. We cannot allow Washington to get a foot in the door of our schools. If it should succeed in penetrating our schools, there would be no stopping point. Conceivably, all the schools throughout the United States would sooner or later be coordinated so as to turn out robots in accordance with Washington blueprints.

Admittedly, we are losing the battle now. But that does not necessarily mean we will lose the ultimate victory.

We must never lose sight of the fact that our great American heritage is worth protecting and preserving. Every generation owes it to itself to safeguard that precious heritage so that succeeding generations may be the recipients of our labors and may, too, enjoy living under the greatest form of government ever conceived by the mind of man.

Our plans, all our hopes, all our dreams — indeed our very lives — depend on the continued support and defense and maintenance of constitutional government in our country.

In the long run, we will not fail.

To the Editor:

First, I would like to take this opportunity to express one housewife's and homeowner's appreciation for the many long hours of free civic service given the citizens of Monroe by members of the Monroe - Ouachita Regional Planning Commission during the past three years. Also, I feel that the citizens of Monroe should be thankful that we have a City Council that had the foresight to create this program of planning for the future and to support the work of the Planning Commission.

As Monroe grows, we all are confronted with problems that make us more and more aware of the need for city planning— it is getting harder and harder to get downtown and back home again or to get from one side of Monroe to the other. I live in a beautiful, recently developed subdivision; but my supposedly residential street is becoming a highway between two developing commercial districts. This could have been avoided if we had the benefit of city planning at the time the subdivision was started.

I am most concerned with the report I just read in your paper indicating that the zoning plan prepared by the Planning Commission does not meet with the approval of all the members of the council and that as a result, Monroe citizens must continue to wait for the many protections provided for in such an ordinance that we have needed so long.

I for one, was pleased to learn that one of the jobs of the Planning Commission was to draw up a zoning ordinance for Monroe. Now that the commission has completed that job and public meetings to explain their work held, I would like to publicly encourage the City Council to clear up the differences of opinion on the ordinance and adopt zoning for Monroe as soon as possible and also encourage my fellow citizens to get behind the Planning Commission's effort and let the council know that the people of Monroe are in favor of zoning.

Death Of Rogers

Famous American Humorist Killed In Crash 25 Years Ago

From the time I first had a newspaper office in Washington and as long as he lived Will Rogers made that office pretty much his headquarters while in the national capital.

My recollections of this cowboy philospher are many. The first is of the time he came into this one room office in the old Washington Post Building during World War I. He wanted to read an account of the death of an old Oklahoma friend in the Tulsa World, of which I was the Washington correspondent. He was appearing at the time either in a Ziegfeld show or in vaudeville.

I recollect that President Wilson had come to see the show. He thought Wilson was the greatest statesman in the world — a belief from which he never receded. Rogers was Wilson's favorite comedian. He proudly told how Wilson had gone all the way to Baltimore to see his show a year or two before. Rogers was at that time 37 or 38 years old, I would judge, and did not have the wide Washington acquaintance he came to have.

Will Rogers stayed in my office an hour or two on that first visit. My home was in Amarillo, Texas. He told me how at 17 years of age he went there looking for a job on a cattle ranch. He told me the story of a spotted dog which did tricks in an Amarillo saloon. It was a most delightful story, but it would require more than a column of space to tell it. That story of the dog was the only one I ever heard him repeat. It was always a great pleasure to hear him tell of the philosophy he learned from a homeless canine.

Two or three weeks more than twenty - five years ago Will Rogers came into my office in the National Press Building. As he was leaving he picked up a history of cattle ranches in the southwest and said he wanted to take it with him. When I demurred he said he would finish the book on a long plane trip he was taking and return it to me.

That was the first time I ever saw Will Rogers. I went to Union Station with him. He no longer liked to ride on railroad trains, but weather conditions made flying impossible. He had become a great devotee of flying. He was preparing for a trip with Wiley Post, who like Rogers was an Oklahoman, and one of the nation's most famous flyers. He never returned from that trip.

Twenty - five years ago Will Rogers and Wiley Post were instantly killed when Post's plane nosed over on a take - off from an icy inlet in the Arctic Ocean. Only a lone Eskimo saw the tragedy which ended the life of the best - loved American of his day and his aviator friend at Point Barrow, Alaska.

I well remember Rogers' first airplane flight. It was arranged in my one - room Washington Post Building office. By that time the Milwaukee Sentinel was among the newspapers I represented and Brig. General William Mitchell, a Milwaukean, was frequently in my office. Mitchell in his effort to get support for the air service of the Army was getting into trouble with higher-ups.

Rogers came into the office. Mitchell tried to persuade him to take a trip with him in an open-cockpit plane. Rogers replied: "If God had meant for me to fly he would have put wings between my shoulders." But he finally agreed and the next day Mitchell flew Rogers around Washington. That night Mitchell got word he had been demoted from brigadier general to colonel and a few months later he was court martialed. He and Will Rogers remained close friends.

I remember the day Rogers came to my office to tell me he had slept in the White House the night before. President Coolidge had sent a limousine for him and told him he wanted him to be his guest.

SOME AIRPORTS TOO SMALL

Jet Age Is Off With Roar; Many People Not Prepared

EDITOR'S NOTE—Ready or not the jet age has taken off with a roar. And a lot of people aren't ready. While the skies fill with the huge airliners, many cities find their airports too small, Homeowners near airports can't stand the jet noise and the airlines are finding it hard to stir up a market for second-hand prop liners, cheap.

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have far to fly, go by jet.

That appears to have become the practice of the traveling public, from President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon to the vacationing family next door.

In the little more than a year and a half that jet transportation has been available, the streamlined sky giants have skimmed off the cream of the air travel market.

The jets have virtually driven their piston engine competition off the long-range flight schedules, and they are rapidly stealing away passengers on the shorter routes. Yet with all this success have come severe headaches for operators, manufacturers and airports—everybody, in fact, except the passengers.

The air tourist has discovered the joys of flying from coast to coast in five hours or less, in an airplane free of vibration and relatively noiseless. The eight-hour trip in the old propeller-driven DC7s and Super Constellations by contrast now seems too long and tiring.

This summer all but three of the major airlines operating across the Atlantic have been flying jets. Pan American alone is operating 100 jet flights a week between the United States and Europe, just twice as many as last summer.

The public lined up for jets almost as fast as they appeared in service. The Air Transport Assn. says that in 1958 less than 1 per cent of U.S. scheduled airline passenger miles were flown by jet planes. In the first three months of this year, jets accounted for a whopping 25 per cent.

Pan American was the first U.S. Airline to fly a jet. Its first 707 flew from New York to London Oct. 26, 1958. During the first six months of 1959, the 707s operated at an incredible 90 per cent of capacity.

By the end of 1959, a total of 85 U.S. jets had been delivered to eight airlines. Turboprops such as Britain's Viscount and the U.S. Lockheed Electra and Fairchild F27—planes using their jet engines to drive propellers, thus operating more economically but at lower speeds than the pure jets—totalled 219. By the end of last month, total pure jets in operation by U.S. airlines had reached 169.

Esso Export Corp., which has been keeping tab on jet use around the world, says 638 U.S., British and French pure jet transports have been ordered by 49 airlines in 30 countries. More than 200 are now in service with 28 airlines. In addition, some 800 turboprops have been ordered. The total airline investment in planes to be delivered through 1964 is almost four billion dollars.

At their introduction, pure jets jumped passenger plane speed from the 360 m.p.h. of the DC7 to 590 miles per hour. New models have speeds substantially over 600.

Pure jet operators are proud to point out there has not been a single fatal crash of a U.S. passenger jet on a scheduled flight.

The civil aeronautics board, in a study of jet operations to date, says: "Together with a substantial increase in payload, the added jet speed is an important factor in increasing the productivity potential of the jets to truly revolutionary levels. In turn, this higher productivity makes possible lower unit costs, which in the long run should tend to pull down passenger fares and cargo rates."

Glowing statements like this do little, however, to cheer airline cost accountants, plane manufacturers, airport managers — even the airline crews. While bringing the customer dividends in speed and comfort, the jets have generated no end of problems.

Cost, for example.

Competition of jets has accelerated the rate of obsolescence for piston-engine aircraft, which airlines had not expected they would have to retire so quickly.

The airlines must try to sell DC7s, which came on the market in 1953 at 2½ million dollars each, to buy 707s and Douglas DC8s at over 5 million dollars each.

Orval R. Cook, president of the Aerospace Industries Assn., says that even though they dominate the world jet and propjet market, U.S. manufacturers "because of very high research and development costs, are suffering a loss on every aircraft delivery.

"Unless there are additional sales, the prospect that the break-even point ever can be reached is not promising."

Another drawback is that the jets have voracious appetites at best. Half the weight of a fully fueled jet plane is kerosene.

At 31,000 feet on a standard day a 707 will burn up 70,000 pounds of fuel on a flight from New York to San Francisco.

Ray M. Dunn, TWA vice president for technical services, said jets cost about three times as much as piston-engine transports to buy, operate and maintain, and earn only 3½ times as much.

R. M. Adams, Pan American maintenance manager, said the 707 cost per flight hour was about 50 per cent greater than the original forecasts.

Flight crews complain the jets force them to make many more trips and work much longer than before. Says Ron Brown, president of the Flight Engineers International Assn.: "Some men are away from home as many as 26 days a month."

C. L. Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., says the most critical problem facing jet aviation is the lag in terminal area facilities as air traffic increases.

He says that of 569 airports in the U.S. certified for airline use, only 185 have instrument-landing systems and only two have complete instrument-landing systems in more than one direction.

"The jet aircraft compromised both from an efficiency and safety standpoint by inadequate airports," Sayen says.

"The noise problem is adding public pressure for further compromises."

The larger cities requiring runways from which jets can take off on their longest nonstop flights have either already built or are building runways of the required length.

Smaller cities complain that the airlines, reluctant to disclose jet plans to competitors, are playing a cat-and-mouse game and refusing to indicate the cities to which they plan to provide jet service. This in turn inhibits jet-age airport planning and construction.

E. Thomas Burnard, executive vice president of the Airport Operators Council, says medium and small-size airports are "the next ones that are going to have jet problems."

To serve these smaller airports, the airlines are planning to use smaller jets: such as the 90-passenger French Caravelle and the 72-passenger Douglas 727.

And when that day comes, the jet age will have reached out into every remote corner of this country.

BROADWAY CHATTER

Many Things Up For White Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not the least interesting of the Broadway prospects early in the new season is the impending visit of Irish playwright Brendan Behan, who is due to arrive Sept. 2 with the London Theater Workshop cast which will present his successful comedy, "The Hostage."

Behan, a bulky and tumbled-looking non-conformist, is the one who made a shambles of several performances of his own play in London in the past year by rolling into the theater under a full head of alcohol and heckling the performers and audience. His antics were met with a tolerance that certainly will not be accorded him here, should he try to repeat them.

In fact, producers Leonard S. Field and Caroline Burke Swann would be well advised to guarantee with each ticket sale that the purchasers will be able to see a performance unblemished by any off-stage performance by the author. At $6.90 a seat, an American theater-goer, whether he likes the play or not in the end, isn't going to take kindly to such shenanigans.

Actually, it is difficult to imagine the staff of a Broadway theater letting a Behan demonstration get beyond the first word or two, if, indeed, he were allowed into the house at all while obviously primed for devilment.

"The Hostage" is described as a play replete with earthy fun and characters and containing many a sharp barb directed at politics, Irish-British relations and other topical matters. It is Behan's second play. His first, "The Quare Fellow," had a warm critical reception and a fairish run off-Broadway a couple of seasons ago.

The space atop the Winter Garden Theater on Broadway, which has housed several large night clubs in the past, is about to be called the Lanai, a South Pacific-type place as to decor and cuisine.

The backers have all been Broadway producers — Joseph Kipness, Monte Proser and Harry Bloonfield. Kipness at the moment is co-producer of the long-running "La Plume de Ma Tante."

Proser, who co-produced "High Button Shoes" successfully with Kipness several years ago, has become a legend in the entertainment world in much less than a lifetime. He's a fellow who isn't happy unless he is operating a night club or a restaurant. He was the original owner of the long-successful Copacabana and previously had a South Seas-type place here called the Beachcomber, to name only a couple of the many operations he has been connected with in 30 years.

The World Was The Stake In This One

THE CONSPIRATORS. By Geoffrey Bailey. Harper. $4.95.

One reason why Hitler's armies swept so deadly far and fast into Russia was, some people used to argue, that Stalin had purged the Red Army of its only able and experienced generals, in particular Tukhachevsky. That was taken as a sign of Stalin's stupidity, for shouldn't he have known war was coming, and didn't he sacrifice essential generalship to what was by his own statements to his people a piddling little conspiracy that constituted no real threat to his position?

Not so, says this author, who uses a pseudonym. There was a major plot to oust Stalin, who had only recently sufered two serious setbacks to his headlong climb to dictatorship. Hitler, who was having troubles with his own generals, was only too glad to get Stalin involved with his. While the Army purge along amounted to a horrible slaughter, there was method in the Communist's madness. And it climaxed the between-the-wars struggle for power among Russians in and out of Russia as revealed in blood-curdling detail in this book.

Bailey's story begins around 1920 with a well-to-do Russian's trip from Petrograd to Revel, now Tallinn, on what might have been an indiscreet affair with a married woman. He was Yakushev, and the Cheka, or OGPU, or NKVD, put pressure on him till he doubled his role, serving as White Russian emigre leader but also as Red spy.

It was his "Trust" that betrayed two of the chief anti-Communist agents of the 1920s, Boris Savinko and the Englishman Sydney Reilly, and may have contributed to the disappearance of Maria Schultz after a Moscow bombing attempt.

This Trust worked closely — too closely for the White Russians' good — with Wrangel's ROVS in Paris, which was headed by Generals Kutyepov and Miller. Both were kidnaped right in the middle of the capital, and smuggled out of the country right under the noses of a police force somewhat indifferent, Bailey suggests, to the fate of White Russians — the Quai d'Orsay later came stoutly to their defense. Gen. Nikolai Skoblin, who put the finger on Miller, as Miller revealed in a note he left against the chance of his disappearance, also seems to have told Heydrich of the Red Army conspiracy, though as Bailey confesses, the motivation is baffling.

There are many familiar names in this complex tale of a mammoth underground — Plevitzkaya the glamor actress, Yagoda and Yezhov, Radek the brilliant journalist, Commissar Gamarkin who began the hazardous negotiations with the Nazis, Zinovyev and Kamenev, Dzierzhinski, Kirov, Vyshinsky. This is a remarkable chronicle of diplomatic double-talk and blood-and-thunder melodrama, all played for the highest stakes — the world we live in.

Fontamara; 2nd Version By Italian

FONTAMARA, by Ignazio Silone (Atheneum) — In 1930 Silone, an exile in Switzerland from Mussolini's Italy, wrote this novel of oppressed peasants, driven almost beyond hope by their landlord masters and others. Sick, lonely, and in the shadow of expected death, Silone wrote hurriedly and with the passionate conviction which characterizes all works of art. But he didn't die. He lived to return to his native land after World War II. Contemplating his work of 15 years earlier, he felt that he must do it over. This is the second version. There is the same cast of characters as in the first version, but the accent has shifted from the agonized peasants to the man Berardo, who emerges as a latter-day saint against the background of a people floundering in misery and finding no deliverer.

Ancient Rome Present Italy

THE ORIGINS OF ROME. By Raymond Bloch. Praeger. $6.50. VIEW-HUNTING IN ITALY. By Sidney and Allyn Bloeme. Dresser-Taplinger. $6.50.

Latins, Sabines and Etruscans; Aeneas, Anchises and Lavinia; Romulus and Remus; Tarquin and Lucretia; Horatius and Lars Porsena; the Horatii and the Curiatii — how many names does ancient Rome conjure up to attract the modern traveler!

Romans date their history from B. C. 753 — or 747 — when Romulus marked out the line of the city walls with a plowshare. But it is only Romans left now, as indeed it has been for 20 centuries; and it's natural that they exaggerate their own role in the development of the Italian peninsula, and fill in to their own satisfaction the gaps left by time. Increasingly, new discoveries furnish new information or a check against legend, and they are surveyed here excitingly and authoritatively by Frenchman Bloch.

There was an Aeneas known in 500 B.C.; wolf-priests sanctified the place where the twins were brought up; Etruscans and Romans were rivals. But it seems likely Rome grew more slowly than we have supposed. One illustration shows an earth stratification cut down some 16 feet with 25 different layers betraying as many stages in Rome's history from the Iron age to medieval times. Rome started a bit later than other ancient societies, but developed not in isolation but along with the rest of the peninsula. Bloch considers the prehistoric peoples, the legends and their reliability, language, law and religion, down to about 450 B.C.

Switches From Humor To Field Of Romance

THE HANDS OF CORMAC JOYCE. By Leonard Wibberley. Putnam. $2.95.

On a low island off the County Galway shore, young Jackie Joyce can't help thinking what great strong hands his father has, and how puny and weak are his own. He dips them into Saint Brendan's well to make them bigger; he'd like to help his father more when they row out against the Atlantic swells to their net and lobster pots, and he'd like pretty Eilis Conneeley to admire him.

And right now as this short novel opens, he's going to need to be as mighty as a full-grown man: The nets are empty when they should be full, vast twittering flocks of unknown birds come sweeping in from the west, the swells rise higher, the ocean takes on a fearful glassy look, a terrible storm is brewing. The Coast Guard takes the Conneeleys to the mainland, but the Joyces, father, mother and son, stay on, and so does the small island's only other family, the old Reeces.

Wibberley, best known for his humor, gives us here a fine romantic picture of overpowering wind and tide beating at humans who will not be overpowered, and of a boy and his love for a girl.

Clever Satire On Politics International

PLATYPUS AT LARGE, by Emery Kelen (Dutton): A clever satire on international politics and the people who practice it. Kelen is an old United Nations hand and a veteran of the League of Nations, his caricatures of which gained wide attention. In this book he has produced a modern fable centered on Duckbill Platypus who is taken through the political jungle by wily and cynical Max Fox. The sharp drawings which pull the leg of many world figures make it an amusing work.

Admiral H. G. Rickover

Ex Navy Chief Hits U. S. School System

EDITOR'S NOTE — Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover, the father of the atomic submarine, has long been noted as a leading critic of U.S. educational trends. In the following article, he sums up his viewpoint and philosophy.

By VICE ADM. H. G. RICKOVER

WASHINGTON (AP) — We and we alone among all modern democracies have devalued our educational currency.

We have down-graded the high school diploma to a point where it does not even promise competence in elementary subjects. Witness the many college freshmen who have to take remedial courses in reading, writing and arithmetic. Abroad these courses are mastered in the first eight years of schooling.

Russia's real threat to us will come through their educational and not through their military processes. Military systems and techniques are transitory — they now change every few years. An intelligent and well-educated body of citizens is something you will have forever.

This is where the Russians are smarter than we. They have recognized the full value of a good education and they are hellbent on giving it to as many of their youngsters as they can coax into taking it.

This is about the best comparison I can make: almost half of Russia's children, graduating at 17 after but 10 years of schooling, do as well — by the record — as many of our children after 14 years of schooling, two of them in college.

Neither I nor other critics have ever recommended that we take over the Russian educational system. We do urge that we consider Russian educational achievements as the minimum standard for our own educational objectives.

We warn it would be suicidal if we allowed scholastic levels in our schools permanently to drop below this minimum standard. We flatly reject the claim that since ours is mass education it must, therefore, be mediocre, or that democratic education can never be as good as education in an authoritarian state.

What I have said about Russia applies even more so to the Western European nations.

Abroad, a liberal education comparing favorably with what Americans acquire in 16 years of school and college takes from 12 to 13 years. Europeans are by that much ahead of Americans when they begin to study for a "learned" profession, such as medicine or law.

I find it personally humiliating that most European universities demand a bachelor of arts degree of Americans wishing to matriculate, while they admit all Europeans with a "maturity" certificate which is obtained at the end of the higher secondary school. This school achieves these superior results through better teaching, better curriculum, much tougher classroom work and homework, and early separating of the talented child from the average.

We seem bemused by the claims of the educationists that it is "undemocratic" for other Western nations to separate their children after elementary school, and to put them into different types of secondary schools according to their mental abilities and vocational aims.

We do not say it is "undemocratic" that nurses go to nursing school and doctors to medical school, and that each obtains a different diploma. Nor do we send enlisted personnel to the same schools as officers.

Why do we get angry at Europeans for weeding out the dullards from the talented children and sending them to separate secondary schools? What good would it do the dullars to be admitted to a school where they would just sit around and understand nothing? What does it benefit them to be given diplomas which stand for nothing but a given number of hours spent sitting at a school desk?

What is democratic about penalizing God-given talent by letting it go to waste so average children won't feel a sense of inferiority?

It may be beguiling in theory to think of all our children going to school together. But will it really serve their best interests to send them to schools where the child with an IQ of 70 sits beside one with an IQ of 170, and where the morally weak child freely associates with the child who has been carefully raised to distinguish right from wrong and to distinguish right from wrong and to conduct himself responsibly?

This makes no sense to me. Obviously, no child will receive an education best suited to his abilities and vocational aims in such a school; nor will the bright child develop admiration and respect for the dullard, or the potential young delinquent profit from associating with well-brought-up children.

It is far more likely that the dullard will be frustrated, the bright child bored, the average child never challenged mentally, the good child corrupted by the young ne'er-do-well, and everyone's manners and mores down graded to a dead level of mediocrity.

Do we want the services of doctors, lawyers, engineers and oher professionals? Well, we won't get them unless we provide a proper schooling for those of our children who are willing and able to become professionals.

To say this is advocating that only an "elite" shall be well educated while the rest of our children receive an inferior education, making them forever hewers of wood and carriers of water, is highly irresponsible demagoguery.

To me there is nothing more important than to change our educational system in such a manner that it will provide the best possible education for every child: slow, average and talented.

At present, few get a really good public education.

Improving our schools will be no easy matter. But the dollars you spend on education are the cheapest dollars you can spend, even if some of them are wasted. They are by far the cheapest dollars, and they give the greatest return.

There is much evidence, however, that the education dollars buys less really good schooling in the United States than in any other country in the world. I am sure we could make great improvements simply by spending more wisely and efficiently the funds we now have. But money alone won't do it. It will also require much thought and effort.

As an engineer would say the first thing we must do is set up specifications: what we want our high school graduates to know when they finish at the age of 18. The minute you do that, you put courses in etiquette and baton twirling in their proper place; you begin to see that perhaps you ought not to pay an athletic coach a higher salary than a teacher of trigonometry.

We allow ourselves to be frightened by arguments that setting national standards would mean federal tyranny over education. In view of our professed fear of the federal government, we could not at the present time set up compulsory national standards.

But there is nothing in our form of government to prevent Congress from setting up some sort of commission or council and giving it the task of working out different sets of educational goals for our public schools.

The schools could disregard them if they so wished, and if the parents in the community did not force them to pay attention. But, by having a national set of standards, everyone could judge where the local school stood.

We could get a statement of policy: "This is what we think is a good education." Such a statement would give the parents a yardstick by which to measure what their children should learn and have learned in school.

Isn't the honest labeling of educational diplomas as important as the honest labeling of drugs? We regulate what goes into people's mouths, why can't we even recommend what goes into their heads?

This would give an enormous advantage to parents who are really interested in having their children "educated" in contrast to having them merely "trained."

The distinction between education and training is not thoroughly understood. When you teach a boy how to operate a lathe you are training him, you are not educating him. Training does not develop the mind. Education is a process by which the mind is developed.

It is in education—that is, in transmitting the fundamentals of knowledge, in developing the ability to think—that we fall down. Too much of our so-called education is mere training in various kinds of know-how.

In the United States it is quite possible that, left to his own devices, a potentially talented child may squander his best learning years on easy know-how courses which require no homework but which earn him the same credit toward a high school diploma as academic subjects. But in Russia, since all children tackle academic subjects, anyone who shows promise in one or another area of knowledge will be discovered early.

To allow a child to choose typewriting instead of physics, or machine shop instead of history or a foreign language, is to let a minor make a decision which will effect the whole course of his future life, a decision he is too young to make intelligently.

Frills, know-how subjects and snap courses may seem agreeable to our children today, but they shortchange the children for the future. They will have to live in a world where other people are better educated than they. The world outside the United States is being transformed so rapidly and so completely that we cannot afford to stand still.

In their enthusiasm for gigantic schools and democratic togetherness, American educationists overlook the difficulty of conducting under the same roof such varied enterprises as life adjustment training, leisure-time activities, vocational training and serious basic education—especially when the choice lies with the child as to which course he will take.

How can we expect children to choose higher mathematics when their classmates are having fun learning how to play canasta, cook or find a mate? Why should an eighth grader tackle a hard subject when next door the kids are happily whizzing through a course in "home and family living?" Why should he take tough examinations, when others get promoted on the basis of true-false tests posing such "difficult" problems as "Should boys use deodorants?" or "Can one use cake soap for shampooing?"

In other modern democracies, vocational subjects are to some slight extent taught in the schools attended by children who are not academically talented, but they are never considered a substitute for general education. In this country we stop teaching basic subjects to slow learners too soon, we shift them too early from education into training.

What has happened in America is that many parents have abdicated their responsibilities and have let the schools assume them. The progressive educationists have been more than willing to take over these responsibilities. In fact, some of them think the school should be responsible for the "whole child." They say they will produce a "well-rounded" child.

LIBYAN OIL BOOM

Black Gold Changes Small African Nation's Economy

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Everywhere you turn in spacious Libya these days there's an oilman at your elbow. Or some salesman in pursuit of an oilman's money.

Many—if not most—of them are Americans.

This vast, sandy country, once little more than a blank on the map of North Africa, is suddenly bursting at the seams with oil.

The boom is on, the sky's the limit and no one knows where it will all stop.

Literally thousands of oilmen, experts, specialists and technicians are pouring into Libya to explore or exploit petroleum. The Americans alone will bring 100 million dollars with them this year to spend in this once penniless nation.

It happened virtually overnight.

No one even began looking for oil in Libya until five years ago, when firms were spurred by Libya's 1955 petroleum law. The first oil was found only two years ago, a relatively small producer at Atshan, just west of the frontier with French Sahara.

Then, about a year ago, Standard Oil of New Jersey (Esso) brought in the first major well on the parched desert in western Cyrenaica about 150 miles from the coast. As if this were a signal, other companies, most of them American, began striking oil in rapid succession.

Tripoli and Libya will never be the same again.

Oilmen, still groping to evaluate the scope of their sudden discoveries believe their new underground pools of high-grade petroleum rival the fabulous strikes in the Middle East some three decades ago. Many rate Libya ahead of Iraq and Iran, perhaps on a par with Saudi Arabi in portential reserves.

Only phenomenal Kuwait with its incredible bounty still stands with unchallenged primary.

The strike has had major political effects. Up to a year ago there was a tendency for Libya to look toward Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic as the road to Libya's future.

Now, with oil money in sight if not in hand, the Libyans, like the Iraqi and Saudi Arabians, want to keep it all to themselves. No one talks seriously of union with the U.A.R. any more.

The ancient city of Tripoli is busting at its sandy seams. Planes, hotels, offices, restaurants are jammed. So are the streets.

Americans, whose ancestors once waded onto the beaches of this country to stamp out the Barbary pirates, again are swarming ashore, this time to help develop Libya's new-found wealth.

There are now 3,000 Americans in Libya connected in one way or another with oil. Every ship or plane at Tripoli or Benghazi has its quota of new arrivals. It's like Oklahoma or Texas in their heydays. Telephone lines from Tripoli crackle with calls to and from Rome, London, Paris, New York, Kuwait and Adaban.

Because the picture changes so rapidly, accurate up-to-the-minute statistics are unavailable. But at the beginning of summer 18 companies including 11 American had brought in 29 proven wells.

Throughout all Libya, 24 hours a day under searing heat sometimes reaching 125 to 130 degrees in the shade, oilmen are conducting the greatest oil exploration in history.

There will be 50 drilling rigs in Libya at year's end. In Kuwait there were never more than six, Saudi Arabia never more than 12.

To give an idea how seriously the oil companies take all this, it's estimated that it costs $10,000 a day to keep a drilling rig in operation here. Seismic crews, of which there are at least 40, cost $3,000 to $5,000 daily. One American company has budgeted 45 million dollars for Libya operations this year.

The Libyan fields are 1,000 miles closer to the West than the pipelines of the Near East and are free of the Suez bottleneck, a tremendous economic and political advantage for the West.

Oilmen are engaged in a gamble in a desperate race against time. Under Libyan law, the holder of an oil concession must surrender one-fourth of territory after five years, another quarter after three more years. Ten years after the original grant there must be a further reduction.

This forces the oil companies to make some sudden-death decisions.

The pressure is intense with 18 companies already in the field and some 35 others, mostly American, eagerly awaiting a turn at bat.

As might be expected, the rumor marts of Tripoli are rife with talk of bribes and political scandal.

While others are searching, two companies that have already found oil—Esso and Oasis—are planning pipelines to the coast and hope to begin marketing their oil by 1962.

The government, planning ahead for its oil revenues, has taken Iraq as a model. It has established a development board to handle long-range projects which will receive 70 per cent of oil revenues. Several Iraqi refugee technicians are advising the government.

Experts say, however, that it will be at least two years before oil royalties begin to flow in. And it will be another three years before exploration costs are paid offf and the big income pours in.

But Libyans are already looking for income and focusing on raising the rent on Wheelus Field, a U.S. Air Force Base.

"We simply want more money," said a government official who denied Libya wanted the base evacuated.

The oil boom has healed the running feud between the provinces of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and its revenues promise to make the country independent of American and British aid, which has supported the tottering regime since World War II.

The men who do the actual work of bringing in the wells are mostly old hands who work for drilling corporations who in turn are under contract to the oil firms.

One of the biggest drilling combines covers a crew of about 1,000 men under the watchful eye of H. R. Stephens, local manager for the International Drilling Co.

Stephens, a bluff and hearty Texan in his mid-40s, has crews on about a dozen locations anywhere from 200 to 500 miles away. At the moment they are working for three oil companies.

They operate in the midst of an immense sea of sand with dunes up to 500 or 600 feet high. At spots, the sand is 1,000 feet deep. The drills just keep going down through sand until they bite into solid earth or rock. And then oil.

Of Stephens' workers, about 60 are Americans and virtually all of them from Texas, Oklahoma or Louisiana. There are about 90 other non-Libyans including Italians, Lebanese and Maltese.

On location his men work in three eight-hour shifts around the clock.

Off duty, they live and sleep in air-conditioned trailers which, like everything else, have been airlifted in segments to the drilling locations.

Except for the French operations in neighboring Algerian Sahara, this is the first time men of European extraction have attempted to work around the clock through the summer of the Africa desert.

Air-conditioning and the airplane are the keys. The men spend three weeks on the job and then fly to Tripoli for a week off.

SOME AIRPORTS TOO SMALL

Jet Age Is Off With Roar; Many People Not Prepared

EDITOR'S NOTE—Ready or not the jet age has taken off with a roar. And a lot of people aren't ready. While the skies fill with the huge airliners, many cities find their airports too small. Homeowners near airports can't stand the jet noise and the airlines are finding it hard to stir up a market for second-hand prop liners, cheap.

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you have far to fly, go by jet.

That appears to have become the practice of the traveling public, from President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon to the vacationing family next door.

In the little more than a year and a half that jet transportation has been available, the streamlined sky giants have skimmed off the cream of the air travel market.

The jets have virtually driven their piston engine competition off the long-range flight schedules, and they are rapidly stealing away passengers on the shorter routes. Yet with all this success have come severe headaches for operators, manufacturers and airports—everybody, in fact, except the passengers.

The air tourist has discovered the joys of flying from coast to coast in five hours or less, in an airplane free of vibration and relatively noiseless. The eight-hour trip in the old propeller-driven DC7s and Super Constellations by contrast now seems too long and tiring.

This summer all but three of the major airlines operating across the Atlantic have been flying jets. Pan American alone is operating 100 jet flights a week between the United States and Europe, just twice as many as last summer.

The public lined up for jets almost as fast as they appeared in service. The Air Transport Assn. says that in 1958 less than 1 per cent of U.S. scheduled airline passenger miles were flown by jet planes. In the first three months of this year, jets accounted for a whopping 25 per cent.

Pan American was the first U.S. Airline to fly a jet. Its first 707 flew from New York to London Oct. 26, 1958. During the first six months of 1959, the 707s operated at an incredible 90 per cent of capacity.

By the end of 1959, a total of 85 U.S. jets had been delivered to eight airlines. Turboprops such as Britain's Viscount and the U.S. Lockheed Electra and Fairchild F27—planes using their jet engines to drive propellers, thus operating more economically but at lower speeds than the pure jets—totalled 219. By the end of last month, total pure jets in operation by U.S. airlines had reached 169.

Esso Export Corp., which has been keeping tab on jet use around the world, says 638 U.S., British and French pure jet transports have been ordered by 49 airlines in 30 countries. More than 200 are now in service with 28 airlines. In addition, some 800 turboprops have been ordered. The total airline investment in planes to be delivered through 1964 is almost four billion dollars.

At their introduction, pure jets jumped passenger plane speed from the 360 m.p.h. of the DC7 to 590 miles per hour. New models have speeds substantially over 600.

Pure jet operators are proud to point out there has not been a single fatal crash of a U.S. passenger jet on a scheduled flight.

The civil aeronautics board, in a study of jet operations to date, says: "Together with a substantial increase in payload, the added jet speed is an important factor in increasing the productivity potential of the jets to truly revolutionary levels. In turn, this higher productivity makes possible lower unit costs, which in the long run should tend to pull down passenger fares and cargo rates."

Glowing statements like this do little, however, to cheer airline cost accountants, plane manufacturers, airport managers — even the airline crews. While bringing the customer dividends in speed and comfort, the jets have generated no end of problems.

Cost, for example.

Competition of jets has accelerated the rate of obsolescence for piston-engine aircraft, which airlines had not expected they would have to retire so quickly.

The airlines must try to sell DC7s, which came on the market in 1953 at 2½ million dollars each, to buy 707s and Douglas DC8s at over 5 million dollars each.

Orval R. Cook, president of the Aerospace Industries Assn., says that even though they dominate the world jet and propjet market, U.S. manufacturers "because of very high research and development costs, are suffering a loss on every aircraft delivery.

"Unless there are additional sales, the prospect that the break-even point ever can be reached is not promising."

Another drawback is that the jets have voracious appetites at best. Half the weight of a fully fueled jet plane is kerosene.

At 31,000 feet on a standard day a 707 will burn up 70,000 pounds of fuel on a flight from New York to San Francisco.

Ray M. Dunn, TWA vice president for technical services, said jets cost about three times as much as piston-engine transports to buy, operate and maintain, and earn only 3½ times as much.

R. M. Adams, Pan American maintenance manager, said the 707 cost per flight hour was about 50 per cent greater than the original forecasts.

Flight crews complain the jets force them to make many more trips and work much longer than before. Says Ron Brown, president of the Flight Engineers International Assn.: "Some men are away from home as many as 26 days a month."

C. L. Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., says the most critical problem facing jet aviation is the lag in terminal area facilities as air traffic increases.

He says that of 569 airports in the U.S. certified for airline use, only 185 have instrument-landing systems and only two have complete instrument-landing systems in more than one direction.

"The jet aircraft compromised both from an efficiency and safety standpoint by inadequate airports," Sayen says.

"The noise problem is adding public pressure for further compromises."

The larger cities requiring runways from which jets can take off on their longest nonstop flights have either already built or are building runways of the required length.

Smaller cities complain that the airlines, reluctant to disclose jet plans to competitors, are playing a cat-and-mouse game and refusing to indicate the cities to which they plan to provide jet service. This in turn inhibits jet-age airport planning and construction.

E. Thomas Burnard, executive vice president of the Airport Operators Council, says medium and small-size airports are "the next ones that are going to have jet problems."

To serve these smaller airports, the airlines are planning to use smaller jets: such as the 90-passenger French Caravelle and the 72-passenger Douglas 727.

And when that day comes, the jet age will have reached out into every remote corner of this country.

BROADWAY CHATTER

Many Things Up For White Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not the least interesting of the Broadway prospects early in the new season is the impending visit of Irish playwright Brendan Behan, who is due to arrive Sept. 2 with the London Theater Workshop cast which will present his successful comedy, "The Hostage."

Behan, a bulky and tumbled-looking non - conformist, is the one who made a shambles of several performances of his own play in London in the past year by rolling into the theater under a full head of alcohol and heckling the performers and audience. His antics were met with a tolerance that certainly will not be accorded him here, should he try to repeat them.

In fact, producers Leonard S. Field and Caroline Burke Swann would be well advised to guarantee with each ticket sale that the purchasers will be able to see a performance unblemished by any off-stage performance by the author. At $6.90 a seat, an American theater - goer, whether he likes the play or not in the end, isn't going to take kindly to such shenanigans.

Actually, it is difficult to imagine the staff of a Broadway theater letting a Behan demonstration get beyond the first word or two, if, indeed, he were allowed into the house at all while obviously primed for devilment. "The Hostage" is described as a play replete with earthy fun and characters and containing many a sharp barb directed at politics, Irish - British relations and other topical matters. It is Behan's second play. His first, "The Quare Fellow," had a warm critical reception and a fairish run off - Broadway a couple of seasons ago.

The space atop the Winter Garden Theater on Broadway, which has housed several large night clubs in the past, is about to be called the Lanai, a South Pacific - type place as to decor and cuisine.

The backers have all been Broadway producers — Joseph Kipness, Monte Proser and Harry Bloomfield. Kipness at the moment is co - producer of the long-running "La Plume de Ma Tante."

Proser, who co - produced "High Button Shoes" successfully with Kipness several years ago, has been a legend in the entertainment world in much less than a lifetime. He's a fellow who isn't happy unless he is operating a night club or a restaurant. He was the original owner of the long - successful Copacabana and previously had a South Seas-type place here called the Beachcomber, to name only a couple of the many operations he has been connected with in 30 years.

The new place is scheduled to open Nov. 1 to coincide with the premiere of the Winter Garden of the new musical, "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

The World Was The Stake In This One

THE CONSPIRATORS. By Geoffrey Bailey. Harper. $4.95.

One reason why Hitler's armies swept so deadly far and fast into Russia was, some people used to argue, that Stalin had purged the Red Army of its only able and experienced generals, in particular Tukhachevsky. That was taken as a sign of Stalin's stupidity, for shouldn't he have known war was coming, and didn't he sacrifice essential generalship to what was by his own statements to his people a piddling little conspiracy that constituted no real threat to his position?

Not so, says this author, who uses a pseudonym. There was a major plot to oust Stalin, who had only recently sufered two serious setbacks to his headlong climb to dictatorship. Hitler, who was having troubles with his own generals, was only too glad to get Stalin involved with his. While the Army purge along amounted to a horrible slaughter, there was method in the Communist's madness. And it climaxed the between-the - wars struggle for power among Russians in and out of Russia as revealed in blood-curdling detail in this book.

Bailey's story begins around 1920 with a well-to-do Russian's trip from Petrograd to Revel, now Tallinn, on what might have been an indiscreet affair with a married woman. He was Yakushev, and the Cheka, or OGPU, or NKVD, put pressure on him till he doubled his role, serving as White Russian emigre leader but also as Red spy.

It was his "Trust" that betrayed two of the chief anti-Communist agents of the 1920s, Boris Savinko and the Englishman Sydney Reilly, and may have contributed to the disappearance of Maria Schultz after a Moscow bombing attempt.

This Trust worked closely — too closely for the White Russians' good — with Wrangel's ROVS in Paris, which was headed by Generals Kutyepov and Miller. Both were kidnaped right in the middle of the capital, and smuggled out of the country right under the noses of a police force somewhat indifferent, Bailey suggests, to the fate of White Russians — the Quai d'Orsay later came stoutly to their defense. Gen. Nikolai Skoblin, who put the finger on Miller, as Miller revealed in a note he left against the chance of his disappearance, also seems to have told Heydrich of the Red Army conspiracy, though as Bailey confesses, the motivation is baffling.

There are many familiar names in this complex tale of a mammoth underground — Plevitzkaya the glamor actress, Yagoda and Yezhov, Radek the brilliant journalist, Commissar Gamarkin who began the hazardous negotiations with the Nazis, Zinovyev and Kamenev, Dzierzhinski, Kirov, Vyshinsky. This is a remarkable chronicle of diplomatic double-talk and blood - and - thunder melodrama, all played for the highest stakes — the world we live in.

Fontamara: 2nd Version By Italian

FONTAMARA, by Ignazio Silone (Atheneum) — In 1930 Silone, an exile in Switzerland from Mussolini's Italy, wrote this novel of oppressed peasants, driven almost beyond hope by their landlord masters and others. Sick, lonely, and in the shadow of expected death, Silone wrote hurriedly and with the passionate conviction which characterizes all works of art. But he didn't die. He lived to return to his native land after World War II. Contemplating his work of 15 years earlier, he felt that he must do it over. This is the second version. There is the same cast of characters as in the first version, but the accent has shifted from the agonized peasants to the man Berardo, who emerges as a latter - day saint against the background of a people floundering in misery and finding no deliverer.

Ancient Rome Present Italy

THE ORIGINS OF ROME. By Raymond Bloch. Praeger. $6.50. VIEW - HUNTING IN ITALY. By Sidney and Allyn Bloeme. Dresser - Taplinger. $6.50.

Latins, Sabines and Etruscans; Aeneas, Anchises and Lavinia; Romulus and Remus; Tarquin and Lucretia; Horatius and Lars Porsena; the Horatii and the Curiatii — how many names does ancient Rome conjure up to attract the modern traveler!

Romans date their history from B. C. 753 — or 747 — when Romulus marked out the line of the city walls with a plowshare. But it is only Romans left now, as indeed it has been for 20 centuries; and it's natural that they consider their own role in the development of the Italian peninsula, and fill in to their own satisfaction the gaps left by time. Increasingly, new discoveries furnish new information or a check against legend, and they are surveyed here excitingly and authoritatively by Frenchman Bloch.

There was an Aeneas known in 500 B.C.; wolf-priests sanctified the place where the twins were brought up; Etruscans and Roman were rivals. But it seems likely Rome grew more slowly than we have supposed. One illustration shows an earth stratification cut down some 16 feet with 25 different layers betraying as many stages in Rome's history from the Iron age to medieval times. Rome started a bit later than other ancient societies, but developed not in isolation but along with the rest of the peninsula. Bloch considers the prehistoric peoples, the legends and their reliability, language, law and religion, down to about 450 B.C.

Switches From Humor To Field Of Romance

THE HANDS OF CORMAC JOYCE. By Leonard Wibberley. Putnam. $2.95.

On a low island off the County Galway shore, young Jackie Joyce can't help thinking what great strong hands his father has, and how puny and weak are his own. He dips them into Saint Brendan's well to make them bigger; he'd like to help his father more when they row out against the Atlantic swells to their net and lobster pots, and he'd like pretty Eilis Conneeley to admire him.

And right now as this short novel opens, he's going to need to be as mighty as a full - grown man: The nets are empty when they should be full, vast twittering flocks of unknown birds come sweeping in from the west, the swells rise higher, the ocean takes on a fearful glassy look, a terrible storm is brewing. The Coast Guard takes the Conneeleys to the mainland, but the Joyces, father, mother and son, stay on, and so does the small island's only other family, the old Reeces.

Wibberley, best known for his humor, gives us here a fine romantic picture of overpowering wind and tide beating at humans who will not be overpowered, and of a boy and his love for a girl.

Clever Satire On Politics International

PLATYPUS AT LARGE, by Emery Kelen (Dutton): A clever satire on international politics and the people who practice it. Kelen is an old United Nations hand and a veteran of the League of Nations, his caricatures of which gained wide attention. In this book he has produced a modern fable centered on Duckbill Platypus who is taken through the political jungle by wily and cynical Max Fox. The sharp drawings which pull the leg of many world figures make it an amusing work.

Admiral H. G. Rickover

Ex Navy Chief Hits U. S. School System

EDITOR'S NOTE — Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover, the father of the atomic submarine, has long been noted as a leading critic of U.S. educational trends. In the following article, he sums up his viewpoint and philosophy.

By VICE ADM. H. G. RICKOVER

WASHINGTON (AP) — We and we alone among all modern democracies have devalued our educational currency.

We have down-graded the high school diploma to a point where it does not even promise competence in elementary subjects. Witness the many college freshmen who have to take remedial courses in reading, writing and arithmetic. Abroad these courses are mastered in the first eight years of schooling.

Russia's real threat to us will come through their educational and not through their military processes. Military systems and techniques are transitory — they now change every few years. An intelligent and well-educated body of citizens is something you will have forever.

This is where the Russians are smarter than we. They have recognized the full value of a good education and they are hellbent on giving it to as many of their youngsters as they can coax into taking it.

This is about the best comparison I can make: almost half of Russia's children, graduating at 17 after but 10 years of schooling, do as well — by the record — as many of our children after 14 years of schooling, two of them in college.

Neither I nor other critics have ever recommended that we take over the Russian educational system. We do urge that we consider Russian educational achievements as the minimum standard for our own educational objectives.

We warn it would be suicidal if we allowed scholastic levels in our schools permanently to sink below this minimum standard. We flatly reject the claim that since ours is mass education it must, therefore, be mediocre, or that democratic education can never be as good as education in an authoritarian state.

What I have said about Russia applies even more so to the Western European nations.

Abroad, a liberal education comparing favorably with what Americans acquire in 16 years of school and college takes from 12 to 13 years. Europeans are by that much ahead of Americans when they begin to study for a "learned" profession, such as medicine or law.

I find it personally humiliating that most European universities demand a bachelor of arts degree of Americans wishing to matriculate, while they admit all Europeans with a "maturity" certificate which is obtained at the end of the higher secondary school. This school achieves these superior results through better teaching, better curriculum, much tougher classroom work and homework, and early separating of the talented child from the average.

We seem bemused by the claims of the educationists that it is "undemocratic" for other Western nations to separate their children after elementary school, and to put them into different types of secondary schools according to their mental abilities and vocational aims.

We do not say it is "undemocratic" that nurses go to nursing school and doctors to medical school, and that each obtains a different diploma. Nor do we send enlisted personnel to the same schools as officers.

Why do we get angry at Europeans for weeding out the dullards from the talented children and sending them to separate secondary schools? What good would it do the dullars to be admitted to a school where they would just sit around and understand nothing? What does it benefit them to be given diplomas which stand for nothing but a given number of hours spent sitting at a school desk?

What is democratic about penalizing God-given talent by letting it go to waste so average children won't feel a sense of inferiority?

It may be beguiling in theory to think of all our children going to school together. But will it really serve their best interests to send them to schools where the child with an IQ of 70 sits beside one with an IQ of 170, and where the morally weak child freely associates with the child who has been carefully raised to distinguish right from wrong and to distinguish right from wrong and to conduct himself responsibly?

This makes no sense to me. Obviously, no child will receive an education best suited to his abilities and vocational aims in such a school; nor will the bright child develop admiration and respect for the dullard, or the potential young delinquent profit from associating with well-brought-up children.

It is far more likely that the dullard will be frustrated, the bright child bored, the average child not challenged mentally, the good child corrupted by the young ne'er-do-well, and everyone's manners and mores down graded to a dead level of mediocrity.

Do we want the services of doctors, lawyers, engineers and other professionals? Well, we won't get them unless we provide a proper schooling for those of our children who are willing and able to become professionals.

To say this is advocating that only an "elite" shall be well educated while the rest of our children receive an inferior education, making them forever hewers of wood and carriers of water, is highly irresponsible demagoguery.

To me there is nothing more important than to change our educational system in such a manner that it will provide the best possible education for every child: slow, average and talented.

At present, few get a really good public education.

Improving our schools will be no easy matter. But the dollars you spend on education are the cheapest dollars you can spend, even if some of them are wasted. They are by far the cheapest dollars, and they give the greatest return.

There is much evidence, however, that the education dollars buys less really good schooling in the United States than in any other country in the world. I am sure we could make great improvements simply by spending more wisely and efficiently the funds we now have. But money alone won't do it. It will also require much thought and effort.

As an engineer would say the first thing we must do is set up specifications: what we want our high school graduates to know when they finish at the age of 18. The minute you do that, you put courses in etiquette and baton twirling in their proper place; you begin to see that perhaps you ought not to pay an athletic coach a higher salary than a teacher of trigonometry.

We allow ourselves to be frightened by arguments that setting national standards would mean federal tyranny over education. In view of our professed fear of the federal government, we could not at the present time set up compulsory national standards.

But there is nothing in our form of government to prevent Congress from setting up some sort of commission or council and giving it the task of working out different sets of educational goals for our public schools.

The schools could disregard them if they so wished, and if the parents in the community did not force them to pay attention. But, by having a national set of standards, everyone could judge where the local school stood.

We could get a statement of policy: "This is what we think is a good education." Such a statement would give the parents a yardstick by which to measure what their children should learn and have learned in school.

Isn't the honest labeling of educational diplomas as important as the honest labeling of drugs? We regulate what goes into people's mouths, why can't we recommend what goes into their heads?

This would give an enormous advantage to parents who are really interested in having their children "educated" in contrast to having them merely "trained."

The distinction between education and training is not thoroughly understood. When you teach a boy how to operate a lathe you are training him, you are not educating him. Training does not develop the mind. Education is a process by which the mind is developed.

It is in education—that is, in transmitting the fundamentals of knowledge, in developing the ability to think—that we fall down. Too much of our so-called education is mere training in various kinds of know-how.

In the United States it is quite possible that, left to his own devices, a potentially talented child may squander his best learning years on easy know-how courses which require no homework but which earn him the same credit toward a high school diploma as academic subjects. But in Russia, since all children tackle academic subjects, anyone who shows promise in one or another area of knowledge will be discovered early.

To allow a child to choose typewriting instead of physics, or machine shop instead of history or a foreign language, is to let a minor make a decision which will effect the whole course of his future life, a decision he is too young to make intelligently.

Frills, know-how subjects and snap courses may seem agreeable to our children today, but they shortchange the children for the future. They will have to live in a world where other people are better educated than they. The world outside the United States is being transformed so rapidly and so completely that we cannot afford to stand still.

In their enthusiasm for gigantic schools and democratic togetherness, American educationists overlook the difficulty of conducting under the same roof such varied enterprises as life adjustment training, leisure-time activities, vocational training and serious basic education—especially when the choice lies with the child as to which course he will take.

How can we expect children to choose higher mathematics when their classmates are having fun learning how to play canasta, cook or find a mate? Why should an eighth grader tackle a hard subject when next door the kids are happily whizzing through a course in "home and family living?" Why should he take tough examinations, when others get promoted on the basis of true-false tests posing such "difficult" problems as "Should boys use deodorants?" or "Can one use cake soap for shampooing?"

In other modern democracies, vocational subjects are to some slight extent taught in the schools attended by children who are not academically talented, but they are never considered a substitute for general education. In this country we stop teaching basic subjects to slow learners too soon, we shift them too early from education into training.

What has happened in America is that many parents have abdicated their responsibilities and have let the schools assume them. The progressive educationists have been more than willing to take over these responsibilities. In fact, some of them think the school should be responsible for the "whole child." They say they will produce a "well-rounded" child.

LIBYAN OIL BOOM

Black Gold Changes Small African Nation's Economy

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Everywhere you turn in spacious Libya these days there's an oilman at your elbow. Or some salesman in pursuit of an oilman's money.

Many—if not most—of them are Americans.

This vast, sandy country, once little more than a blank on the map of North Africa, is suddenly bursting at the seams with oil.

The boom is on, the sky's the limit and no one knows where it will all stop.

Literally thousands of oilmen, experts, specialists and technicians are pouring into Libya to explore or exploit petroleum. The Americans alone will bring 100 million dollars with them this year to spend in this once penniless nation.

It happened virtually overnight.

No one even began looking for oil in Libya until five years ago, when firms were spurred by Libya's 1955 petroleum law. The first oil was found only two years ago, a relatively small producer at Atshan, just west of the frontier with French Sahara.

Then, about a year ago, Standard Oil of New Jersey (Esso) brought in the first major well on the parched desert in western Cyrenaica about 150 miles from the coast. As if this were a signal, other companies, most of them American, began striking oil in rapid succession.

Tripoli and Libya will never be the same again.

Oilmen, still groping to evaluate the scope of their sudden discoveries believe their new underground pools of high-grade petroleum rival the fabulous strikes in the Middle East made three decades ago. Many rate Libya ahead of Iraq and Iran, perhaps on a par with Saudi Arabi in portential reserves.

Only phenomenal Kuwait with its incredible bounty still stands with unchallenged primacy.

The strike has had major political effects. Up to a year ago there was a tendency for Libya to look toward Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic as the road to Libya's future.

Now, with oil money in sight if not in hand, the Libyans, like the Iraqi and Saudi Arabians, want to keep it all to themselves. No one talks seriously of union with the U.A.R. any more.

The ancient city of Tripoli is busting at its sandy seams. Planes, hotels, offices, restaurants are jammed. So are the streets.

Americans, whose ancestors once waded onto the beaches of this country to stamp out the Barbary pirates, again are swarming ashore, this time to help develop Libya's new-found wealth.

There are now 3,000 Americans in Libya connected in one way or another with oil. Every ship or plane at Tripoli or Benghazi has its quota of new arrivals. It's like Oklahoma or Texas in their heydays. Telephone lines from Tripoli crackle with calls to and from Rome, London, Paris, New York, Kuwait and Adaban.

Because the picture changes so rapidly, accurate up-to-the-minute statistics are unavailable. But at the beginning of summer 18 companies including 11 American had brought in 29 proven wells.

Throughout all Libya, 24 hours a day under searing heat sometimes reaching 125 to 130 degrees in the shade, oilmen are conducting the greatest oil exploration in history.

There will be 50 drilling rigs in Libya at year's end. In Kuwait there were never more than six, Saudi Arabia never more than 12.

To give an idea how seriously the oil companies take all this, it's estimated that it costs $10,000 a day to keep a drilling rig in operation here. Seismic crews, of which there are at least 40, cost $3,000 to $5,000 daily. One American company has budgeted 45 million dollars for Libya operations this year.

The Libyan fields are 1,000 miles closer to the West than the pipelines of the Near East and are free of the Suez bottleneck, a tremendous economic and political advantage for the West.

Oilmen are engaged in a gamble in a desperate race against time. Under Libyan law, the holder of an oil concession must surrender one-fourth of territory after five years, another quarter after three more years. Ten years after the original grant there must be a further reduction.

This forces the oil companies to make some sudden-death decisions.

The pressure is intense with 18 companies already in the field and some 35 others, mostly American, eagerly awaiting a turn at bat.

As might be expected, the rumor marts of Tripoli are rife with talk of bribes and political scandal.

While others are searching, two companies that have already found oil—Esso and Oasis—are planning pipelines to the coast and hope to begin marketing their oil by 1962.

The government, planning ahead for its oil revenues, has taken Iraq as a model. It has established a development board to handle long-range projects which will receive 70 per cent of oil revenues. Several Iraqi refugee technicians are advising the government.

Experts say, however, that it will be at least two years before oil royalties begin to flow in. And it will be another three years before exploration costs are paid off and the big income pours in.

But Libyans are already looking for income and focusing on raising the rent on Wheelus Field, a U.S. Air Force Base.

"We simply want more money," said a government official who denied Libya wanted the base evacuated.

The oil boom has healed the running feud between the provinces of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and its revenues promise to make the country independent of American and British aid, which has supported the feeble regime since World War II.

The men who do the actual work of bringing in the wells are mostly old hands who work for drilling corporations who in turn are under contract to the oil firms.

One of the biggest drilling combines covers a crew of about 1,000 men under the watchful eye of H. R. Stephens, local manager for the International Drilling Co.

Stephens, a bluff and hearty Texan in his mid-40s, has crews on about a dozen locations anywhere from 200 to 500 miles away. At the moment they are working for three oil companies.

They operate in the midst of an immense sea of sand with dunes up to 500 or 600 feet high. At spots, the sand is 1,000 feet deep. The drills just keep going down through sand until they bite into solid earth or rock. And then oil.

Of Stephens' workers, about 60 are Americans and virtually all of them from Texas, Oklahoma or Louisiana. There are about 90 other non-Libyans including Italians, Lebanese and Maltese.

On location his men work in three eight-hour shifts around the clock.

Off duty, they live and sleep in air-conditioned trailers which, like everything else, have been airlifted in segments to the drilling locations.

Except for the French operations in neighboring Algerian Sahara, this is the first time men of European extraction have attempted to work around the clock through the summer of the Africa desert.

Air-conditioning and the airplane are the keys. The men spend three weeks on the job and then fly to Tripoli for a week off.

THEORIES ADVANCED

Scholars Of Religion Eye 'Space Theology'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious scholars today are pondering a new subject—"space theology."

Clerics of various denominations lately have been theorizing about spiritual relationships to possible human beings on far-off worlds.

Some church groups even have foreseen the eventual prospect of sending missionaries to the strangers in the stratosphere.

Now comes a Roman Catholic prelate to offer detailed speculation on just what the nature of the nonearthlings might be.

Father Daniel C. Raible of Brunnerdale Seminary, Canton, Ohio, says science indicates there could be billions of human races inhabiting other planets of the universe.

QUESTION

But what are they like? assuming they are human, he said, it follows that they have soul and body.

"But that doesn't settle the matter," he writes in the current Jesuit weekly 'America.'

"Theologians commonly hold that it would have been possible for God to create mankind in one of four different conditions."

He cites these four possible types of other-worldly humans that may exist:

1. Those in a "state of pure nature." They would have all the qualities of a rational animal, and also the weaknesses and woes of flesh, but would lack divine revelation or supernatural aids such as those given earth men.

Their destiny would lie in "the natural law of God," similar to that of an infant who lies without grace or awareness of God.

2. Those in a condition of "integral nature." They would have attributes of a rational animal, plus preternatural gifts—such as those given angels. They might have "infused knowledge" — that is, be born with great knowledge, instead of having to struggle for it. They might be free of sickness, accident and discord, and pass into eternity without death.

"They would be far ahead of us in exploration of the universe."

3. Those in a "supernatural state." Although material beings, they also would have privileges partaking of divinity. They would have special insights and aids for their exalted destiny — one in which they would be capable of "quasi-divine acts," and know God as he knows himself. However, they could lose their gifts by infidelity to God.

INNOCENCE

4. Those in a "state of innocence." This is a limited combination of the supernatural and intregal-nature conditions, identical to that in which Adam and Eve lived before their rebellion—free of disease, ignorance and death. Races staying in this category would have "civilizations and cultures that far outstrip our own."

However, Father Raible says, if those either in the state of innocence or supernature fall — as Adam and Eve did—they could be left in a fallen state, forever deprived of their supernatural end, or God out of mercy could redeem them.

He declares that for this purpose Christ has become a member of other races as well as our own, Father Raible said, "conceivably we may learn in heaven that there has been not one incarnation of God's son but many."

But the atonement would not need to "be carried out exactly as ours was," Father Raible said. "Since any mere sigh, a tear, a breath—would, be more than sufficient to atone for all the sins of any possible race, it would not at all be necessary for him to undergo the privations, poverty, rejection, suffering and death by Crucifixion that Christ endured for us."

On the other hand, Father Raible said, the redemption could be by still other means.

God could simply "forgive the transgression and re-elevate the race to its previous dignity," without demanding any atonement at all, or He could demand only "partial satisfaction for the offense," perhaps by one or more representatives of the race.

"Were He, however, to demand a satisfaction commensurate with the offense, (as was done with earth man) it would have been necessary for God himself to become man and atone for the sin of the race. Sin, an offense against an infinite being cannot be fully atoned except by an infinite atoner."

'Year Of Laity' Voted By Church Group In Cuba

The Cuba Methodist Conference has voted that the coming 12 months will be ,a "Year of the Laity," and has set goals in the fields of evengelism, Christian education and lay service in the church.

Meeting in Havana, the conference heard reports indicating that the churches have pledged more than the $100,000 (Cuban), which had been sought to launch the "forward movement" voted at the 1959 conference.

GOALS

During the "Year of the Laity," Cuban Methodists will be asked to reach these goals: Fifty new local (lay) preachers, 500 laymen who will pledge to try to win five persons each to church membership, 500 persons who will try to take 10 children to Sunday school regularly.

A new program of lay volunteer service was authorized, in which 50 layment will be sought to give two years of service to the church in needy areas of Cuba. These workers will receive only maintenance (food, lodging, etc.) as pay. They will be supported from "forward movement" funds and will be trained in short courses.

Week Revival Is Scheduled At Parkview

Dr. James W. Taylor, former Air Force chaplain, will lead the Parkview Baptist Church in a week of revival services beginning Monday evening and continuing through Sunday, August 28. Weekday services are scheduled for 7 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. daily.

Dr. Taylor is pastor of the Highland Baptist Church, Shreveport, where he has served for nearly four years. Prior to his present pastorate he was, for eight years, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Grand Prairie, Texas. During World War II, Dr. Taylor spent three years on active duty as an Air Force chaplain.

This will mark the first revival in the new Parkview auditorium, which was completed last November. The Parkview church is located at 1001 Forsythe Avenue in Monroe.

THEORIES ADVANCED

Scholars Of Religion Eye 'Space Theology'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious scholars today are pondering a new subject—"space theology."

Clerics of various denominations lately have been theorizing about spiritual relationships to possible human beings on far-off worlds.

Some church groups even have foreseen the eventual prospect of sending missionaries to the strangers in the stratosphere.

Now comes a Roman Catholic prelate to offer detailed speculation on just what the nature of the nonearthlings might be.

Father Daniel C. Raible of Brunnerdale Seminary, Canton, Ohio, says science indicates there could be billions of human races inhabiting other planets of the universe.

QUESTION

But what are they like? assuming they are human, he said, it follows that they have soul and body.

"But that doesn't settle the matter," he writes in the current Jesuit weekly 'America.'

"Theologians commonly hold that it would have been possible for God to create mankind in one of four different conditions."

He cites these four possible types of other-worldly humans that may exist:

1. Those in a "state of pure nature." They would have all the qualities of a rational animal, and also the weaknesses and woes of flesh, but would lack divine revelation or supernatural aids such as those given earth men.

Their destiny would lie in "the natural law of God," similar to that of an infant who lies without grace or awareness of God.

2. Those in a condition of "integral nature." They would have attributes of a rational animal, plus preternatural gifts—such as those given angels. They might have "infused knowledge" — that is, be born with great knowledge, instead of having to struggle for it. They might be free of sickness, accident and discord, and pass into eternity without death.

"They would be far ahead of us in exploration of the universe."

3. Those in a "supernatural state." Although material beings, they also would have privileges partaking of divinity. They would have special insights and aids for their exalted destiny — one in which they would be capable of "quasi-divine acts," and know God as he knows himself. However, they could lose their gifts by infidelity to God.

INNOCENCE

4. Those in a "state of innocence." This is a limited combination of the supernatural and integral-nature conditions, identical to that in which Adam and Eve lived before their rebellion—free of disease, ignorance and death. Races staying in this category would have "civilizations and cultures that far outstrip our own."

However, Father Raible says, if those either in the state of innocence or supernature fall — as Adam and Eve did—they could be left in a fallen state, forever denied their supernatural end, or God out of mercy could redeem them.

It is possible that for this purpose Christ has become a member of other races as well as our own, Father Raible said. "conceivably we may learn in heaven that there has been not one incarnation of God's son but many."

But the atonement would not need to "be carried out exactly as ours was," Father Rabile said.

"Since any free act of a God-man—a mere sigh, a tear, a breath—would, as an act of infinite worth, be more than sufficient to atone for all the sins of any possible race, it would not at all be necessary for him to undergo the privations, poverty, rejection, suffering and death by Crucifixion that Christ endured for us."

On the other hand, Father Raible said, the redemption could be by still other means.

God could simply "forgive the transgression and re-elevate the race to its previous dignity," without demanding any atonement at all, or he could demand only "partial satisfaction for the offense," perhaps by one or more representatives of the race.

"Were He, however, to demand a satisfaction commensurate with the offense, (as was done with earth man) it would have been necessary for God himself to become man and atone for the sin of the race. Sin, an offense against an infinite being cannot be fully atoned except by an infinite atoner."

'Year Of Laity' Voted By Church Group In Cuba

The Cuba Methodist Conference has voted that the coming 12 months will be a "Year of the Laity," and has set goals in the fields of evengelism, Christian education and lay service in the church.

Meeting in Havana, the conference heard reports indicating that the churches have pledged more than the $100,000 (Cuban), which had been sought to launch the "forward movement" voted at the 1959 conference.

GOALS

During the "Year of the Laity," Cuban Methodists will be asked to reach these goals: Fifty new local (lay) preachers, 500 laymen who will pledge to try to win five persons each to church membership, 500 persons who will try to take 10 children to Sunday school regularly.

A new program of lay volunteer service was authorized, in which 50 layment will be sought to give two years of service to the church in needy areas of Cuba. These workers will receive only maintenance (food, lodging, etc.) as pay. They will be supported from "forward movement" funds and will be trained in short courses.

Indian Sisters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sisters of Mercy of the Union, a Roman Catholic order of nuns that runs 10 colleges in this country, is planning a mission program to bring native sisters to this country for college training from southwestern India. It is the first such program of its kind.

Helps Victims

SAVANNA, Okla. (AP) — Seniors at Savanna High School used funds saved for their annual trip to assist victims of a tornado that hit Wilburton, Okla.

Week Revival Is Scheduled At Parkview

Dr. James W. Taylor, former Air Force chaplain, will lead the Parkview Baptist Church in a week of revival services beginning Monday evening and continuing through Sunday, August 28. Weekday services are scheduled for 7 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. daily.

Dr. Taylor is pastor of the Highland Baptist Church, Shreveport, where he has served for nearly four years. Prior to his present pastorate he was, for eight years, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Grand Prairie, Texas. During World War II, Dr. Taylor spent three years on active duty as an Air Force chaplain.

This will mark the first revival in the new Parkview auditorium, which was completed last November. The Parkview church is located at 1001 Forsythe Avenue in Monroe.

Religion News Briefs From Around Globe

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — A minister and newspaper editor have launched a "Prayer for the Next President" movement. The Rev. Robert W. Young, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church here and Editor Andrew Bernhard, of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, called for concentrated private prayer between now and election day that "the man of God's choosing may occupy the White House."

LESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Methodist Church said its 1960 "Race Relations Day" offering totaled $396,543, about $5,000 less than last year.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Southern Province of the Society of Jesus has announced purchase of a 640-acre tract in Horizon City, a new city being planned just east of El Paso, Tex. The Jesuits are considering establishing a new university there to serve the southwest.

BERLIN, Germany (AP) — Member denominations of the World Council of Churches have contributed more than $734,600 to aid victims of 17 emergency situations in the last year and a half, it was reported at a conference here. The largest amount, $291,872, went to earthquake-stricken Chile.

Church Growth Tempo Is Rapid

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AP) — An official of the National Association of Evangelicals reports that the number of Evangelical Protestants in Colombia increased from 16,000 to 80,000 since 1956, a 400 per cent increase.

American Workers' Income At New High As Economy Whirls

NEW YORK (AP) — Cross - currents - swirled in the economic stream this week.

There were some good developments and some not so good.

American workers are making more money than ever before. The government reported that personal income of individuals climbed in July to a record annual rate of 407 billion dollars.

This was about one billion dollars above June. A federal pay increase and an upturn in construction were mainly responsible. Manufacturing payrolls and farm income declined.

Industrial production maintained a steady pace in July after dipping in June. The Federal Reserve Board's index of output by mines, factories and utilities stood at 109 per cent of the 1957 average.

SLUMP

Home building has slumped and little or no improvement is expected this month. In July the starts of private homes dropped to an annual rate of 1,173,000 units, about 10 per cent below the June rate.

Soft spots in the economy brought on widely scattered layoffs. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad put 10 per cent of its clerical forces on indefinite furloughs. Union Pacific Railroad laid off 1,200 workers. Hotpoint division of General Electric Co. in Chicago will drop 100 employes in the next two weeks. Lone Star Steel Co. of Texas plans to lay off between 1,500 and 2,000 beginning Aug. 26.

On the other hand, Republic Steel Corp. recalled 350 workers to reopen its pipe mill at Gadsden, Ala.

Steel production was scheduled to inch up to 55.8 per cent of capacity from last week's 53.5 but a strike at U.S. Steel Corp. threatened to put a crimp in the situation.

WALKOUT

A walkout by U.S. Steel's railroad employes caused closing of five mills in the Pittsburgh area, idling thousands of other workers. These plants account for about seven per cent of the industry's total production.

There was no indication when the industry might turn the corner with a spurt in the operating rate. Orders for September still are weak.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange declined to 13,702,603 shares from 14,699,940 last week.

Bond sales totaled $23,894,000 par value on the stock exchange compared with $24,655,000 last week and $24,811,000 a year ago.

AUTOS LOW

Automobile output slumped to its lowest level of the year—approximately 48,000 passenger cars. But that wasn't unexpected because the makers are deep in the business of changing over to 1961 model production.

Dealers sold 156,050 new U.S. made cars in the first 10 days of August. This wasn't as good as expected but was 13 per cent above the corresponding June period and one-half of one per cent higher than a year ago.

The explosive management situation at Chrysler Corp. erupted twice during the week. Chrysler filed a suit against Detroit businessman Ben Stone in connection with his dealings with the corporation and its former president, Williams C. Newberg. Newberg resigned earlier and agreed to turn over to Chrysler $450,000 in profits from his interest in firms selling supplies to Chrysler.

Chrysler hired a New York law firm headed by Thomas E. Dewey to determine the adequacy of Chrysler's own investigation of conflict of interests among its executives.

FASHIONS

Women became more interested in the fall fashions and helped boost retail trade to a slight gain over a year ago.

Housewives finally got some good news about food prices. Wholesale food prices dipped sharply from the year's highest level.

Three more federal reserve banks—Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis—were authorized to cut their discount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent. Of the 12 reserve banks, only those at Boston, Dallas and San Francisco had yet to reduce the rate of interest they charge borrowing member banks.

FTC Warning On 'Guarantee' Abuses Issued

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) warned U.S. businessmen Saturday to halt phony "guarantee" abuses or face prosecution.

It said in a statement that companies must explain what is guaranteed and who is standing behind a product even on a 10-second radio or television commercial or a one-inch newspaper ad.

FTC officials rejected pleas of advertisers who claimed that it was not possible to spell out details of a guarantee on such a brief broadcast or in a short ad.

"The principal fault of advertising of guarantees has been the reluctance of advertisers to state precisely what the guarantee covers," said FTC Chairman Earl W. Kintner.

WALL STREET REPORT

Market Substantially Down As Trading Goes Into Slump

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market needed an advance in the last session to lift it on the plus side for the week.

The Friday advance on averages was the tenth in the last 12 sessions, and also marked the twelfth consecutive session that more stocks advanced than declined.

The market in general was rather hesitant this week with trading slowing down substantially from the previous week. Maket technicians note, however, that it is only natural for the list to take its time after two weeks of almost uninterrupted advance.

Most of the trading community is pleased that the market has been able to make such progress in the face of the economic and foreign news background.

STATUS

It is this unchanged status of the news background that makes most of the market experts hesitant to forecast a sharp and sustained rise at this juncture.

The general consensus on Wall Street is for the stock market to move out of its summer doldrums and trend upward, but not until domestic business activities pick up.

There were not many signs of this happening this week. Steel production improved slightly but Iron Age magazine said the timetable for a significant upturn in output has been set back again because new steel orders at some mills are lower than they were just two weeks ago. Nevertheless, the magazine said, an upturn in mill business still is on the way.

STRIKE

Giant U.S. Steel Corp. was hit by a strike of its Union Railroad subsidiary which already has idled about 30,000 steel workers and prospects for an early settlement appear slim.

Railroad shares advanced in 11 out of the last 12 sessions. Union Pacific, however, blotted this performance with the announcement that it has reduced its work force by approximately 1,200 workers because of lower revenues and earnings.

Utilities edged up in 10 of the past 11 sessions to their best level on average since June 7, 1930.

The announcement by the government of record gross national product in the second quarter, steady industrial production in July and record personal income in July failed to stimulate investor interest.

Disclosure of a rise in short interest on the "big board" to the highest level since mid - May helped improve sentiment slightly on Friday. A large short interest represents additional buying which must be done eventually.

SALES SLIP

Sales this week slipped to 13,702,603 shares, or a daily average of 2,740,520 shares, from 14,699,940, or an average of 2,939,988 shares per day the week before.

American Motors, which announced new styling changes and forecast a 26 per cent jump in sales of its 1961 models, was the sales leader with volume of 328,700 shares. It closed up 1⅞ at 23½.

Avco, helped by a good earnings report, was runner-up with sales of 300,000 shares, and finished up 15¼ to 16⅞. General Motors, Lockheed and Glen Alden rounded out the top five.

The Dow Jones averages at the close Friday showed 30 industrials up 3.09 points on the week to 629.27; 20 rails up 1.38 to 139.73, 15 utilities up 1.48 to 95.53, the best since 96.03 on June 7, 1930; and 65 stocks up 1.17 to 208.95.

Policy Shifts Are Tried By Oil Company

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. this week took another step in its program to take day-to-day operations problems out of the hair of its policy makers and planners.

A marketing department responsible for 36,000 service stations in the United States is being transferred from Gulf's Pittsburgh, Pa., haedquarters to Houston.

SIMILAR

Similar transfers by production and manufacturing (refining) departments were made last year.

This means the bulk of Gulf's domestic operations now radiates out of Houston. Foreign operations are supervised from area offices at London, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Caracas, Venezuela.

Pittsburgh executives map policy and objectives, provide the necessary money and tools, and give grass-roots personnel sufficient authority to get the job done.

Coordination is handled by a Pittsburgh staff of six administrative vice presidents.

Should a Pittsburgh policy fail to apply on the local level, an operating man, in an emergency, can make his own immediate decision and advise Pittsburgh later.

The broad reorganization by Gulf got its start several years ago when the board of directors instructed that operating management be delegated authority at the level the operation is being performed.

Since then, President William K. Whiteford, from time to time, has described the program with these comments:

ADVICE

"We want to advise our men without making them so afraid of mistakes they will be afraid of decisions."

"Our idea of organization is not that of a corset to confine the activities of our people. . .

"It is a guide to assure them they have at all times the necessary tools, responsibility and authority to do at their level of management what they think is in the best interest of the company."

"We're giving the man with the power to say 'Yes' or 'No' the authority to say it directly to the man who can carry it out."

Objectives of the program are numerous — efficiency, flexibility, growth, training of future executives.

Selection of Houston for domestic marketing headquarters was interpreted by some as indication Gulf intends eventually to have retail outlets in all 50 states.

Gulf currently has outlets in 38 states. Missing areas include 10 western states, Hawaii and Alaska. Steps already have been taken to boost the outlet area to 41 states.

REVIEW GIVEN

Small Car Idea Was Tried 30 Years Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE — Companies have been trying to interest the public in smaller cars off and on for 30 years. Here is a review of some of the earlier attempts.

By BEN PHLEGAR
Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The slogan read "Nearly a ton less to start, stop, park and pay for" and the literature also advised that this car is "big enough, but not too big."

This sounds mighty familiar if you've followed the very recent trend to smaller automobiles. But those slogans are 30 years old. They came with America's first really small car, the American Austin.

At the peak of the boom year of 1929 the American Austin Car Co. was incorporated as a subsidiary of the Austin Co. of England to build an Americanized version of the English Austin 7.

The Automotive Daily News, commenting on the project in September 1929, said it would be interesting to see if car buyers of the United States would greet a smaller car with enthusiasm.

"If so," the editorial noted, "a whole new concept in auto sales may develop."

COMMENTS

Many similar comments were made only one year ago when the compact cars of the Big Three automakers were announced.

The first American Austin was built in June 1930, at Butler, Pa., northeast of Pittsburgh. It was 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any other American car then being produced. Complete with a 14-horsepower engine, it cost $445 at the factory.

With the depression at hand, claims of 50 miles to the gallon and 40,000 miles on a set of tires sounded good. Orders at first exceeded production facilities. Official registration figures showed 4,354 of the tiny cars were sold in the first six months.

Many were snapped up for advertising promotions. Will Rogers used them for a series of escapades in King Arthur's Court in the movie "A Connecticut Yankee," a hit of 1931.

But the depression deepened. The small cars began to be ridiculed and production halted in 1934 after a total run of about 15,000. The company lost money.

The Austin was a significant milepost because it represented for almost the first time a serious attempt to price a car below a Ford.

AUSTIN

Just as the Austin ran into the depression, the next full-scale attempt to build and market a midget car in this country was announced on the verge of another world-shaking event, World War II.

The Crosley was put into mass production. By then it had grown in length and weight from the original model and the price was boosted from $350 to $750.

The Crosley's four-cylinder engine was produced by a new process using sheet steel rather than castings. Thin sheet steel stampings were brazed into a single piece by melting pure copper into all the joints during a one-hour oven-baking period.

In the car-short days of post-World War II, the Crosley gained considerable support and in its peak year of 1948 it sold 25,400 cars. This total was cut by more than half the next year and in 1952 Crosley went out of the auto business.

Kaiser-Frazer, another postwar automotive newcomer, turned to smaller cars in 1950 in an effort to find the key to success. A national contest offered $100,000 in prizes for naming the new car and the winning entry was Henry J., which just happened to be the first name and initial of Kaiser.

SMALLER

The Henry J., while a smaller car, never was in the midget class of the Austin and Crosley. It was built on a 100-inch wheelbase, the same as currently used on the Rambler American, and was seven inches longer over-all than today's compact Studebaker Lark. The $171 price difference between the Henry J and a Chevrolet is similar to the difference between today's standard and compact cars.

A research study by Kaiser-Frazer in October 1951 said the Henry J was drawing buyers from the used car markets, a trend very similar to what has happened with the present compact cars.

Grain Futures Rather Feeble

CHICAGO (AP)—Influences in grain futures trade were rather feeble this week and prices shifted generally within small ranges, mostly minor fractions.

For the week, net changes amounted to a cent or less except for September soybeans. Rye was the only loser.

Until Friday, the market churned against short covering and liquidation with support coming out on the setbacks and even small bulges attracting the profit takers.

American Workers' Income At New High As Economy Whirls

NEW YORK (AP) — Cross - currents - swirled in the economic stream this week.

There were some good developments and some not so good.

American workers are making more money than ever before. The government reported that personal income of individuals climbed in July to a record annual rate of 407 billion dollars. This was about one billion dollars above June. A federal pay increase and an upturn in construction were mainly responsible. Manufacturing payrolls and farm income declined.

Industrial production maintained a steady pace in July after dipping in June. The Federal Reserve Board's index of output by mines, factories and utilities stood at 109 per cent of the 1957 average.

SLUMP

Home building has slumped and little or no improvement is expected this month. In July the starts of private homes dropped to an annual rate of 1,173,000 units, about 10 per cent below the June rate.

Soft spots in the economy brought on widely scattered layoffs. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad put 10 per cent of its clerical forces on indefinite furloughs. Union Pacific Railroad laid off 1,200 workers. Hotpoint division of General Electric Co. in Chicago will drop 100 employes in the next two weeks. Lone Star Steel Co. of Texas plans to lay off between 1,500 and 2,000 beginning Aug. 26.

On the other hand, Republic Steel Corp. recalled 350 workers to reopen its pipe mill at Gadsden, Ala.

Steel production was scheduled to inch up to 55.8 per cent of capacity from last week's 53.5 but a strike at U.S. Steel Corp. threatened to put a crimp in the situation.

WALKOUT

A walkout by U.S. Steel's railroad employes caused closing of five mills in the Pittsburgh area, idling thousands of other workers. These plants account for about seven per cent of the industry's total production.

There was no indication when the industry might turn the corner with a spurt in the operating rate. Orders for September still are weak.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange declined to 13,702,603 shares from 14,699,940 last week.

Bond sales totaled $23,894,000 par value on the stock exchange compared with $24,655,000 last week and $24,811,000 a year ago.

AUTOS LOW

Automobile output slumped to its lowest level of the year—approximately 48,000 passenger cars. But that wasn't unexpected because the makers are deep in the business of changing over to 1961 model production.

Dealers sold 156,050 new U.S. made cars in the first 10 days of August. This wasn't as good as expected but was 13 per cent above the corresponding June period and one-half of one per cent higher than a year ago.

The explosive management situation at Chrysler Corp. erupted twice during the week. Chrysler filed a suit against Detroit businessman Ben Stone in connection with his dealings with the corporation and its former president, Williams C. Newberg. Newberg resigned earlier and agreed to turn over to Chrysler $450,000 in profits from his interest in firms selling supplies to Chrysler.

Chrysler hired a New York law firm headed by Thomas E. Dewey to determine the adequacy of Chrysler's own investigation of conflict of interests among its executives.

FASHIONS

Women became more interested in the fall fashions and helped boost retail trade to a slight gain over a year ago.

Housewives finally got some good news about food prices. Wholesale food prices dipped sharply from the year's highest level.

Three more federal reserve banks—Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis—were authorized to cut their discount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent. Of the 12 reserve banks, only those at Boston, Dallas and San Francisco had yet to reduce the rate of interest they charge borrowing member banks.

FTC Warning On 'Guarantee' Abuses Issued

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) warned U.S. businessmen Saturday to halt phony "guarantee" abuses or face prosecution.

It said in a statement that companies must explain what is guaranteed and who is standing behind a product even on a 10-second radio or television commercial or a one-inch newspaper ad.

FTC officials rejected pleas of advertisers who claimed that it was not possible to spell out details of a guarantee on such a brief broadcast or in a short ad.

"The principal fault of advertising of guarantees has been the reluctance of advertisers to state precisely what the guarantee covers," said FTC Chairman Earl W. Kintner.

WALL STREET REPORT

Market Substantially Down As Trading Goes Into Slump

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market needed an advance in the last session to lift it on the plus side for the week.

The Friday advance on averages was the tenth in the last 12 sessions, and also marked the twelfth consecutive session that more stocks advanced than declined.

The market in general was rather hesitant this week with trading slowing down substantially from the previous week. Maket technicians note, however, that it is only natural for the list to take its time after two weeks of almost uninterrupted advance.

Most of the trading community is pleased that the market has been able to make such progress in the face of the economic and foreign news background.

STATUS

It is this unchanged status of the news background that makes most of the market experts hesitant to forecast a sharp and sustained rise at this juncture.

The general consensus on Wall Street is for the stock market to move out of its summer doldrums and trend upward, but not until domestic business activities pick up.

There were not many signs of this happening this week. Steel production improved slightly but Iron Age magazine said the timetable for a significant upturn in output has been set back again because new steel orders at some mills are lower than they were just two weeks ago. Nevertheless, the magazine said, an upturn in mill business still is on the way.

STRIKE

Giant U.S. Steel Corp. was hit by a strike of its Union Railroad subsidiary which already has idled about 30,000 steel workers and prospects for an early settlement appear slim.

Railroad shares advanced in 11 out of the last 12 sessions. Union Pacific, however, blotted this performance with the announcement that it has reduced its work force by approximately 1,200 workers because of lower revenues and earnings.

Utilities edged up in 10 of the past 11 sessions to their best level on average since June 7, 1930.

The announcement by the government of record gross national product in the second quarter, steady industrial production in July and record personal income in July failed to stimulate investor interest.

Disclosure of a rise in short interest on the "big board" to the highest level since mid - May helped improve sentiment slightly on Friday. A large short interest represents additional buying which must be done eventually.

SALES SLIP

Sales this week slipped to 13,702,603 shares, or a daily average of 2,740,520 shares, from 14,699,940, or an average of 2,939,988 shares per day the week before.

American Motors, which announced new styling changes and forecast a 26 per cent jump in sales of its 1961 models, was the sales leader with volume of 328,700 shares. It closed up 1⅞ at 23½.

Avco, helped by a good earnings report, was runner-up with sales of 300,000 shares and finished up 15¼ to 16⅞. General Motors, Lockheed and Glen Alden rounded out the top five.

The Dow Jones averages at the close Friday showed 30 industrials up 3.09 points on the week to 629.27; 20 rails up 1.38 to 139.73, 15 utilities up 1.48 to 95.53, the best since 96.03 on June 7, 1930; and 65 stocks up 1.17 to 203.95.

Policy Shifts Are Tried By Oil Company

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. this week took another step in its program to take day-to-day operations problems out of the hair of its policy makers and planners.

A marketing department responsible for 36,000 service stations in the United States is being transferred from Gulf's Pittsburgh, Pa., headquarters to Houston.

SIMILAR

Similar transfers by production and manufacturing (refining) departments were made last year. This means the bulk of Gulf's domestic operations now radiates out of Houston. Foreign operations are supervised from area offices at London, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Caracas, Venezuela.

Pittsburgh executives map policy and objectives, provide the necessary money and tools, and give grass-roots personnel sufficient authority to get the job done.

Coordination is handled by a Pittsburgh staff of six administrative vice presidents.

Should a Pittsburgh policy fail to apply on the local level, an operating man, in an emergency, can make his own immediate decision and advise Pittsburgh later.

The broad reorganization by Gulf got its start several years ago when the board of directors instructed that operating management be delegated authority at the level the operation is being performed.

Since then, President William K. Whiteford, from time to time, has described the program with these comments:

ADVICE

"We want to advise our men without making them so afraid of mistakes they will be afraid of decisions."

"Our idea of organization is not that of a corset to confine the activities of our people. . .

"It is a guide to assure them they have at all times the necessary tools, responsibility and authority to do at their level of management what they think is in the best interest of the company."

"We're giving the man with the power to say 'Yes' or 'No' the authority to say it directly to the man who can carry it out."

Objectives of the program are numerous — efficiency, flexibility, growth, training of future executives.

Selection of Houston for domestic marketing headquarters was interpreted by some as indication Gulf intends eventually to have retail outlets in all 50 states.

Gulf currently has outlets in 33 states. Missing areas include 10 western states, Hawaii and Alaska. Steps already have been taken to boost the outlet area to 41 states.

Oil Location In Mississippi To Be Pumped

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Justiss-Mears and D. C. Latimer switched to a pump to complete a potential Amite discovery after recording a small oil flow with low pressure from perforations at 10,616-19 feet.

The well, the Board of Supervisors No. B-1, sec. 16-3n-5e, is two miles northeast of the East Fork field and about eight miles west of the McComb field.

In Wayne County, Larco Drilling Co. and George Harrison resumed drilling below 12,034 feet in the wildcat USA No. 1-26, sec. 26-7n-6w, after logging oil shows of undetermined commercial worth below 11,901 feet.

The well is about two miles southeast of the Thompson Creek oil field and contract depth is 13,000 feet.

JONES

In Jones County, Ginther, Warren and Co., et al, were below 12,600 feet in the Holifield No. 1, sec. 18-6n-1w, with a scheduled depth of 13,000 feet.

About a mile south of the producing limits of the McComb field in Pike County, Thornhill and Biglane were below 10,700 feet in a wildcat, the Terry No. 1, sec. 27-3n-7e, with contract depth 11,100 feet.

The well is south of a recently completed Sun Oil well that logged 61 feet of oil sand, the thickest section found in the McComb field.

In the recently found Knoxo gas field of Marion County, Texaco, Inc., was below 3,700 feet in the Board of Supervisors No. B-1, sec. 16-2n-12e, a confirmation well in the multiple zone reservoir.

The discovery well of the field was completed as a dual producer from two different deep gas sands.

Two important wildcat ventures were underway in Amite County. Cities Service Producing Co. was below 11,100 feet in its Crosby No. E-1, sec. 17-2n-6e, and Warrior Oil and Gas Co. was below 10,200 feet in the Caine No. 1, sec. 1-3n-6e.

YAZOO

In Yazoo County near the Madison County line, Humble Oil and Refining Co. was below 13,200 feet in a wildcat, the Thompson No. 1, sec. 3-9n-1w. The well is scheduled to 14,500 feet and has logged slight oil shows.

Field drilling the past week brought five oil wells and one gas condensate well completed.

The McComb field listed three new oilers.

Sun Oil Co. completed the Lampton-Wallace No. A-1, sec. 22-3n-7e, which flowed 246 barrels daily from a sand at 10,918-26 feet.

Sun and J. Willis Hughes completed the Thompson-Johnston Unit No. 1, sec. 10-3n-7e, which pumped 150 barrels daily from a sand at 10,376-89 feet.

Grain Futures Rather Feeble

CHICAGO (AP)—Influences in grain futures trade were rather feeble this week and prices shifted generally within small ranges, mostly minor fractions.

For the week, net changes amounted to a cent or less except for September soybeans. Rye was the only loser.

Until Friday, the market churned against short covering and liquidation with support coming out on the setbacks and even small bulges attracting the profit takers.

Small Car Idea Was Tried 30 Years Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE — Companies have been trying to interest the public in smaller cars off and on for 30 years. Here is a review of some of the earlier attempts.

By BEN PHILEGAR
Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The slogan read "Nearly a ton less to start, stop, park and pay for" and the literature also advised that this car is "big enough, but not too big."

This sounds mighty familiar if you've followed the very recent trend to smaller automobiles. But those slogans are 30 years old. They came with America's first really small car, the American Austin.

At the peak of the boom year of 1929 the American Austin Car Co. was incorporated as a subsidiary of the Austin Co. of England to build an Americanized version of the English Austin 7.

The Automotive Daily News, commenting on the project in September 1929, said it would be interesting to see if car buyers of the United States would greet a smaller car with enthusiasm.

"If so," the editorial noted, "a whole new concept in auto sales may develop."

COMMENTS

Many similar comments were made only one year ago when the compact cars of the Big Three automakers were announced.

The first American Austin was built in June 1930, at Butler, Pa., northeast of Pittsburgh. It was 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any other American car then being produced. Complete with a 14-horsepower engine, it cost $445 at the factory.

With the depression at hand, claims of 50 miles to the gallon and 40,000 miles on a set of tires sounded good. Orders at first exceeded production facilities. Official registration figures showed 4,354 of the tiny cars were sold in the first six months.

Many were snapped up for advertising promotions. Will Rogers used them for a series of escapades in King Arthur's Court in the movie "A Connecticut Yankee," a hit of 1931.

But the depression deepened. The small cars began to be ridiculed and production halted in 1934 after a total run of about 15,000. The company lost money.

The Austin was a significant milepost because it represented for almost the first time a serious attempt to price a car below a Ford.

AUSTIN

Just as the Austin ran into the depression, the next full-scale attempt to build and market a midget car in this country was interrupted by another world-shaking event, World War II.

The Crosley was put into mass production. By then it had grown in length and weight from the original model and the price was boosted from $350 to $750.

The Crosley's four-cylinder engine was produced by a new process using sheet steel rather than castings. Thin sheet steel stampings were brazed into a single piece by melting pure copper into all the joints during a one-hour oven-baking period.

In the car-short days of post-World War II, the Crosley gained considerable support and in its peak year of 1948 it sold 25,400 cars. This total was cut by more than half the next year and in 1952 Crosley went out of the auto business.

Kaiser-Frazer, another postwar automotive newcomer, turned to smaller cars in 1950 in an effort to find the key to success. A national contest offered $100,000 in prizes for naming the new car and the winning entry was Henry J., which just happened to be the first name and initial of Kaiser.

SMALLER

The Henry J., while a smaller car, never was in the midget class of the Austin and Crosley. It was built on a 100-inch wheelbase, the same as currently used on the Rambler American, and was seven inches longer over-all than today's compact Studebaker Lark. The $171 price difference between the Henry J and a Chevrolet is similar to the difference between today's standard and compact cars.

A research study by Kaiser-Frazer in October 1951 said the Henry J was drawing buyers from the used car markets, a trend very similar to what has happened with the present compact cars.

The Fading Press Box

The tri-state area of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi will be scouted for the two best teams available for the "Rebel Bowl" football game already dated for Thanksgiving Day in West Monroe High School's football stadium.

This is the word from the West Monroe Lions Club which is sponsoring the game in cooperation with high school officials, and all game profits are pre-dedicated to increasing the club's activities in the field of boys and girls' work.

Coach Cecil Pirkey of West Monroe High heads a committee that includes Tex Kilpatrick and Tommy Trawick in making game plans. They have fixed 2:30 p.m. Thanksgiving Day as starting time for the first annual game, assuring that promotion permission has already been obtained from the Louisiana High School Athletic Association through T. H. Waters, commissioner.

The 95-member West Monroe Lions Club, with Mayor Allan Norris as president, annually sponsors candidates to Boys State and Girls State, maintains a blood bank, participates in sight conservation, supplies college scholarships each year to three graduates of West Monroe High School, maintains a crippled child annually at a 13-day summer camp, and was a driving force in the start of the campaign for a Ward Five hospital, now in the building stage.

The club made a generous donation to help the WMHS band obtain its first uniforms when the school opened for business in 1953, gave the basketball scoreboards to both WMHS and West Monroe Junior High. In addition, upon request, the club has made available crutches, wheelchairs, adult walkers, and a record of the Bible in Braille for the blind. In the past the club has donated an incubator to St. Fancis Hospital.

Such will be the benefits that can be magnified with more funds from a successful football presentation.

Except for playoff schedules for title contenders, most football is over in the area high schools by November 18, and the Rebel Bowl will offer one of the very few athletic events scheduled for this section of the state on November 24—Thanksgiving.

Enthusiasm in the Lions' project has been emphatically displayed to us by K. D. Norris and Bobby Wilson. Anyone doubting the chances of success in the promotion needs only to talk with them or any other West Monroe Lions for that matter.

An effort to secure an exhibition professional football game for this area during the spring failed, but there's nothing but success in sight for the West Monroe Lions' Rebel Bowl.

The ranks of the old press box from Monroe's days in professional baseball are growing thinner.

Yesterday we said goodbye to Dave Chapman, the "old armchair athlete," a man we first met a little more than 20 years ago at a Cotton States League baseball game.

Dave was then a radio sportscaster. He followed the radio as a profession most of his life, but had engaged in real estate, and at his death Thursday was associated with the driver's license division here.

Oldtime Cotton States followers of the pre - World War Two era remember Dave as the public address operator at old Casino Park who drew a suspension from league president Emmett Harty of Greenville, Miss., for getting too zealous in his PA support of his hometown club. Dave, not some ball player, was the hero of the fans for the week of his suspension.

Crowded into the past several months has been the deaths of several men who worked the press box of professional baseball in Monroe over a span of 40 years.

Among those to turn in their park passes lately were Miller "Holly" Hollingsworth, the first sports editor and columnist we ever knew and once News - Star sports boss (we still own his old Boy Scout knapsack, bought from him for two bits near 35 years ago); Marcus Kahn, once official scorer for the Monroe club; Don Breitenmoser, a former sportscaster and accomplished musician; and Walter Briggs, a Western Union morse operator who handled baseball reports direct from the parks. Then there was George Lofton, former Morning World Sports editor and once official scorer, who died in 1952 after thirteen years off the sports beat.

But there's some of the old press box crowd around . . . Walter Veach, the "old pro" who had been a professional football and baseball player and an umpire before he retired to the room on the roof as a public address system operator . . . Ches Todd, a Western Union morse operator . . . sportscasters Lawrence Gibbs and Irv Zeidman . . . and such of PA service as Garland Moore and Hiller Hesdorffer. The demise of professional baseball here took them out of the box.

GUN OWNERS, ATTENTION

Anyone who owns sporting arms, whether shotgun, rifle, or pistol—collector's items or modern — will be interested in a relatively new publication, called Shooting Times and published once each month.

We d[illegible] usually go over-board for anything like this, but David R. Wolfe, editor, says he wants every Morning World and News-Star reader who is a gun enthusiast and hunter to own a copy; no strings attached.

We possess a copy that is unique in its field, there's nothing else just like it that we know about, and we feel certain that any gun owner shelling out the cost of a post card in order to get his free copy will find it about the best bargain he ever made.

Singles Help Braves Blank Phillies, 1-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee right-hander Bob Buhl blanked Philadelphia on five hits for a 1-0 victory Saturday night as the Braves put together three straight singles in the fourth inning for their only run off veteran Robin Roberts.

Buhl struck out six and walked three in helping the second-place Braves remain 7½ games behind front-running Pittsburgh, which defeated Cincinnati 10-7.

The Braves managed only five singles off Roberts but three came at the outset of the fourth for the decisive run.

Solons Blow Lead With Errors In 9th

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two ninth-inning errors by Washington's Joe Valdivielso blew a shutout victory for Pedro Ramos and New York went on to beat the Senators 9-5 in 11 innings Saturday.

After seeing their 2-0 lead turned into a 2-5 deficit in the disastrous ninth, the Senators fought back in the bottom of the ninth to tie it at 5-5. But Moose Skowron's 23rd homer with Mickey Mantle aboard in the 11th put the Yanks ahead again and they added two more for good measure.

This tagged reliefer Chuck Stobbs with his fifth defeat against eight victories and gave the decision to Eli Grba, also in relief.

The Senators, with Earl Battey and Billy Gardner homering, seemed to have a 2-0 victory wrapped up behind Ramos with two out and nobody on in the ninth. Then Yogi Berra beat out a hit to second base and took third on Mantle's single to center. When Skowron hit an easy grounder toward short, the game-ending out seemed to be in the making.

However, shortstop Valdivielso fumbled the ball for an error, Berra scoring and Mantle sprinting to third. Elston Howard stroked a game-tying double to left, Skowron stopping at third. Then, Valdivielso, handling the relay, threw wild past catcher Battey and Skowron scored. Cletis Boyer homered off reliever Ray Moore to make it 5-2.

Tolar Paces 42-3 Rout Of Broncos

HOUSTON (AP)—George Blanda threw two touchdown passes and Charlie Tolar scored twice more as the Houston Oilers made their home debut Saturday night by walloping the Denver Broncos 42-3 before a crowd of 18,500.

The Houston Defense held Denver to a net rushing gain of only three yards in the first half as the Oilers gained their first victory in three American Football League exhibition games. It was Denver's third defeat.

Tolar, the 190-pound understudy of Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon, climaxed a pair of third quarter drives of 47 and 73 yards by carrying over from the 1. Cannon, favoring an injured knee, did not play.

Blanda, the former Chicago Bear, threw touchdown passes of 50 yards to Dave Smith and 8 yards to Johnny Carson, and kicked all six Houston conversions.

Bill Groman made a pair of spectacular pass catches for touchdowns. He took a 12-yarder from Jack Lee with a diving catch at the goal line to give Houston a 21-3 halftime lead. Then on the final play of the game he gathered in a 46-yard toss from Charlie Milstead.

Hard, Haydon Advance To Final Round

MANCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — —Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., and southpaw Ann Haydon of England—both listed as their country's No. 2 players—advanced to the final round of the Essex Country Club women's invitation tennis tournament Saturday.

Miss Hard, 24-year-old Wightman Cupper, turned on the pressure to melt 17-year-old Karen Hantze of San Diego, 8-6, 6-1.

In the other semifinal, Miss Haydon, 21, beat her fellow Englishwoman and doubles partner, little Deirdre Catt, 20, by a 6-3, 3-6 score.

FLASHING OLD FORM, Herb Score held Kansas City to two hits yesterday in pitching Chicago to a 3-0 victory. Score, caught here in mid-game action, showed signs of making good in his long comeback effort, striking out nine batters and walking but four. (AP Wirephoto)

PREP FOOTBALL CLASSIC

South Defeats North, 21-19, On Last-Ditch Field Goal

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Billy Lothridge, Gainsville, Ga., quarterback who will play for Georgia Tech this fall, kicked a 32-yard field goal in the final second Saturday night to give the South a 21-19 victory in the Prep All-America football game here.

With 12 seconds remaining, Jerry Rhome of Dallas, Tex., hit Billy Ganon of Dallas to give the North a touchdown and a 19-18 lead. But a pass interference ruling led to a South victory.

The North went ahead early in the second quarter when Rhome, who will play for Southern Methodist, passed 32 yards to John Whitaker, DeQueen, Ark., who sprinted the remaining 10 yards. Richard Van Raaphorst, Charlevoix, Mich., converted.

The South hit back in five minutes. Dunn, son en route to Ole Miss., capped a 59-yard march by ramming through right guard for the last yard and the tally. A pass for extra points failed.

Lothridge tried for a field goal in the first quarter from the 29, but hit the uprights and failed.

Van Raaphorst tried for a field goal after another 74-yard march by the North, but was blocked by Billy Truax of New Orleans.

Late in the third period, Billy Hamic, Crowley, broke through left guard for another South touchdown and gave his team a 12-7 lead. Dunn failed to run the conversion.

Rhome fired his second successful touchdown pass to Ken Rader, Hominy, Okla., in the third quarter. He passed from the 21 into the end zone. Van Raaphorst failed to convert.

Dunn ran through left tackle 10 yards to score with 2½ minutes left in the game, ending a 61-yard march. Then as the game ran out, Rhome made his 23-yard touchdown pass to Gannon, another future Southern Methodist player, throwing the crowd into an uproar as the North led 19-18.

LEGION BASEBALL

Jordan Selected 'Most Valuable'

Mel Jordan, a slim pitcher - third baseman who almost pitched the Brown - Rivers - Scogin American Legion baseball team to the state championship, last night was named the most valuable player at a banquet honoring the squad.

Chief of police James Kelly was principal speaker for the occassion, attended by some 40 players, American Legion officials and guests.

Jordan, a Grayson import who hurled a no - hitter early in the season and posted six victories while dividing his time between the infield and the mound, led the B-R-S into the state finals.

Fiver other individual awards were handed out at the fete, in addition to a special gift to veteran coach Ralph "Red" Sims who completed his seventh year with the team.

Manager Moon McMullen presented plaques to the leading hitter, center fielder Ralph Roberts the best infielder, first baseman Carl Guinn; and the best outfielder, Neal Gunn.

Sheriff Bailey Grant made the most improved player to freshman pitcher, Lynn Causey. Utility player Charley Biggar was selected recipient of the sportsmanship award but was unable to attend.

Pete Dowd, master of ceremonies and a spokesman for sponsoring L. B. Faulk Post 13, gave special recognition to the efforts of Sims, the players and the parents for helping to make the season a successful one.

BEHIND HERB SCORE

Chisox Shutout Athletics, 3-0

KANSAS CITY, (AP) — Herb Score pitched Chicago to a 3-0 two hit victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday and kept the White Sox within 1½ games of the league leading New York Yankees.

The shutout was the second in a row for the White Sox over the Athletics and was the Kansas City club's tenth straight defeat.

Luis Aparicio drove in Jim Landis with the first run in the eighth inning. Landis had led off with a single and moved to second on Score's sacrifice bunt before Aparicio singled into center field.

The Sox added two runs in the ninth inning when Gene Freese bunted safely against reliever Ken Johnson, stole second and scored in front of Al Smith, who hit his twelfth home run.

Score, whose career was almost ended by a line drive that struck him in the eye in 1957, was threatened only by his own wildness. He walked five and heaved a wild pitch but struck out nine. Two of his bases on balls came in the ninth inning but he got Hank Bauer on a fly to center field that ended the game.

Larsen, who pitched the World Series only perfect no-hit game in the 1956, went out for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning after giving up what proved the winning run. He yielded six hits, walked one and struck out four.

A pair of walks in the opening inning with only one out gave Score his first test. He got Dick Williams on a fly to right field and Norm Siebern fouled out. Then he pitched perfect baseball through the fifth. Larsen made a bid to help his own cause with a lead-off single in the sixth, went to second on Bill Tuttle's bunt, to third on a wild pitch, and then languished there while Score got Jerry Lumpe on a pop foul before striking out Andy Carey to end the inning.

Siebern's single to center with one out in the seventh was the only other hit off Score, who won his fourth game against seven losses.

Leader Blasts Soviet Games Change Policy

ROME (AP)—Avery Brundage —in an obvious crack at the Soviet Union—Saturday night called on the world's Olympic leaders to deal cautiously with moves aimed at reforming the organization of the Games.

"There are those who would alter the structure and change the rules," said the 72-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee.

"These proposals must be examined with great care."

Russia is demanding a "more democratic" IOC with greater representation of Iron Curtain and other smaller countries.

Addressing the inaugural ceremony of the 57th IOC session, Brundage said:

"The strength of the Olympic movement and its universal popular appeal comes from certain very important fundamental principles. The first is the complete autonomy and independence of the IOC . . . whose members must be completely impartial and in a position to resist pressure from any quarter—political, religious or financial."

Brundage also called for efforts to prevent the introduction of what he called "extraneous events" to the Olympics.

Russia is known to be seeking to extend the range of sports covered by the Olympics. So are other countries, including Japan, which would like to see judo included.

Without singling out any one state or sport, Brundage asserted: "We must choose between the temple and the circus."

The wealthy Chicago hotel owner added:

"The games must never be commercialized."

On the status of athletes, he said:

"The Games must remain amateur. Amateurism is something of the spirit, intangible and difficult to define but badly needed in these materialistic times in which we live."

Jefferson Wins Dixie World Series

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP) — Jefferson Parish, La., won the Dixie World Series of Little Boys' baseball here Saturday night with a 5-2 victory over Dothan, Ala., behind Donnie Simpson's three-hit pitching.

Simpson fanned 14 Dothan batters and also starred at the plate by hitting a solo home run as the Louisiana champions finished the week-long tournament with four victories in five starts.

Jefferson Parish rapped out seven hits and took advantage of wildness on the part of four Dothan pitchers while moving ahead in the second inning and holding the lead the rest of the distance.

Mike McMoy, Neal Clary, Philip Marsh and Steve Montgomery pitched for Dothan, which finished the tournament with a 4-2 record.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

The Fading Press Box

The tri-state area of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi will be scouted for the two best teams available for the "Rebel Bowl" football game already dated for Thanksgiving Day in West Monroe High School's football stadium.

This is the word from the West Monroe Lions Club which is sponsoring the game in cooperation with high school officials, and all game profits are pre-dedicated to increasing the club's activities in the field of boys and girls' work.

Coach Cecil Pirkey of West Monroe High heads a committee that includes Tex Kilpatrick and Tommy Trawick in making game plans. They have fixed 2:30 p.m. Thanksgiving Day as starting time for the first annual game, assuring that promotion permission has already been obtained from the Louisiana High School Athletic Association through T. H. Waters, commissioner.

The 95-member West Monroe Lions Club, with Mayor Allan Norris as president, annually sponsors candidates to Boys State and Girls State, maintains a blood bank, participates in sight conservation, supplies college scholarships each year to three graduates of West Monroe High School, maintains a crippled child annually at a 13-day summer camp, and was a driving force in the start of the campaign for a Ward Five hospital, now in the building stage.

The club made a generous donation to help the WMHS band obtain its first uniforms when the school opened for business in 1953, gave the basketball scoreboards to both WMHS and West Monroe Junior High. In addition, upon request, the club has made available crutches, wheelchairs, adult walkers, and a record of the Bible in Braille for the blind. In the past the club has donated an incubator to St. Fancis Hospital.

Such will be the benefits that can be magnified with more funds from a successful football presentation.

Except for playoff schedules for title contenders, most football is over in the area high schools by November 18, and the Rebel Bowl will offer one of the very few athletic events scheduled for this section of the state on November 24—Thanksgiving.

Enthusiasm in the Lions' project has been emphatically displayed to us by K. D. Norris and Bobby Wilson. Anyone doubting the chances of success in the promotion needs only to talk with them or any other West Monroe Lions for that matter.

An effort to secure an exhibition professional football game for this area during the spring failed, but there's nothing but success in sight for the West Monroe Lions' Rebel Bowl.

The ranks of the old press box from Monroe's days in professional baseball are growing thinner.

Yesterday we said goodbye to Dave Chapman, the "old armchair athlete," a man we first met a little more than 20 years ago at a Cotton States League baseball game.

Dave was then a radio sportscaster. He followed the radio as a profession most of his life, but had engaged in real estate, and at his death Thursday was associated with the driver's license division here.

Oldtime Cotton States followers of the pre - World War Two era remember Dave as the public address operator at old Casino Park who drew a suspension from league president Emmett Harty of Greenville, Miss., for getting too zealous in his PA support of his hometown club. Dave, not some ball player, was the hero of the fans for the week of his suspension.

Crowded into the past several months has been the deaths of several men who worked the press box of professional baseball in Monroe over a span of 40 years.

Among those to turn in their park passes lately were Miller "Holly" Hollingsworth, the first sports editor and columnist we ever knew and once News - Star sports boss (we still own his old Boy Scout knapsack, bought from him for two bits near 35 years ago); Marcus Kahn, once official scorer for the Monroe club; Don Breitenmoser, a former sportscaster and accomplished musician; and Walter Briggs, a Western Union morse operator who handled baseball reports direct from the parks. Then there was George Lofton, former Morning World Sports editor and once official scorer, who died in 1952 after thirteen years off the sports beat.

But there's some of the old press box crowd around . . . Walter Veach, the "old pro" who had been a professional football and baseball player and an umpire before he retired to the room on the roof as a public address system operator . . . Ches Todd, a Western Union morse operator . . . sportscasters Lawrence Gibbs and Irv Zeidman . . . and such of PA service as Garland Moore and Hiller Hesdorffer. The demise of professional baseball here took them out of the box.

GUN OWNERS, ATTENTION

Anyone who owns sporting arms, whether shotgun, rifle, or pistol—collector's items or modern — will be interested in a relatively new publication, called Shooting Times and published once each month.

We [illegible] go over-board for anything like this, but David R. Wolfe, editor, says he wants every Morning World and News-Star reader who is a gun enthusiast and hunter to own a copy; no strings attached.

We possess a copy that is unique in its field, there's nothing else just like it that we know about, and we feel certain that any gun owner shelling out the cost of a post card in order to get his free copy will find it about the best bargain he ever made.

Singles Help Braves Blank Phillies, 1-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee right-hander Bob Buhl blanked Philadelphia on five hits for a 1-0 victory Saturday night as the Braves put together three straight singles in the fourth inning for their only run off veteran Robin Roberts.

Buhl struck out six and walked three in helping the second-place Braves remain 7½ games behind front-running Pittsburgh, which defeated Cincinnati 10-7.

The Braves managed only five singles off Roberts but three came at the outset of the fourth for the decisive run.

Yanks Rout Nats In 11th, 9-5

Solons Blow Lead With Errors In 9th

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two ninth-inning errors by Washington's Joe Valdivielso blew a shutout victory for Pedro Ramos and New York went on to beat the Senators 9-5 in 11 innings Saturday.

After seeing their 2-0 lead turned into a 2-5 deficit in the disastrous ninth, the Senators fought back in the bottom of the ninth to tie it at 5-5. But Moose Skowron's 23rd homer with Mickey Mantle aboard in the 11th put the Yanks ahead again and they added two more for good measure.

This tagged reliefer Chuck Stobbs with his fifth defeat against eight victories and gave the decision to Eli Grba, also in relief.

The Senators, with Earl Battey and Billy Gardner homering, seemed to have a 2-0 victory wrapped up behind Ramos with two out and nobody on in the ninth. Then Yogi Berra beat out a hit to second base and took third on Mantle's single to center. When Skowron hit an easy grounder toward short, the game-ending out seemed to be in the making.

However, shortstop Valdivielso fumbled the ball for an error, Berra scoring and Mantle sprinting to third. Elston Howard stroked a game-tying double to left, Skowron stopping at third. Then, Valdivielso, handling the relay, threw wild past catcher Battey and Skowron scored. Cletis Boyer homered off reliever Ray Moore to make it 5-2.

Tolar Paces 42-3 Rout Of Broncos

HOUSTON (AP)—George Blanda threw two touchdown passes and Charlie Tolar scored twice more as the Houston Oilers made their home debut Saturday night by walloping the Denver Broncos 42-3 before a crowd of 18,500.

The Houston Defense held Denver to a net rushing gain of only three yards in the first half as the Oilers gained their first victory in three American Football League exhibition games. It was Denver's third defeat.

Tolar, the 190-pound understudy of Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon, climaxed a pair of third quarter drives of 47 and 73 yards by carrying over from the 1. Cannon, favoring an injured knee, did not play.

Blanda, the former Chicago Bear, threw touchdown passes of 50 yards to Dave Smith and 8 yards to Johnny Carson, and kicked all six Houston conversions.

Bill Groman made a pair of spectacular pass catches for touchdowns. He took a 12-yarder from Jack Lee with a diving catch at the goal line to give Houston a 21-3 halftime lead. Then on the final play of the game he gathered in a 46-yard toss from Charlie Milstead.

Hard, Haydon Advance To Final Round

MANCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — —Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., and southpaw Ann Haydon of England—both listed as their country's No. 2 players—advanced to the final round of the Essex Country Club women's invitation tennis tournament Saturday.

Miss Hard, 24-year-old Wightman Cupper, turned on the pressure to melt 17-year-old Karen Hantze of San Diego, 8-6, 6-1.

In the other semifinal, Miss Haydon, 21, beat her fellow Englishwoman and doubles partner, little Deirdre Catt, 20, by a 6-3, 8-6 score.

FLASHING OLD FORM. Herb Score held Kansas City to two hits yesterday in pitching Chicago to a 3-0 victory. Score, caught here in mid-game action, showed signs of making good in his long comeback effort, striking out nine batters and walking but four. (AP Wirephoto)

PREP FOOTBALL CLASSIC

South Defeats North, 21-19, On Last-Ditch Field Goal

By JACK OWENS

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Billy Lothridge, Gainsville, Ga., quarterback who will play for Georgia Tech this fall, kicked a 32-yard field goal in the final second Saturday night to give the South a 21-19 victory in the Prep All-America football game here.

With 12 seconds remaining, Jerry Rhome of Dallas, Tex., hit Billy Ganon of Dallas to give the North a touchdown and a 19-18 lead. But a pass interference ruling led to a South victory.

The North went ahead early in the second quarter when Rhome, who will play for Southern Methodist, passed 32 yards to John Whitaker, DeQueen, Ark., who sprinted the remaining 10 yards. Richard Van Raaphorst, Charlevoix, Mich., converted.

The South hit back in five minutes. Dunn, son en route to Ole Miss., capped a 59-yard march by ramming through right guard for the last yard and the tally. A pass for extra points failed.

Lothridge tried for a field goal in the first quarter from the 29, but hit the uprights and failed. Van Raaphorst tried for a field goal after another 74-yard march by the North, but was blocked by Billy Truax of New Orleans.

Late in the third period, Billy Hamic, Crowley, broke through left guard for another South touchdown and gave his team a 12-7 lead. Dunn failed to run the conversion.

Rhome fired his second successful touchdown pass to Ken Rader, Hominy, Okla., in the third quarter. He passed from the 21 into the end zone. Van Raaphorst failed to convert.

Dunn ran through left tackle 10 yards to score with 2½ minutes left in the game, ending a 61-yard march. Then as the game ran out, Rhome made his 23-yard touchdown pass to Gannon, another future Southern Methodist player, throwing the crowd into an uproar as the North led 19-18.

LEGION BASEBALL

Jordan Selected 'Most Valuable'

Mel Jordan, a slim pitcher - third baseman who almost pitched the Brown - Rivers - Scogin American Legion baseball team to the state championship, last night was named the most valuable player at a banquet honoring the squad.

Chief of police James Kelly was principal speaker for the occassion, attended by some 40 players, American Legion officials and guests.

Jordan, a Grayson import who hurled a no - hitter early in the season and posted six victories while dividing his time between the infield and the mound, led the B-R-S into the state finals.

Fiver other individual awards were handed out at the fete, in addition to a special gift to veteran coach Ralph "Red" Sims who completed his seventh year with the team.

Manager Moon McMullen presented plaques to the leading hitter, center fielder Ralph Roberts the best infielder, first baseman Carl Guinn; and the best outfielder, Neal Gunn.

Sheriff Bailey Grant made the most improved player to freshman pitcher, Lynn Causey. Utility player Charley Biggar was selected recipient of the sportsmanship award but was unable to attend.

BEHIND HERB SCORE

Chisox Shutout Athletics, 3-0

KANSAS CITY, (AP) — Herb Score pitched Chicago to a 3-0 two hit victory over the Kansas City Athletics Saturday and kept the White Sox within 1½ games of the league leading New York Yankees.

The shutout was the second in a row for the White Sox over the Athletics and was the Kansas City club's tenth straight defeat.

Luis Aparicio drove in Jim Landis with the first run in the eighth inning. Landis had led off with a single and moved to second on Score's sacrifice bunt before Aparicio singled into center field.

The Sox added two runs in the ninth inning when Gene Freese bunted safely against reliever Ken Johnson, stole second and scored in front of Al Smith, who hit his twelfth home run.

Score, whose career was almost ended by a line drive that struck him in the eye in 1957, was threatened only by his own wildness. He walked five and heaved a wild pitch but struck out nine. Two of his bases on balls came in the ninth inning but he got Hank Bauer on a fly to center field that ended the game.

Larsen, who pitched the World Series only perfect no-hit game in the 1956, went out for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning after giving up what proved the winning run. He yielded six hits, walked one and struck out four.

A pair of walks in the opening inning with only one out gave Score his first test. He got Dick Williams on a fly to right field and Norm Siebern fouled out. Then he pitched perfect baseball through the fifth. Larsen made a bid to help his own cause with a lead-off single in the sixth, went to second on Bill Tuttle's bunt, to third on a wild pitch, and then languished there while Score got Jerry Lumpe on a pop foul before striking out Andy Carey to end the inning.

Siebern's single to center with one out in the seventh was the only other hit off Score, who won his fourth game against seven losses.

Leader Blasts Soviet Games Change Policy

ROME (AP)—Avery Brundage—in an obvious crack at the Soviet Union—Saturday night called on the world's Olympic leaders to deal cautiously with moves aimed at reforming the organization of the Games.

"There are those who would alter the structure and change the rules," said the 72-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee.

"These proposals must be examined with great care."

Russia is demanding a "more democratic" IOC with greater representation of Iron Curtain and other smaller countries.

Addressing the inaugural ceremony of the 57th IOC session, Brundage said:

"The strength of the Olympic movement and its universal popular appeal comes from certain very important fundamental principles. The first is the complete autonomy and independence of the IOC . . . whose members must be completely impartial and in a position to resist pressure from any quarter—political, religious or financial."

Brundage also called for efforts to prevent the introduction of what he called "extraneous events" to the Olympics.

Russia is known to be seeking to extend the range of sports covered by the Olympics. So are other countries, including Japan, which would like to see judo included.

Without singling out any one state or sport, Brundage asserted: "We must choose between the temple and the circus."

The wealthy Chicago hotel owner added:

"The games must never be commercialized."

On the status of athletes, he said:

"The Games must remain amateur. Amateurism is something of the spirit, intangible and difficult to define but badly needed in these materialistic times in which we live."

Jefferson Wins Dixie World Series

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP) — Jefferson Parish, La., won the Dixie World Series of Little Boys' baseball here Saturday night with a 5-2 victory over Dothan, Ala., behind Donnie Simpson's three-hit pitching.

Simpson fanned 14 Dothan batters and also starred at the plate by hitting a solo home run as the Louisiana champions finished the week-long tournament with four victories in five starts.

Jefferson Parish rapped out seven hits and took advantage of wildness on the part of four Dothan pitchers while moving ahead in the second inning and holding the lead the rest of the distance.

Mike McMoy, Neal Clary, Philip Marsh and Steve Montgomery pitched for Dothan, which finished the tournament with a 4-2 record.

Why Manage? Big League Pilot Is A Strange Specie

NEW YORK (AP)—Why does a grown man, sound of body, clear of mind, and, in most cases possessor of above-average intelligence, enter the crazy, insecure business of managing a major league baseball team?

The wave of managerial switches this season prompted this question of big league pilots who so far have been able to escape the axe.

Judging by their replies, the big league manager is a strange specie. He accepts the fact on the day he is hired that, sooner or later, he will be fired. He knows from past history that the life expectancy of a major league pilot is less than three years.

He is resigned to becoming the target for criticism of the fans and press and the scapegoat of front office officials. He knows he will be blamed for the failure of his players and the loss in home attendance. He knows he's got to keep winning to stay on the job. Sometimes, even winning does not guarantee him steady employment.

Yet he spends years preparing himself for the job. He by-passes opportunities in other fields, possibly more lucrative; certainly more secure. He sacrifices his home life, spends months away from his family, is constantly on the move, in and out of trains, planes and hotels. All for what?

"It's a challenge," answered Joe Gordon, who recently figured in an unpreeecdented managerial swap that sent him from Cleveland to Detroit. "It's a challenge just as playing was but it's a different kind of challenge. After playing for 15 or 20 years, you want to see if you can help others to win with what you yourself have learned."

"It's a livelihood unmatched in life from a challenge standpoint," said Lou Boudreau of the Chicago Cubs. "Ever since my teammates elected me captain of my high school basketball team when I was only a sophomore and we went on to win the state championship, I have sincerely felt I possessed leadership talents and ability to instill desire and determination into the athletes at my command.

"Those were the reasons why I wrote to Mr. Alva Bradley (then president of the Cleveland Indians) after the 1941 season and asked him for the chance to manage when I was only 24. Managing is in my blood although I'll be the first to admit it isn't always a recommended tonic for your health."

"I've spent all my life in baseball and I want to stay in it as long as I can and as long as I'm wanted," said Cincinnati's Fred Hutchinson. "Managing is the prime job even though it is the most hazardous."

Since 1901, there have been 321 major league managers, 173 in the National, 148 in the American. In the past five years alone, 29 managers lost their jobs. Only three—Casey Stengel of the Yankees, Walt Alston of the Dodgers and Paul Richards of the Orioles—have been with their present clubs longer than four years.

Stengel, at 70, is the oldest in years and in length of service. He has been managing the Yankees since 1949.

Swimmer Equals 100-Meter Mark

By MURRAY ROSE

ROME, (AP) — Paul Hait tied the world record for the 100-meter breaststroke in a recent time trial, it was disclosed Saturday as the Americans set the dates for swim-offs for berths on two Olympic relay teams.

Gus Stager, coach of the U.S. Men's swimming team, said Hait, a 6-4½, 200-pounder from San Jose Calif., clipped off the 100 in 1:11.5 two days ago in equaling the listed world mark set by Russia's Wladimir Minaschkin nearly three years ago.

It was another of many outstanding performances turned in by the American men and women swimmers in recent days.

The showdown for places on the men's relay team starts Sunday.

Stager said the swimoffs would run through Tuesday. At stake are places on the 400-meter medley (backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and freestyle) and the 800-meter freestyle relay teams.

Hait already has been picked for the 100-meter breaststroke leg of the medley. The backstroke leg will go to the fastest man in the Olympic individual 100 - meter backstroke. The backstroke Olympic final is Aug. 31. The two relay finals are the following day, Sept. 1.

Bob Bennett, 17, of Encino, Calif., and Frank McKinney, 21, of Indianapolis, third placer in the 1956 Olympics, are the two entrants in the backstroke.

Three world record breakers—Lance Larson of El Monte, Calif., Mike Troy of Indianapolis and Dave Gillanders of Royal Oaks, Mich.—will race Sunday for the 100-meter butterfly job.

The race for the 100-meter anchor leg on the medley squad will be held Monday in the Olympic pool. The field for this one will include Jeff Farrell, now fully recovered from appendectomy earlier this month; Larson, if he does not win the butterfly swimoff; George Harrison of Orinda, Calif., and Steve Clark of Los Altos, Calif.

Probably the keenest race of them all will be the battle royal Tuesday for the 800-meter relay berths.

"This will be a better race than you'll see in the Olympics," said Stager. "they're all toned up for this one."

About ten will go in this one, including Farrell of Wichita, Kan., Harrison, Larson, Clark, the Indianapolis trio of Alan Somers, George Breen and Mike Troy, Dick Blick of Bakersfield, Calif., Bill Darnton of Flint, Mich., and Tom Winters of La Canada, Calif.

Breen, the 25-year-old schoolteacher and third placer in the 400 and 1,500 freestyles in 1956, and his young sidekick, Somers, were elected co-captains of the men's team.

BOTH SEEKING TITLES

Brundage, Elliott Talk Of Olympics

ROME (UPI)—An old man and a young man—both of whom are seeking title—were the talk of the Olympics Saturday five days before the international games open with their usual fanfare.

One was Avery Brundage, the Gray-Haired, ruddy-faced multimillionaire from Chicago who is seeking re-election as president of the International Olympic Committee in a no-holds-barred political battle.

The other was slender Herb Elliott, the world record holder at the mile and favorite for the 1,500 meters, known as the metric mile and the glamor event of the Olympic track program.

Both were expected to be victorious.

The behind-the-scenes campaign which Brundage was waging in his bid for a third four-year term as head of the IOC-with Lord Burghley, Marquis of Exeter, as his chief opponent—broke into the open when several nations attempted to split the pro-Brundage forces by offering support to Armand Massard of France.

"Several countries invited me to stand for president," Massard confirmed. "But I will support Mr. Brundage for re-election. I do not see anyone who could stand against him."

Elliott, who arrived with the delayed Australian team, was the big man on the training scene as he jogged through the flag - bedecked Olympic athletes village.

"I'm the fittest I've ever been," said Elliott, disclosing that he would go to England after the games to take up a scholarship at Cambridge University. "I ran my fastest times ever before before leaving Australia and now all I have to do is to keep myself exercised."

Hot, humid weather and the blazing Roman sun kept most of the atheletes from working too hard at their training but the U. S. swimming team — already razor- sharp — went through a brisk workout.

It was a quiet period of tense waiting through which the athletes were going—aside from a brief flareup when some Roman jokesters reversed road signs leading to the village and a London tour bus went around 20 miles in an endless circle before the scenery became too familiar.

Yanks Fall As Canada Grabs Boating Title

By JERRY GREEN

PICTON, Ont. (AP)—Canada's Miss Supertest III completely mastered a crippled U.S. team Saturday and retained the Harmsworth Trophy, international power boating's highest bauble.

The successful Canadian defender roared to her second straight victory in the best-of-3 races while only one American Boat of a three-boat fleet finished.

Gale V of Detroit, the top U.S. hope and runner-up to Supertest in Friday's first race, was unable to get her engine going. She was out of the race before the start.

Nitrogen Too, leader across the starting line, went dead in the water on the fifth lap.

Only Nitrogen, Nitrogen Too's sister craft from Wilmington, Del, was able to carry the U.S. hopes to the finish. And Nitrogen was about 4 miles behind the zooming Supertest at the end of the 45-mile grind around the Bay of Quinte's 5-mile course.

This was only Canada's second Harmsworth victory since the trophy first was offered by Alfred Harmsworth, a British publisher, in 1903. Supertest, with Bob Hayward at the wheel, won it last year in Detroit.

The United States has won the trophy 16 times and until last year, had held it for 39 years. The race is held only when there is a challenger.

Hayward, Supertest's 32-year-old chicken farmer pilot didn't make his bid until the second turn, entering the home stretch of the first lap. He passed Nitrogen there and took off after Nitrogen Too.

Along the back, 2¼-mile straightaway on the second lap, Hayward let Supertest go. Opening her throttle, Hayward sped past Nitrogen Too and pulled away steadily.

Supertest finished the race with an average speel of 115.48 m.p.h., a shade slower than her first heat record time Friday.

Her best lap time was 126.22 m.p.h. on the second lap when she exceeded Friday's Harmsworth lap record by nearly 2 miles an hour.

Hebert Shares St. Paul Lead For 3rd Round

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Don Fairfield of Jacksonville, Ill., and Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., were deadlocked Saturday for the lead in the $30,000 St. Paul Open Golf tournament at the 54-hole mark with 17-under-par 199s.

Hebert now has shared the lead for three rounds, each time with a different player, over the 6,557-yard, par 36-36—72 Keller course.

Hebert shot a 6-under-par 66 and Fairfield had a 7-under 65 as the two pulled four shots in front of the rest of the field.

Tied at 203 were Gordon Jones, Atlantis, Fla., and Al Geiberger, former University of Southern California star from Studio City, Calif.

At 204 were George Bayer, Gleneagles, Ill., who also shot a 65; Tommy Bolt, Crystal River, Fla., and Billy Casper of Apple Valley, Calif.

Hebert missed only one green and hit only two shots on his round which didn't turn out as he planned. He didn't have a bogey on the card and now has played 54 holes with only one. His birdie putts ranged from 6 to 10 feet as his iron play was flawless.

Fairfield rode into a tie for the top spot on 11 one-putt greens and started his round with threes on the first four holes. Then he birdied the seventh to make the first nine in 5-under 31. His only bogey came at the 10th where he took three from the edge but he followed that with birdies at the 11th, 12th and 16th holes with putts of 15, 3 and 25 feet.

Casper, who shared the lead at 36 holes, slipped to a 71 and fell five shots off the pace, and Joe Campbell of New York, who started the day only one stroke back, could do no better than a 72 for a 206.

Don Whitt, Borrego Springs, Calif., who started the day two strokes short, shot a 72 for a 205.

HANG ON TO LEAD

Bucs Take 10-7 Duel From Reds

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored six runs in the second inning Saturday and led 8-0 in the fourth but still had to hang on desperately to beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-7 in a free-swinging slugfest.

It was Elroy Face who came on again to stifle the Reds after Cincinnati had cut the Pittsburgh lead to three runs.

Face, the last of three Pittsburgh pitchers, was credited with the victory while young Jim Maloney was the loser.

Gordon Coleman and Gus Bell had home runs for the Reds while Don Hoak hit one out of the park for the Pirates.

In the big second inning Maloney was almost out of trouble with only one run scored. A walk and singles by Roberto Clemente and Smoky Burgess were followed by a run-scoring double play on Hoak's grounder. Singles by Tom Cheney and Bill Virdon drove in two more runs, however.

Joe Nuxhall came on and gave up a run scoring single to Dick Groat. Bob Skinner's double tallied two more.

The Pirates picked up one run in each of the next two innings for an 8-0 lead before the Reds broke into the scoring column.

Coleman drove in three runs with a home run in the fourth.

The Bucs came right back with two more, one of them on Hoak's home run but the Reds got three in their half. They came on Chico Cardenas' double, a single by Vada Pinson and Bell's home run.

The Reds got another in the seventh but Face came on to stop them the rest of the way. In the seventh, singles by Pinson, Bell and Robinson accounted for the run.

Danna Hurls Twin City To 16-Inning Win

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Angelo Danna turned in a neat three - hitter and drove in the winning run as the Twin City Merchants of Monroe outlasted Baton Rouge, 3-2, in a 16 inning duel that highlighted the state softball tournament.

Twin City was scheduled to meet Lafayette last night.

Manager Dave McKenzie and Don Nelson sparked the winning attack over the Baton Rouge club with three hits apiece.

After Monroe had notched single runs in the first and third innings, Baton Rouge came back with a pair of game-tying tallies in the fifth. That was all the scoring until the 16th when Danna was walked with the bases loaded, forcing in the third counter.

Twin City dropped its opening game, 3-0, to tournament favorite Opelousas. Danna hurled a brilliant two - hitter in that one, but took the loss.

WILLIAMS STARS

Detroit, Orioles Split Twin Card

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Incomparable Ted Williams provided the drama with a pair of three-run homers in the 8-6 first game victory but Baltimore salvaged a doubleheader split, 6-0, against Boston Saturday night behind Hal Brown's masterful pitching.

Brown, a former Red Sox righthander, allowed his old mates eight singles while keeping the Orioles in the thick of the American League pennant fight, 2½ games behind pacesetting New York.

Williams, who also singled and drew his 2,000th walk, won the daylight half of the competition by belting two tremendous drives for his 514th and 515 major league homers.

The 35-year-old Brown, getting the starting assignment under the light over young southpaw Steve Barber, allowed only one Boston runner to reach second base.

Brown's support came from Jim Gentile's three-run single and the come-alive batting of Marv Breeding. Breeding had fanned three times in the opener before being lifted for a pinch hitter. At night he doubled twice and brought home both runs on singles by Jackie Brandt and Gene Woodling.

Woodling looped a wrong-field hit to left on a changeup over incharging third baseman Frank Malzone.

The loss went to rookie Earl Wilson as Baltimore ran its season domination of Boston to a 13-4 record.

Williams—who will be 42 in exactly 10 days—was the subject of four standing ovations from the afternoon crowd of 17,437. His second homer on loser Chuck Estrada's first pitch in the sixth put Boston in front to stay, 7-6. The 500-foot smash to the center field bleachers also helped Bill Monbouquette to his 13th victory.

Monbouquette also needed three innings of relief by ace Mike Fornieles.

Ted slammed a 425-foot homer to the home bullpen in right center in the fourth to nudge Boston ahead 4-3. His 2,000th walk made him second only to Babe Ruth's 2,056 in majo league annuals.

Ron Hansen hit a three-run homer in the opener and a run-producing double in the nightcap as he enjoyed a 5-for-9 day and reached 70 RBI.

Brown-Irwin Scrap Heads Mitt Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Only one world champion is in action this week—a thin one in boxing.

Lightweight champ Joe Brown meets Harlow Irwin of Minneapolis in a non-title 10 Thursday night in Minneapolis. The 24-year-old Irwin, who outpointed former lightweight champion Lauro Salas last month, hopes to get a title fight if he makes a good showing.

In the TV fight of the week, Gene Greshan of Detroit meets Duff Vaillant of Cuba, in a 10-round lightweight scrap at Chicago. It will be televised by ABC-TV starting at 9 p.m., EST.

Greshan, 22, was the national AAU lightweight champion in 1957 before turning pro. He has won 25 and lost only once. Vaillant has 16 victories on his record.

Fernandez, No. 4 ranking welter contender, has an imposing record, having knocked out 21 of 28 opponents.

The other 10s pit Jerry Luede of Canada against Bartolo Soni of the Dominican Republic in a light heavyweight tussle and Hans Werner Wohlers of Germany against Obdukio Nunez of Puerto Rico in a middleweight scrap.

Louise Suggs Takes Lead In Women's Open

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Veteran Louise Suggs of Atlanta whipped around the Asheville Country Club course in 69 strokes Saturday to grab the 36-hole lead in the Asheville Women's Open Golf Tournament with a 141 total.

Her 2-under-par performance put her a stroke ahead of steady-shooting Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., and Jo Ann Prentice of Birmingham, Ala. Miss Rawls, the current women's Open champ, carded her second straight 71 and Miss Prentice had a 70 for 142 totals.

Mickey Wright of Bonita, Calif., who shot the rain-soaked Beaver Lake Club course in 69 Friday, could do no better than a 75 for 144.

Four strokes further at 148 were Marilyn Smith of French Lick, Ind., Joyce Ziske, Waterford, Wis., and Kathy Cornelius of Lakeland, Fla.

Why Manage? Big League Pilot Is A Strange Specie

NEW YORK (AP)—Why does a grown man, sound of body, clear of mind, and, in most cases possessor of above-average intelligence, enter the crazy, insecure business of managing a major league baseball team?

The wave of managerial switches this season prompted this question of big league pilots who so far have been able to escape the axe.

Judging by their replies, the big league manager is a strange specie. He accepts the fact on the day he is hired that, sooner or later, he will be fired. He knows from past history that the life expectancy of a major league pilot is less than three years.

He is resigned to becoming the target for criticism of the fans and press and the scapegoat of front office officials. He knows he will be blamed for the failure of his players and the loss in home attendance. He knows he's got to keep winning to stay on the job. Sometimes, even winning does not guarantee him steady employment.

Yet he spends years preparing himself for the job. He by-passes opportunities in other fields, possibly more lucrative; certainly more secure. He sacrifices his home life, spends months away from his family, is constantly on the move, in and out of trains, planes and hotels. All for what?

"It's a challenge," answered Joe Gordon, who recently figured in an unpreeecdented managerial swap that sent him from Cleveland to Detroit. "It's a challenge just as playing was but it's a different kind of challenge. After playing for 15 or 20 years, you want to see if you can help others to win with what you yourself have learned."

"It's a livelihood unmatched in life from a challenge standpoint," said Lou Boudreau of the Chicago Cubs. "Ever since my teammates elected me captain of my high school basketball team when I was only a sophomore and we went on to win the state championship, I have sincerely felt I possessed leadership talents and ability to instill desire and determination into the athletes at my command.

"Those were the reasons why I wrote to Mr. Alva Bradley (then president of the Cleveland Indians) after the 1941 season and asked him for the chance to manage when I was only 24. Managing is in my blood although I'll be the first to admit it isn't always a recommended tonic for your health."

"I've spent all my life in baseball and I want to stay in it as long as I can and as long as I'm wanted," said Cincinnati's Fred Hutchinson. "Managing is the prime job even though it is the most hazardous."

Since 1901, there have been 321 major league managers, 173 in the National, 148 in the American. In the past five years alone, 29 managers lost their jobs. Only three—Casey Stengel of the Yankees, Walt Alston of the Dodgers and Paul Richards of the Orioles—have been with their present clubs longer than four years.

Stengel, at 70, is the oldest in years and in length of service. He has been managing the Yankees since 1949.

Swimmer Equals 100-Meter Mark

By MURRAY ROSE

ROME, (AP) — Paul Hait tied the world record for the 100-meter breaststroke in a recent time trial, it was disclosed Saturday as the Americans set the dates for swim-offs for berths on two Olympic relay teams.

Gus Stager, coach of the U.S. Men's swimming team, said Hait, a 6-4½, 200-pounder from San Jose Calif., clipped off the 100 in 1:11.5 two days ago in equaling the listed world mark set by Russia's Wladimir Minaschkin nearly three years ago.

It was another of many outstanding performances turned in by the American men and women swimmers in recent days.

The showdown for places on the men's relay team starts Sunday.

Stager said the swimoffs would run through Tuesday. At stake are places on the 400-meter medley (backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and freestyle) and the 800-meter freestyle relay teams.

Hait already has been picked for the 100-meter breaststroke leg of the medley. The backstroke leg will go to the fastest man in the Olympic individual 100 - meter backstroke. The backstroke Olympic final is Aug. 31. The two relay finals are the following day, Sept. 1.

Bob Bennett, 17, of Encino, Calif., and Frank McKinney, 21, of Indianapolis, third placer in the 1956 Olympics, are the two entrants in the backstroke.

Three world record breakers—Lance Larson of El Monte, Calif., Mike Troy of Indianapolis and Dave Gillanders of Royal Oaks, Mich.—will race Sunday for the 100-meter butterfly job.

The race for the 100-meter anchor leg on the medley squad will be held Monday in the Olympic pool. The field for this one will include Jeff Farrell, now fully recovered from appendectomy earlier this month; Larson, if he does not win the butterfly swimoff; George Harrison of Orinda, Calif., and Steve Clark of Los Altos, Calif.

Probably the keenest race of them all will be the battle royal Tuesday for the 800-meter relay berths.

"This will be a better race than you'll see in the Olympics," said Stager. "they're all toned up for this one."

About ten will go in this one, including Farrell of Wichita, Kan., Harrison, Larson, Clark, the Indianapolis trio of Alan Somers, George Breen and Mike Troy, Dick Blick of Bakersfield, Calif., Bill Darnton of Flint, Mich., and Tom Winters of La Canada, Calif.

Breen, the 25-year-old schoolteacher and third placer in the 400 and 1,500 freestyles in 1956, and his young sidekick, Somers, were elected co-captains of the men's team.

BOTH SEEKING TITLES

Brundage, Elliott Talk Of Olympics

ROME (UPI)—An old man and a young man—both of whom are seeking title—were the talk of the Olympics Saturday five days before the international games open with their usual fanfare.

One was Avery Brundage, the Gray-Haired, ruddy-faced multi-millionaire from Chicago who is seeking re-election as president of the International Olympic Committee in a no-holds-barred political battle.

The other was slender Herb Elliott, the world record holder at the mile and favorite for the 1,500 meters, known as the metric mile and the glamor event of the Olympic track program.

Both were expected to be victorious.

The behind-the-scenes campaign which Brundage was waging in his bid for a third four-year term as head of the IOC-with Lord Burghley, Marquis of Exeter, as his chief opponent—broke into the open when several nations attempted to split the pro-Brundage forces by offering support to Armand Massard of France.

"Several countries invited me to stand for president," Massard confirmed. "But I will support Mr. Brundage for re-election. I do not see anyone who could stand against him."

Elliott, who arrived with the delayed Australian team, was the big man on the training scene as he jogged through the flag - bedecked Olympic athletes village.

"I'm the fittest I've ever been," said Elliott, disclosing that he would go to England after the games to take up a scholarship at Cambridge University. "I ran my fastest times ever before before leaving Australia and now all I have to do is to keep myself exercised."

Hot, humid weather and the blazing Roman sun kept most of the atheletes from working too hard at their training but the U. S. swimming team — already razor- sharp — went through a brisk workout.

It was a quiet period of tense waiting through which the athletes were going—aside from a brief flareup when some Roman jokesters reversed road signs leading to the village and a London tour bus went around 20 miles in an endless circle before the scenery became too familiar.

Hebert Shares St. Paul Lead For 3rd Round

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Don Fairfield of Jacksonville, Ill., and Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., were deadlocked Saturday for the lead in the $30,000 St. Paul Open Golf tournament at the 54-hole mark with 17-under-par 199s.

Hebert now has shared the lead for three rounds, each time with a different player, over the 6,557-yard, par 36-36—72 Keller course.

Hebert shot a 6-under-par 66 and Fairfield had a 7-under 65 as the two pulled four shots in front of the rest of the field.

Tied at 203 were Gordon Jones, Atlantis, Fla., and Al Geiberger, former University of Southern California star from Studio City, Calif.

At 204 were George Bayer, Gleneagles, Ill., who also shot a 65; Tommy Bolt, Crystal River, Fla., and Billy Casper of Apple Valley, Calif.

Hebert missed only one green and hit only two shots on his round which didn't turn out as he planned. He didn't have a bogey on the card and now has played 54 holes with only one. His birdie putts ranged from 6 to 10 feet as his iron play was flawless.

Fairfield rode into a tie for the top spot on 11 one-putt greens and started his round with threes on the first four holes. Then he birdied the seventh to make the first nine in 5-under 31. His only bogey came at the 10th where he took three from the edge but he followed that with birdies at the 11th, 12th and 16th holes with putts of 15, 3 and 25 feet.

Casper, who shared the lead at 36 holes, slipped to a 71 and fell five shots off the pace, and Joe Campbell of New York, who started the day only one stroke back, could do no better than a 72 for a 206.

Don Whitt, Borrego Springs, Calif., who started the day two strokes short, shot a 72 for a 205.

Yanks Fall As Canada Grabs Boating Title

By JERRY GREEN

PICTON, Ont. (AP)—Canada's Miss Supertest III completely mastered a crippled U.S. team Saturday and retained the Harmsworth Trophy, international power boating's highest bauble.

The successful Canadian defender roared to her second straight victory in the best-of-3 races while only one American Boat of a three-boat fleet finished.

Gale V of Detroit, the top U.S. hope and runner-up to Supertest in Friday's first race, was unable to get her engine going. She was out of the race before the start.

Nitrogen Too, leader across the starting line, went dead in the water on the fifth lap.

Only Nitrogen, Nitrogen Too's sister craft from Wilmington, Del, was able to carry the U.S. hopes to the finish. And Nitrogen was about 4 miles behind the zooming Supertest at the end of the 45-mile grind around the Bay of Quinte's 5-mile course.

This was only Canada's second Harmsworth victory since the trophy first was offered by Alfred Harmsworth, a British publisher, in 1903. Supertest, with Bob Hayward at the wheel, won it last year in Detroit.

The United States has won the trophy 16 times and until last year, had held it for 39 years. The race is held only when there is a challenger.

Hayward, Supertest's 32-year-old chicken farmer pilot didn't make his bid until the second turn, entering the home stretch of the first lap. He passed Nitrogen there and took off after Nitrogen Too.

Along the back, 2¼-mile straightaway on the second lap, Hayward let Supertest go. Opening her throttle, Hayward sped past Nitrogen Too and pulled away steadily.

Supertest finished the race with an average speel of 115.48 m.p.h., a shade slower than her first heat record time Friday.

Her best lap time was 126.22 m.p.h. on the second lap when she exceeded Friday's Harmsworth lap record by nearly 2 miles an hour.

HANG ON TO LEAD

Bucs Take 10-7 Duel From Reds

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored six runs in the second inning Saturday and led 8-0 in the fourth but still had to hang on desperately to beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-7 in a free-swinging slugfest.

It was Elroy Face who came on again to stifle the Reds after Cincinnati had cut the Pittsburgh lead to three runs.

Face, the last of three Pittsburgh pitchers, was credited with the victory while young Jim Maloney was the loser.

Gordon Coleman and Gus Bell had home runs for the Reds while Don Hoak hit one out of the park for the Pirates.

In the big second inning Maloney was almost out of trouble with only one run scored. A walk and singles by Roberto Clemente and Smoky Burgess were followed by a run-scoring double play on Hoak's grounder. Singles by Tom Cheney and Bill Virdon drove in two more runs, however.

Joe Nuxhall came on and gave up a run scoring single to Dick Groat. Bob Skinner's double tallied two more.

The Pirates picked up one run in each of the next two innings for an 8-0 lead before the Reds broke into the scoring column.

Coleman drove in three runs with a home run in the fourth.

The Bucs came right back with two more, one of them on Hoak's home run but the Reds got three in their half. They came on Chico Cardenas' double, a single by Vada Pinson and Bell's home run.

The Reds got another in the seventh but Face came on to stop them the rest of the way. In the seventh, singles by Pinson, Bell and Robinson accounted for the run.

14-1 Long Shot Rallies To Win Crosby H'Cap

Danna Hurls Twin City To 16-Inning Win

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Angelo Danna turned in a neat three - hitter and drove in the winning run as the Twin City Merchants of Monroe outlasted Baton Rouge, 3-2, in a 16 inning duel that highlighted the state softball tournament.

Twin City was scheduled to meet Lafayette last night.

Manager Dave McKenzie and Don Nelson sparked the winning attack over the Baton Rouge club with three hits apiece.

After Monroe had notched single runs in the first and third innings, Baton Rouge came back with a pair of game-tying tallies in the fifth. That was all the scoring until the 16th when Danna was walked with the bases loaded, forcing in the third counter.

Twin City dropped its opening game, 3-0, to tournament favorite Opelousas. Danna hurled a brilliant two - hitter in that one, but took the loss.

WILLIAMS STARS

Detroit, Orioles Split Twin Card

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Incomparable Ted Williams provided the drama with a pair of three-run homers in the 8-6 first game victory but Baltimore salvaged a doubleheader split, 6-0, against Boston Saturday night behind Hal Brown's masterful pitching.

Brown, a former Red Sox right-hander, allowed his old mates eight singles while keeping the Orioles in the thick of the American League pennant fight, 2½ games behind pacesetting New York.

Williams, who also singled and drew his 2,000th walk, won the daylight half of the competition by belting two tremendous drives for his 514th and 515 major league homers.

The 35-year-old Brown, getting the starting assignment under the light over young southpaw Steve Barber, allowed only one Boston runner to reach second base.

Brown's support came from Jim Gentile's three-run single and the come-alive batting of Marv Breeding. Breeding had fanned three times in the opener before being lifted for a pinch hitter. At night he doubled twice and brought home both runs on singles by Jackie Brandt and Gene Woodling.

Woodling looped a wrong-field hit to left on a changeup over incharging third baseman Frank Malzone.

The loss went to rookie Earl Wilson as Baltimore ran its season domination of Boston to a 13-4 record.

Williams—who will be 42 in exactly 10 days—was the subject of four standing ovations from the afternoon crowd of 17,437. His second homer on loser Chuck Estrada's first pitch in the sixth put Boston in front to stay, 7-6. The 500-foot smash to the center field bleachers also helped Bill Monbouquette to his 13th victory.

Monbouquette also needed three innings of relief by ace Mike Fornieles.

Ted slammed a 425-foot homer to the home bullpen in right center in the fourth to nudge Boston ahead 4-3. His 2,000th walk made him second only to Babe Ruth's 2,056 in majo league annuals.

Ron Hansen hit a three-run homer in the opener and a run-producing double in the nightcap as he enjoyed a 5-for-9 day and reached 70 RBI.

Brown-Irwin Scrap Heads Mitt Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Only one world champion is in action this week—a thin one in boxing.

Lightweight champ Joe Brown meets Harlow Irwin of Minneapolis in a non-title 10 Thursday night in Minneapolis. The 24-year-old Irwin, who outpointed former lightweight champion Lauro Salas last month, hopes to get a title fight if he makes a good showing.

In the TV fight of the week, Gene Greshan of Detroit meets Duff Vaillant of Cuba, in a 10-round lightweight scrap at Chicago. It will be televised by ABC-TV starting at 9 p.m., EST.

Greshan, 22, was the national AAU lightweight champion in 1957 before turning pro. He has won 25 and lost only once. Vaillant has 16 victories on his record.

Emile Griffith of New York, hoping to get a shot at the welterweight crown some day, takes on Florentino Fernandez of Cuba in one of three 10-rounders at Madison Square Garden in New York on Thursday.

Fernandez, No. 4 ranking welter contender, has an imposing record, having knocked out 21 of 28 opponents.

The other 10s pit Jerry Luede of Canada against Bartolo Soni of the Dominican Republic in a light heavyweight tussle and Hans Werner Wohlers of Germany against Obdukio Nunez of Puerto Rico in a middleweight scrap.

Louise Suggs Takes Lead In Women's Open

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Veteran Louise Suggs of Atlanta whipped around the Asheville Country Club course in 69 strokes Saturday to grab the 36-hole lead in the Asheville Women's Open Golf Tournament with a 141 total.

Her 2-under-par performance put her a stroke ahead of steady-shooting Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., and Jo Ann Prentice of Birmingham, Ala. Miss Rawls, the current women's Open champ, carded her second straight 71 and Miss Prentice had a 70 for 142 totals.

Mickey Wright of Bonita, Calif., who shot the rain-soaked Beaver Lake Club course in 69 Friday, could do no better than a 75 for 144.

Four strokes further at 148 were Marilyn Smith of French Lick, Ind., Joyce Ziske, Waterford, Wis., and Kathy Cornelius of Lakeland, Fla.

SEVERAL QUESTION MARKS

Tulane Faces Usual Tough Slate With Good Backfield

By BOB ANDERSON
World Sports Editor

Tulane's Greenies face their usual rugged schedule, spiced with four attractive intersectional games, with a revamped coaching staff, an experienced backfield and question marks up the middle and on the flanks.

Andy Pilney, beginning his seventh year as head coach of the New Orleans team, will have only 16 lettermen returning from the 1959 team that won three, lost six and tied one. The Greenie mentor has letter - winners back at every position except fullback, where Bill Ary has been switched from halfback.

Newcomers include three new coaches, ex-North Carolina head man George Barclay, Al Kawal and Benne Ellender, the former Greenie quarterback, and 30 sophomores and redshirts.

Brightest spot in sight is the backfield. The Greenies should be able to hold their own in the offensive department with a starting backfield that will probably have Phil Nugent at quarter, Tom Mason and Terry Terrebonne at the halves and Ary at full. Nugent, the clubs total offense leader last fall with 636 yards, is a returning starter while Mason and Terrebonne shared left half last year. Terrebonne was moved over to right half during spring drills.

THE SCHEDULE
Sept. 17—California, there.
Sept. 24—Alabama, home.
Oct. 1—Rice, there.
Oct. 8—Open.
Oct. 15—Ole Miss, home.
Oct. 22—Georgia Tech, there.
Oct. 29—William & Mary, home (Homecoming).
Nov. 5—Texas Tech, there.
Nov. 12—Florida, there.
Nov. 19—Vanderbilt, there.
Nov. 26—LSU, home.

Bob Cornett, 180, a fine punter, divided the quarterback chores with Nugent, 185, last fall and will do the same this campaign if an old back ailment responds to treatment. To back up this duo, Pilney has three highly-regarded sophomores Ted Miller (190), and Ron Melton (175), two Mississippians, and Lafayette's Jack Domingue (190).

The Greenies went in heavily for the air game last fall with Nugent passing for 511 yards and Cornett for 445. Pilney hopes to keep the aerial offense at top form while boosting the running attack. Terrebonne (174) was the team rushing leader last fall with 408 yards, 4.0 yards-per-try, and Mason (195) picked up 336 yards. These two will continue to carry most of the mail with lettermen Bill Osteen (180) and Howard Kisner (160) backing them up. Pilney is also high on sophs Adrian Colon (190) and Sam Camp (195) as well as Ned Edmondson (180), the former Lake Providence flash.

Ary (205) and Gordon Rush, a 195-pound sophomore from Baton Rouge, are considered the top fullbacks at present along with Lenny Stein (195), a returning squadman.

At end, probably the strongest positions on the team last year, three lettermen return and three are gone, Ferriday's Leo Young, Pete Abadie and Bill Brabham. The returnees are former Ouachita star Bill Roach (180), Cameron Gamble (190) and Pat McLean (198). These three will do most of the work on the wings while Clarence Moen (190) and Joe Lasseigne (225) are considered the best of the sophomore prospects.

The situation at tackle is in good hands, those of Bernard Darre, rated an all-SEC prospect and Joe LeSage, both returning starters. Both are big — Barre weighs 220 and LeSage 235 — and capable. Back of them, however, the outlook is hazy. Redshirt Ed Reynolds is big enough (240) and he and sophs Ernest Colquette (205) and Bill Kellum (210) are expected to back up the starters.

Starters John DiVietro and Billy Clements have graduated, leaving lettermen Dave Michiels (215) and Gus Gonzales (210), who turned in excellent relief work at tackle last fall, the heir apparents. The best sophs? Butch Crenshaw (195), Glenn Holcombe (212), Grant Lyons (195) and Larry Culp (210).

Two lettermen centers, Larry Thompson (220) and John Chaisson (205), return with Shreveporter Thompson the best bet to succeed Neal Jones as the starter. Chaisson is currently attending summer school in an effort to bring his grades up to par. Ron Thronton (195), if a leg injury heals. Chris Schaller (200) and Don Miller (195) are the top soph prospects up the middle.

The situation:
ENDS—Weaker.
TACKLES—Better.
GUARDS—Slightly weaker.
CENTER—Weaker.
QUARTERBACK—About same.
HALFBACKS—Better.
FULLBACK—Weaker.
SUMMARY — Will have trouble matching 1959 record against tougher schedule.

BILL ROACH, former Ouachita Parish High School standout, is expected to be one of Tulane's top ends this year. A 180-pound junior, Roach earned his first letter last year and was impressive in spring practice.

EXCEPT STOLEN BASES

Palys Sweeping Southern Titles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big Stan Palys won't lead the Southern Assn. this season in stolen bases but that is just about the only title out of reach of the husky Birmingham outfielder.

Palys, at 30 a 10-year veteran of organized baseball, tacked three points onto his already gaudy batting average last week and sported a .376 mark through games of Aug. 24, according to figures released Saturday by Friend News Service.

Palys, a 6-2, 190-pounder, also led the league in hits with 169, doubles with 35, triples with 12 and total bases with 306. He shared the lead in home runs at 26 with Atlanta first baseman Tim Harkness and Shreveport outfielder Leo Posada by only five rbis. Jay Hankins, Shreveport outfielder, led in runs with 92. Palys had 89.

Ernie Oravetz, 5-foot-5 Chattanooga outfielder, continued upward in the batting race by improving his figure to .331. He lacked only one hit of matching Palys in that category. Jack Kubiszyn, onetime University of Alabama star, retained third place after hiking his batting mark to .326. Posada (.318) and Nashville outfielder Ev Joyner (.315) replaced Al Grandcolas of Chattanooga and Harkness in the top five. The leaders were figured on the basis of a minimum of 300 turns at bat.

Lee Juniors Set Grid Date On Wednesday

Robert E. Lee Junior High gets the fall football season underway Wednesday with the initial practice session under Coach Van Leight.

The Wednesday session, limited to seventh and eighth grade students, is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. at the school gym, and will last approximately two hours Leigh said.

Sixth grade players will report at a later date to be announced after the opening of school.

Leigh, opening his fourth season at Lee, said he expected about 60 boys for the first workout.

Coach Leight said that all boys reporting for practice who do not have their birth certificates on file with the athletic office should bring them with them.

Lee, facing a six-game schedule, will open the season against Jefferson Sept. 20. Last year Lee won five while losing only two.

FRISCO STREAK ENDS

Cubs Win, 9-5, Behind Altman

CHICAGO (AP) — George Altman drove in five runs with a double and a three-run homer Saturday in leading the Chicago Cubs to a 9-5 victory over San Francisco. The triumph smashed a four-game winning streak by the Giants.

Altman doubled home a pair of runs in the third inning and hit his ninth homer in the fourth, as the Cubs wiped out a four-run deficit.

Southpaw Seth Morehead, taking over for starter Moe Drabowsky, was credited with his second victory against seven defeats. Morehead held the Giants to one run and five hits in the last five innings, walking two and fanning six.

The Giants piled up a 4-0 lead in the first three innings but Sad Sam Jones, a 13-game winner, couldn't hold it.

Joe Amalfitano opened the game with a double, took third on a passed ball and scored on Willie Mays' sacrifice fly. Two more runs scored in the second on Hobie Landrith's single and a sacrifice fly by Eddie Bressoud. Orlando Cepeda crashed his 21st homer with two out in the fourth and extended his hitting streak to 14 consecutive games.

The Cubs started Jones on the way to his 14th defeat with three runs in the third. Singles by Elvin Tappe and Bob Will and a walk to Richie Ashburn loaded the sacks. One run scored when Ernie Banks bounced into a force play before Altman doubled in the other two.

Altman's three - run homer capped a five-run, fourth inning rally which also saw Ashburn single home a pair of runs.

Bressoud clubbed his seventh homer in the fifth, but the Cubs offset the run on doubles by Frank Thomas and Morehead in the home half of the inning.

Rookie Hurls Detroit Past Indians, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Bruce, Detroit's late-blooming rookie pitcher, hurled the Tigers to a 4-2 triumph over Cleveland Saturday although he required ninth inning help from Hank Aguirre.

Aguirre, who put down a ninth inning threat in Detroit's Friday night victory over the Indians, came on after Tito Francona led off the inning with his 10th home run. Aguirre allowed a single by Mike De La Hoz, but got Red Wilson to hit into a doubleplay and whizzed a third strike past John Romano.

The victory was Detroit's fourth in succession and the Tigers' seventh in eight starts.

Bruce had lost three straight times until he fired a brilliant two-hitter earlier this week against Chicago for his first major league win. He gave up only six hits this time and walked but two.

Cleveland infielder Ken Aspromonte and third base coach Luke Appling were ejected in the fifth inning for protesting too vigorously when Aspromonte was called out on an attempted steal of second base.

The Tigers scored all their runs off starter Barry Latman, getting single runs in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings.

Al Kaline walked, stole second and scored on Harry Chiti's single for the first run. Two singles and a throwing error by shortstop De La Hoz added another in the third. Chiti and Norm Cash homered for Detroit's other runs.

Francona drove in both Cleveland runs. Two errors by the Detroit infield and Francona's single produced one in the second and his upper deck drive in the ninth accounted for the other.

Giant Sport Stadium Set For Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—Harris County officials Saturday announced plans to build a 15-million-dollar sports center that is to include a 45,000 seat dome-covered baseball stadium.

Holders of the Houston franchise in the defunct Continental Baseball League also announced they are prepared to lease the center for 30 years.

Under current plans, all events in the stadium would be played indoors beneath a 230-foot dome. The stadium would seat 50,000 for football.

Construction of the stadium is expected to begin next January on a 259-acre tract five miles south of downtown Houston. Construction would require 12 months.

The announcement climaxed a series of negotiations that began after an August 2 meeting at which American and National Baseball League representatives agreed upon an expansion plan under which new franchises would be awarded to Continental League members.

Craig Cullinan Jr., chairman of the executive committee of Houston's Continental group, the Houston Sports Association, said his 30-year lease would guarantee necessary revenue bond financing for the center.

Houston baseball territorial rights are held by the Houston Buffs of the American Association. Efforts by Cullinan's group to purchase the Buffs failed several months ago. Since the August 2 meeting at Chicago there had been speculation the two groups soon will resume negotiations in hopes of giving Houston a united front in its bid for a major league franchise.

CASUALNESS CAST ASIDE

Olympic Village Braces For Opening Of Summer Games

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ROME (AP) — Ancient Rome Saturday cast aside her traditional cloak of casualness—even the siesta—and officially braced herself for the 17th Olympic Games, opening Thursday.

While hundreds of additional athletes poured into the orange-brick structures of Olympic village, increasing the population there to almost 3,000, the city fathers threw the switch on a series of emergency measures for the duration of the giant sports festival.

Downtown parking was limited to one hour. Most shops and stores stayed open until 11 p.m. government offices operated only between 10 and 11:30 a.m. And one of this city's most attractive traditions—the 1 to 4 p.m. lunch hour or siesta — was abandoned until the closing curtain Sept. 11.

The city's bustling Via Veneto—the Italian Champs De Elysees where sidewalk sitting and promenading lasts until the early hours of morning—was closed to traffic and turned into a gigantic midtown garden party.

Chairs, tables and umbrellas were moved into the streets to make more room for the anticipated gaiety of invading tourists.

Australia's golden team — a plane-load of track and swimming stars with 37 world records among them—moved into the village and joined the favored Americans and Russians in getting down to serious preparations.

Herb Elliott, Australia's great miler, took a warmup run around the village and then began seeking hilly and sandy areas for more rigorous training. He toughens his legs by running up sand dunes.

"I feel confident I can win the 1,500," said the gaunt Western Australian who has done 3:54.5 in the mile and 3:36 in the 1500. "The man I figure I must beat is Istvan Roszavolgyi of Hungary."

Australia's hardened, sun-tanned swimmers took their first dip in the Olympic training pool and some of them, including John Konrads, complained of the streamlined training program.

"We should have had three more weeks of drills at home," the 18-year-old holder of six free-style records said. "Also, we should have been here earlier, but maybe everything will work out okay."

The strongest American team ever sent to the games began adjusting itself to the humidity of the city and overall appeared in tiptop shape.

"From top to bottom this is our greatest squad ever," said Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "I anticipate a wonderful showing."

Only the track and field athletes and the basketball team, performing in Switzerland over the weekend, still are absent.

The Russian squad was completed with the arrival of another planeload, numbering 64 men and women track performers plus officials. Others coming in included 90 Indonesians and representatives of Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the United Arab Republic, Holland, Peru, Tunisia, Turkey, Britain and France.

The executive committee of the International Olympic Committee completed its sessions and prepared a report for the general IOC meeting Monday. The report deals mainly with political problems, particularly issues involving Nationalist and Communist China.

SWORD DANCER FIFTH

One-Eyed King Wins Arlington

CHICAGO (AP)—Cain Hoy Stable's One-Eyed King Saturday won the $555,150 Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park as the highly regarded Sword Dancer and Dotted Swiss finished out of the money in a five-horse blanket finish.

R. N. Meitus' King Grail, a 16 to 1 shot, was second, a length back of the winner. Third in the field of eight was Hasty House Farm's Martini II. Only a head separated King Grail and Martini II.

Dotted Swiss, seeking his seventh straight victory for C. V. Whitney, missed a money spot by a nose as he finished fourth. Resolved was only another nose back in fifth place. Then came Sword Dancer, the 1959 horse of the year from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable.

One-Eyed King, ridden by Manuel Ycaza and packing 118 pounds, covered the 1 3-16 miles over Arlington's rain - softened grass course in 1:58 3-5.

Both Dotted Swiss and Sword Dancer were running on the turf for the first time. Sword Dancer carried top weight of 126 pounds, three more than Dotted Swiss.

One-Eyed King is a veteran grass runner and won the Green Valley and Donn handicaps last spring on the turf at Gulfstream Park. His Arlington victory was his third in 18 starts this season and was worth $32,100, boosting his total winnings to $119,152.

Jockey Ycaza, telling of his winning ride, said: "One-Eyed King broke good out of the gate and then with three horses fighting for the lead, we stayed back in fourth place. We made our move gradually from the three-eighths pole and really turned it on past the quarter pole."

Eddie Arcaro, up on Sword Dancer, said he thought the Dancer moved up well and handled the grass all right, adding, "but he is a little horse and just doesn't handle that much weight too well."

Willie Shoemaker, who rode Dotted Swiss took to the grass pretty good, considering it was his first time on it."

Scottish Mat Champ Slated Here Monday

A grappler reputed to be the champion of Scotland makes his local debut at the B&B Arena Monday night, heading an attractive card of three full - length matches.

Ray Andrews will carry the Scottish title into the ring against Firpo Zybysko in the first match of the night. Little is known about Andrews, except that he's a claimant to the crown. Zybysko, on the other hand, needs no introduction to the local crowd, having established himself months ago as a crafty ring veteran.

Zybysko drew the fans' wrath while refereeing last Monday night and probably will restrict his ring work to actual wrestling.

The other matches on tap send veteran Al Massey against Ken Cooper in a rematch and Tiger Rod Rivera takes on Tony Jiminez in the finale.

Massey, a sometime referee, draws another chance at Cooper after being disqualified in the third round of their bout last week.

All three battles are scheduled over one-hour time limits with two falls to win.

Officiating Monday's action will probably be either Harvey Cole or Bob Morrow.

Neville Opens Football Ticket Sales Monday

Ticket sales for the four Neville home football games will be placed on sale Monday in the school office, secretary Dorothy Hodge said yesterday.

Sales will continue each week day from 8-11:30 a.m. and from 1-3 p.m. Reserved tickets are priced at $1.25. Box seats are $1.75.

Home games include: Sept. 16 — Bastrop, Sept. 23 — Farmerville (homecoming), Oct. 7 — Jonebsoro - Hodge and Oct. 14 — Ruston.

The Tigers open the season against Ouachita at Lion Stadium.

Lee Juniors Set Grid Date On Wednesday

Robert E. Lee Junior High gets the fall football season underway Wednesday with the initial practice session under Coach Van Leight.

The Wednesday session, limited to seventh and eighth grade students, is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. at the school gym, and will last approximately two hours Leigh said.

Sixth grade players will report at a later date to be announced after the opening of school.

Leigh, opening his fourth season at Lee, said he expected about 60 boys for the first workout.

Coach Leight said that all boys reporting for practice who do not have their birth certificates on file with the athletic office should bring them with them.

Lee, facing a six-game schedule, will open the season against Jefferson Sept. 20. Last year Lee won five while losing only two.

FRISCO STREAK ENDS

Cubs Win, 9-5, Behind Altman

CHICAGO (AP) — George Altman drove in five runs with a double and a three-run homer Saturday in leading the Chicago Cubs to a 9-5 victory over San Francisco. The triumph smashed a four-game winning streak by the Giants.

Altman doubled home a pair of runs in the third inning and hit his ninth homer in the fourth, as the Cubs wiped out a four-run deficit.

Southpaw Seth Morehead, taking over for starter Moe Drabowsky, was credited with his second victory against seven defeats. Morehead held the Giants to one run and five hits in the last five innings, walking two and fanning six.

The Giants piled up a 4-0 lead in the first three innings but Sad Sam Jones, a 13-game winner, couldn't hold it.

Joe Amalfitano opened the game with a double, took third on a passed ball and scored on Willie Mays' sacrifice fly. Two more runs scored in the second on Hobie Landrith's single and a sacrifice fly by Eddie Bressoud. Orlando Cepeda crashed his 21st homer with two out in the fourth and extended his hitting streak to 14 consecutive games.

The Cubs started Jones on the way to his 14th defeat with three runs in the third. Singles by Elvin Tappe and Bob Will and a walk to Richie Ashburn loaded the sacks. One run scored when Ernie Banks bounced into a force play before Altman doubled in the other two.

Altman's three-run homer capped a five-run, fourth inning rally which also saw Ashburn single home a pair of runs.

Bressoud clubbed his seventh homer in the fifth, but the Cubs offset the run on doubles by Frank Thomas and Morehead in the home half of the inning.

Rookie Hurls Detroit Past Indians, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Bruce, Detroit's late-blooming rookie pitcher, hurled the Tigers to a 4-2 triumph over Cleveland Saturday although he required ninth inning help from Hank Aguirre.

Aguirre, who put down a ninth inning threat in Detroit's Friday night victory over the Indians, came on after Tito Francona led off the inning with his 10th home run. Aguirre allowed a single by Mike De La Hoz, but got Red Wilson to hit into a doubleplay and whizzed a third strike past John Romano.

The victory was Detroit's fourth in succession and the Tigers' seventh in eight starts.

Bruce had lost three straight times until he fired a brilliant two-hitter earlier this week against Chicago for his first major league win. He gave up only six hits this time and walked but two.

Cleveland infielder Ken Aspromonte and third base coach Luke Appling were ejected in the fifth inning for protesting too vigorously when Aspromonte was called out on an attempted steal of second base.

The Tigers scored all their runs off starter Barry Latman, getting single runs in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings.

Al Kaline walked, stole second and scored on Harry Chiti's single for the first run. Two singles and a throwing error by shortstop De La Hoz added another in the third. Chiti and Norm Cash homered for Detroit's other runs.

Francona drove in both Cleveland runs. Two errors by the Detroit infield and Francona's single produced one in the second and his upper deck drive in the ninth accounted for the other.

EXCEPT STOLEN BASES

Palys Sweeping Southern Titles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big Stan Palys won't lead the Southern Assn. this season in stolen bases but that is just about the only title out of reach of the husky Birmingham outfielder.

Palys, at 30 a 10-year veteran of organized baseball, tacked three points onto his already gaudy batting average last week and sported a .376 mark through games of Aug. 24, according to figures released Saturday by Friend News Service.

Palys, a 6-2, 190-pounder, also led the league in hits with 169, doubles with 35, triples with 12 and total bases with 306. He shared the lead in home runs at 26 with Atlanta first baseman Tim Harkness and Shreveport outfielder Leo Posada by only five rbis. Jay Hankins, Shreveport outfielder, led in runs with 92. Palys had 89.

Ernie Oravetz, 5-foot-5 Chattanooga outfielder, continued upward in the batting race by improving his figure to .331. He lacked only one hit of matching Palys in that category. Jack Kubiszyn, onetime University of Alabama star, retained third place after hiking his batting mark to .326. Posada (.318) and Nashville outfielder Ev Joyner (.315) replaced Al Grandcolas of Chattanooga and Harkness in the top five. The leaders were figured on the basis of a minimum of 300 turns at bat.

Despite Palys, Birmingham sagged to a team batting figure of .265, sixth in the league. Atlanta owned the top team average, 278 to .273 for Shreveport.

Giant Sport Stadium Set For Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—Harris County officials Saturday announced plans to build a 15-million-dollar sports center that is to include a 45,000 seat dome-covered baseball stadium.

Holders of the Houston franchise in the defunct Continental Baseball League also announced they are prepared to lease the center for 30 years.

Under current plans, all events in the stadium would be played indoors beneath a 230-foot dome. The stadium would seat 50,000 for football.

Construction of the stadium is expected to begin next January on a 259-acre tract five miles south of downtown Houston. Construction would require 12 months.

The announcement climaxed a series of negotiations that began after an August 2 meeting at which American and National Baseball League representatives agreed upon an expansion plan under which new franchises would be awarded to Continental League members.

Craig Cullinan Jr., chairman of the executive committee of Houston's Continental group, the Houston Sports Association, said his 30-year lease would guarantee necessary revenue bond financing for the center.

Houston baseball territorial rights are held by the Houston Buffs of the American Association. Efforts by Cullinan's group to purchase the Buffs failed several months ago. Since the August 2 meeting at Chicago there had been speculation the two groups soon will resume negotiations in hopes of giving Houston a united front in its bid for a major league franchise.

CASUALNESS CAST ASIDE

Olympic Village Braces For Opening Of Summer Games

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ROME (AP) — Ancient Rome Saturday cast aside her traditional cloak of casualness—even the siesta—and officially braced herself for the 17th Olympic Games, opening Thursday.

While hundreds of additional athletes poured into the orange-brick structures of Olympic village, increasing the population there to almost 3,000, the city fathers threw the switch on a series of emergency measures for the duration of the giant sports festival.

Downtown parking was limited to one hour. Most shops and stores stayed open until 11 p.m. government offices operated only between 10 and 11:30 a.m. And one of this city's most attractive traditions—the 1 to 4 p.m. lunch hour or siesta — was abandoned until the closing curtain Sept. 11.

The city's bustling Via Veneto—the Italian Champs De Elysees where sidewalk sitting and promenading lasts until the early hours of morning—was closed to traffic and turned into a gigantic midtown garden party.

Chairs, tables and umbrellas were moved into the streets to make more room for the anticipated gaiety of invading tourists.

Australia's golden team — a plane-load of track and swimming stars with 37 world records among them—moved into the village and joined the favored Americans and Russians in getting down to serious preparations.

Herb Elliott, Australia's great miler, took a warmup run around the village and then began seeking hilly and sandy areas for more rigorous training. He toughens his legs by running up sand dunes.

"I feel confident I can win the 1,500," said the gaunt Western Australian who has done 3:54.5 in the mile and 3:36 in the 1500. "The man I figure I must beat is Istvan Roszavolgyi of Hungary."

Australia's hardened, sun-tanned swimmers took their first dip in the Olympic training pool and some of them, including John Konrads, complained of the streamlined training program.

"We should have had three more weeks of drills at home," the 18-year-old holder of six free-style records said. "Also, we should have been here earlier, but maybe everything will work out okay."

The strongest American team ever sent to the games began adjusting itself to the humidity of the city and overall appeared in tiptop shape.

"From top to bottom this is our greatest squad ever," said Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "I anticipate a wonderful showing."

Only the track and field athletes and the basketball team, performing in Switzerland over the weekend, still are absent.

The Russian squad was completed with the arrival of another planeload, numbering 64 men and women track performers plus officials. Others coming in included 90 Indonesians and representatives of Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the United Arab Republic, Holland, Peru, Tunisia, Turkey, Britain and France.

The executive committee of the International Olympic Committee completed its sessions and prepared a report for the general IOC meeting Monday. The report deals mainly with political problems, particularly issues involving Nationalist and Communist China.

SWORD DANCER FIFTH

One-Eyed King Wins Arlington

CHICAGO (AP)—Cain Hoy Stable's One-Eyed King Saturday won the $555,150 Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park as the highly regarded Sword Dancer and Dotted Swiss finished out of the money in a five-horse blanket finish.

R. N. Meitus' King Grail, a 16 to 1 shot, was second, a length back of the winner. Third in the field of eight was Hasty House Farm's Martini II. Only a head separated King Grail and Martini II.

Dotted Swiss, seeking his seventh straight victory for C. V. Whitney, missed a money spot by a nose as he finished fourth. Resolved was only another nose back in fifth place. Then came Sword Dancer, the 1959 horse of the year from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable.

One-Eyed King, ridden by Manuel Ycaza and packing 118 pounds, covered the 1 3-16 miles over Arlington's rain - softened grass course in 1:58 3-5.

Both Dotted Swiss and Sword Dancer were running on the turf for the first time. Sword Dancer carried top weight of 126 pounds, three more than Dotted Swiss.

One-Eyed King is a veteran grass runner and won the Green Valley and Donn handicaps last spring on the turf at Gulfstream Park. His Arlington victory was his third in 18 starts this season and was worth $32,100, boosting his total winnings to $119,152.

Jockey Ycaza, telling of his winning ride, said: "One-Eyed King broke good out of the gate and then with three horses fighting for the lead, we stayed back in fourth place. We made our move gradually from the three-eighths pole and really turned it on past the quarter pole."

Eddie Arcaro, up on Sword Dancer, said he thought the Dancer moved up well and handled the grass all right, adding, "but he is a little horse and just doesn't handle that much weight too well."

Willie Shoemaker, who rode Dotted Swiss took to the grass pretty good, considering it was his first time on it."

Scottish Mat Champ Slated Here Monday

A grappler reputed to be the champion of Scotland makes his local debut at the B&B Arena Monday night, heading an attractive card of three full - length matches.

Ray Andrews will carry the Scottish title into the ring against Firpo Zybysko in the first match of the night. Little is known about Andrews, except that he's a claimant to the crown. Zybysko, on the other hand, needs no introduction to the local crowd, having established himself months ago as a crafty ring veteran.

Zybysko drew the fans' wrath while refereeing last Monday night and probably will restrict his ring work to actual wrestling.

The other matches on tap send veteran Al Massey against Ken Cooper in a rematch and Tiger Rod Rivera takes on Tony Jiminez in the finale.

Massey, a sometime referee, draws another chance at Cooper after being disqualified in the third round of their bout last week.

All three battles are scheduled over one-hour time limits with two falls to win.

Officiating Monday's action will probably be either Harvey Cole or Bob Morrow.

OLYMPIC GAMES BIG TEST

U.S. May Regain Lead In World Amateur Sports

By TED SMITS

ROME (AP)—This could be the Olympic Games in which the United States wrests back from Russia world leadership in amateur sports.

If so, it will be by the narrowest of margins. The Games open Thursday.

Phenomenal pre-games performances by Yankee track and swimming athletes, indications of a decline or at least a slow-up in Russia's sensational athletic progress, plus a curtailment of the medals bestowed in gymnastic—Russia's No. 1 sport—have all contributed to a shift in the balance of athletic power.

As dopesters see it, the United States can win 39 and possibly more gold medals, Russia 38, with the combined German team solidly in third place with 16. Following these leaders are Austria 8, Japan 8, Hungary 5, Poland 5, Italy 5, and Turkey 5.

The United States won 32 gold medals at the 1956 Games in Melbourne, and a total of 74 counting silver and bronze. Russia won 37 gold and a total of 98, clearly emerging as team champion on the basis of the unofficial figures.

At the 1952 games in Helsinki, the United States barely beat out Russia for team honors after having occupied the Olympic pinnacle almost unchallenged since the start of the Games in 1896.

Never has a nation sent into competition a track and field team of such power as the United States will here. Track and field runs from Aug. 31-Sept. 10, and the United States will put in action these men who hold the world record in their events or have a record mark pending:

Ray Norton, Dave Sime, and Stone Johnson, Sprints; Glenn Davis, 400 meter hurdles; John Thomas, high jump; Parry O'Brien and Bill Nieder, shot; Ralph Boston, broad jump; Don Bragg, pole vault; Hal Connolly, hammer; Bill Alley, javelin and Rafer, Johnson, decathlon.

There is no such thing as an official team championship in the Olympics. Sports fans, however, persist in keeping score.

The Associated Press will follow tradition in tabulating an unofficial score on the basis of 10 points for first, and 5,4,3,2, for the other five places in all events in which a gold medal is awarded. Team sports in this individual calculation count as a single medal, although each member of the winnning basketball and soccer teams,. for instance, gets a gold medal.

Tabulation will also be kept on the same point basis by individual sports. That is to say, after men's track and field is completed the total points will be added up and each nation credited on a master list with 10 points for first place in the sport, with 5,4,3,2,1 distributed as in individual events.

Here is a capsule rundown of Olympic sports with gold medal predictions:

Men's track and field—all-powerful in the field events, the United States may have trouble this time in the shorter races. But even then Americans should get 14 gold medals, one less than was won at Melbourne. Russia is picked for 3, Germany 2, Australia 2 and other nations 6.

Women's track and field—here Russia comes into its own with the Press sisters and should pick up 4 gold medals, with Australia taking 2, the United States 1, and other nations 3.

Men's swimming—Australia is fighting to retain supremacy won at Melbourne, but pre-games indications are that the United States can win 6 out of the 10 gold medals with Australia taking 2 and Japan 2.

Women's swimming—here again the United States is favored to get back on top with 6 gold medals, compared to 2 for Australia and 1 for the Netherlands.

Basketball—the United States team is the clear favorite to win with Russia second.

Boxing—Russia should pick up 3 gold medals, the United States 2, Germany 2, and other nations 3.

Canoeing—Russia and Germany could win 2 each with others taking 3.

Cycling—Italy is due to get 3 with the other 3 scattered.

Equestrian — Germany looks good for 2, the United States 1, and others 2.

Fencing—this is Hungary's sport with 3, followed by Russia with 2 and other nations 3.

Gymnastics—here Russia scored its best, taking at least 10 gold medals with Japan picking up 4.

Field hockey—India should win as usual.

Modern pentathlon — Russia gets 2 gold medals.

Rowing — the surprising Germans should get at least 4 medals with the United States hoping to pick up 3.

Shooting — Russia gets 2, the United States 1, and others 5.

Soccer—this looks like Yugoslavia's championship.

Water polo—Hungary, always strong, is favored.

Weight lifting—Russia is expected to edge the United States, 4 championships to 3.

Greco-Roman wrestling—Russia can get 3, Turkey 2 and others 3.

Yachting—Denmark should win 2, the United States 1 and others 2.

Clyde Nash is in third place with 144 and Jack Rivers holds down fourth with 147.

Today's pairings:

DRUBS OPPOSITION

U.S. Track Team In Warm-Up Meet

BERN, Switzerland (AP)—The U.S. Olympic track team warmed up for next week's Rome Games Saturday night by swamping mediocre opposition from seven European countries without straining a muscle.

The Yanks performed just well enough to win every event except the 1,500 meters where Austria's Josef Ceglide crashed through. A capacity crowd of 18,000 in Bern Stadium cheered the Americans.

Best performance of the night came from Glenn Davis, America's gold medal hurdler who competed in the 200-meter hurdles for the first time in three years and recorded a time of 22.5 seconds in beating teammate Dick Howard.

Long after the meet ended, surprised officials said on consulting the record book they found he had matched the world mark of: 22.5 for the event around a curve set by West Germany's Marin Lauer.

"I was surprised to hear that," Davis said, "and I am very gratified."

Next to Davis' effort, the top American performance was made by the 400-meter relay team, which was timed in :40.2, only seven tenths of a second off the world mark. Hayes Jones, Paul Winder, Stone Johnson and Ray Norton handled the baton.

Meet officials decided to conduct the 100 meter and 400 meter races in two separate heats without finals.

In the century, Norton demonstrated his superiority with the best time of the night, 10.4 seconds. Dave Sime and Winder raced in :10.5, finishing the second race in a dead heat.

The Yanks smothered the competition in the 400-meter heats as well, led by Otis Davis in :45.6. He said he found "the track a little heavy and I could not really hit my stride but I'm satisifed and I'm ready."

An Austrian and a German crashed through the American supremacy in the 1,500 meters, Cegledi triumphing in 3:46.8. Cegledi's final burst took him past Germany's Herbert Missalla, who clocked an even 3:47.0. America's Pete Close coasted in third in 3:47.2, a step ahead of teammate Phil Coleman.

John Thomas, the world's record breaking high jumper who has consistently topped 7 feet, took it easy in winning the eight-man event with a best effort of 6-9⅛. Second was teammate Joe Faust of Culver City, Calif., with 6-7⅛.

Thomas commented that he feels "okay but it's the first time I've jumped in Europe. I feel fine for the Olympic Games."

Max Truex, pint-sized distance runner from Warsaw, Ind., lapped the field in the gruelling 10,000-meter run in the good time of 29 minutes, 35.8 seconds.

America's champion in the hammer throw, Harold Connolly, easily won the event in a field of five but did not extend himself with a best throw of 215-10½. Poland's Tedeusz Rut was second with 215-1.

Amateur Takes Golf Crown In Aussie Tourney

PERTH, Australia, (AP) — Bruce Devlin won the Australian Open Golf Championship Saturday, the first amateur to do so since 1939. His triumph also clinched a place for him on the Australian team to defend the Eisenhower Trophy at Ardmore, Pa., Sept 28 Oct. 1.

Devlin, who won the Eisenhower individual honors at St. Andrews two years ago, shot 282 although he zoomed to 75 on the first day after three previous rounds of 69. Ted Ball, Australian amateur champ, was second with 283.

After the tourney the Australian Eisenhower team was named. On it with Devlin and Ball are Jack Coogan and Eric Routley with Phil Billings as a reserve. Routley was designated captain.

Tickets For Northeast Grid Games On Sale

Northeast Louisiana State College Monday begins its sale of season tickets for the Indians' four home football games this fall.

Athletic Director Jack Rowan said the tickets will be on sale at the college and at three local businesses. Tickets may be bought at the college from the Athletic Office in Brown Hall. The business firms which will sell tickets are Simmons' Esso Servicenter, 21 Louisville Ave.; Calvert Drug Store, 308 Trenton, West Monroe; and R&A Jewelers, 323 DeSiard.

Season tickets will sell for $7 — $1 less than a fan would pay for a $2 reserve ticket to each of the four games.

Northeast opens its season Sept. 17 in Brown Stadium against Arkansas State College in a Parents' Day contest. The next home game is against Northwestern Oct. 8 as a climax to Northeast's Homecoming activities. The final two home games come Nov. 12 against Jacksonville state College of Alabama and Nov. 19 against Louisiana Tech.

37 Prospects Report For Jena Drills

JENA (Special) — Jena high school football coach Jim Gilbert reports 37 young men have begun drills this week in preparation for the 1960-61 football season.

The team includes nine returning lettermen from last year's squad and two men who lettered the year before.

A breakdown by grade shows eleven seniors, seven juniors, nine sophomores and ten freshmen.

Snce practice started Monday, Coach Gilbert, assisted by Gayle Dick, junior high coach Billy Harper and head basketball coach Winberry, has put the team through fundamentals and conditioning calisthenics. The boys will start popping leather early next week in scrimmage practice.

The team will open the season on September 3 playing Menard in the Cosmopolitan Bowl in Alexandria. The first regular season game will be against Block high at Jonesville on September 9.

Schaus Named To Coach Los Angeles Team

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Basketball Coach Fred A. Schaus of the University of West Virginia Saturday was named head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association.

The Lakers, formerly of Minneapolis, will play their first NBA game under their new franchise Oct. 23.

Schaus, 35, guided the Mountaineers of West Virginia to a Southern Conference championship during each year of his six-year reign.

In 1959 the Mountaineers reached the NCAA finals but lost to California 71-70. Schaus's overall record at West Virginia was 164-37.

Schaus, a native of Newark, Ohio, played four years with Fort Wayne and one with New York in the NBA.

He coached the U.S. team that won the 1959 Pan-American Games title in Chicago.

Indiana Driver Laps Field In 100-Mile Race

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Jim Packard of Speedway, Ind., won the 100-mile U.S. Auto Club championship race at the Illinois State Fair Saturday on a muddy track before a capacity crowd of 35,000.

Packard lapped all of the 18 starters except second-place finisher, Eddie Sachs of Outer Valley, Pa. Packard won a purse of about $20,000.

Only eight of the Indianapolis 500-mile type cars finished the race.

Dodgers Nip Cards By 2-1 For 3rd Spot

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An inning away from their second straight 1-0 defeat, the Los Angeles Dodgers came to life on Gil Hodges' two-run ninth-inning double to the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, and slip past them into third place in the National League Saturday.

Until the ninth the Redbirds and lefty Curt Simmons had the game won on rookie Charley James' first major league homer. James' homer was a first-inning drive off southpaw Danny McDevitt in a game then delayed nearly two hours by rain.

The veteran Hodges followed with a line drive which was fair by less than a foot down the right field line, scoring Gilliam and the fleet Davis.

St. Louis, which won last night on three hits and had this one apparently on the same slim total, threatened briefly in the ninth when Walt Moryn opened with a single for the fourth Redbird hit. But Larry Sherry, third L. A. pitcher, choked off the rally to preserve his 12th victory in 20 decisions. Simmons now is 4-3.

Davis' 20-game streak ties the longest in the National League so far this season, by Pancho Herrera of Philadelphia.

AFL Group To Hold Meeting In New York

DALLAS (AP) — Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League announced Saturday that the league's executive committee will meet Thursday and Friday in New York to discuss such items as the championship playoff, the next player draft and the television contract.

Also they will talk about a post-season all-star game between top players of the Eastern and Western divisions.

The AFL's 10 million dollar antitrust suit against the National League will get a progress report from the lawyers.

Group insurance for AFL players, this to be paid by the member clubs, is planned.

Foss said some policy changes may come out of the meeting. "We're almost through our pre-season schedule," he said, "and we may want to iron out things that could not be foreseen four weeks ago, but have cropped up during the pre-season games."

The executive committee is made up of the presidents of the eight clubs in the league—Oakland Dallas, Houston, Boston, Buffalo, Los Angeles, Denver and New York.

Schoendienst On Sidelines

MILWAUKEE (AP)—John McHale, general manager of the Milwaukee Braves, said Saturday he did not know when Red Schoendienst, veteran second baseman sidelined with a groin injury, would be able to rejoin the team.

Schiendienst went to St. Louis a week ago for a checkup with his physician after he sustained the groin injury. The infielder planned to rejoin the Braves Thursday. McHale said, however, he had received no word from Schoendienst when he would be able to report.

CHEVROLET

Few trucks are subjected to the body-wracking beatings that are part of a day's work for this Chevrolet Series 60 pulpwood hauler. It's owned by J. E. Fox, North Carolina logging contractor. As Bobby Fox, a partner in the business says, "Loaded with pulpwood, we drive over stumps and potholes you'd think would tear the truck to pieces. These trails would shake the cab off an ordinary truck, but not our Chevy. We can average an extra load a day . . . make $45 to $50 a day more with this Chevy than we can with the others."

In every weight class these Chevies are doing more work at less expense than trucks have ever done before. Drive one at your Chevrolet dealer's. It's an experience that could pay you big dividends.

"That 6-cylinder engine really performs," says Bobby Fox. "It's got the lugging power we need in the woods and walks right along with a full load on the highway."

OLYMPIC GAMES BIG TEST

U.S. May Regain Lead In World Amateur Sports

By TED SMITS

ROME (AP)—This could be the Olympic Games in which the United States wrests back from Russia world leadership in amateur sports.

If so, it will be by the narrowest of margins. The Games open Thursday.

Phenomenal pre-games performances by Yankee track and swimming athletes, indications of a decline or at least a slow-up in Russia's sensational athletic progress, plus a curtailment of the medals bestowed in gymnastic—Russia's No. 1 sport—have all contributed to a shift in the balance of athletic power.

As dopesters see it, the United States can win 39 and possibly more gold medals, Russia 38, with the combined German team solidly in third place with 16. Following these leaders are Austria 8, Japan 8, Hungary 5, Poland 5, Italy 5, and Turkey 5.

The United States won 32 gold medals at the 1956 Games in Melbourne, and a total of 74 counting silver and bronze. Russia won 37 gold and a total of 98, clearly emerging as team champion on the basis of the unofficial figures.

At the 1952 games in Helsinki, the United States barely beat out Russia for team honors after having occupied the Olympic pinnacle almost unchallenged since the start of the Games in 1896.

Never has a nation sent into competition a track and field team of such power as the United States will here. Track and field runs from Aug. 31-Sept. 10, and the United States will put in action these men who hold the world record in their events or have a record mark pending:

Ray Norton, Dave Sime, and Stone Johnson, Sprints; Glenn Davis, 400 meter hurdles; John Thomas, high jump; Parry O'Brien and Bill Nieder, shot; Ralph Boston, broad jump; Don Bragg, pole vault; Hal Connolly, hammer; Bill Alley, javelin and Rafer, Johnson, decathlon.

There is no such thing as an official team championship in the Olympics. Sports fans, however, persist in keeping score.

The Associated Press will follow tradition in tabulating an unofficial score on the basis of 10 points for first, and 5,4,3,2, for the other five places in all events in which a gold medal is awarded. Team sports in this individual calculation count as a single medal, although each member of the winnning basketball and soccer teams,. for instance, gets a gold medal.

Tabulation will also be kept on the same point basis by individual sports. That is to say, after men's track and field is completed the total points will be added up and each nation credited on a master list with 10 points for first place in the sport, with 5,4,3,2,1 distributed as in individual events.

Here is a capsule rundown of Olympic sports with gold medal predictions:

Men's track and field—all-powerful in the field events, the United States may have trouble this time in the shorter races. But even then Americans should get 14 gold medals, one less than was won at Melbourne. Russia is picked for 3, Germany 2, Australia 2 and other nations 6.

Women's track and field—here Russia comes into its own with the Press sisters and should pick up 4 gold medals, with Australia taking 2, the United States 1, and other nations 3.

Men's swimming—Australia is fighting to retain supremacy won at Melbourne, but pre-games indications are that the United States can win 6 out of the 10 gold medals with Australia taking 2 and Japan 2.

Women's swimming—here again the United States is favored to get back on top with 6 gold medals, compared to 2 for Australia and 1 for the Netherlands.

Basketball—the United States team is the clear favorite to win with Russia second.

Boxing—Russia should pick up 3 gold medals, the United States 2, Germany 2, and other nations 3.

Canoeing—Russia and Germany could win 2 each with others taking 3.

Cycling—Italy is due to get 3 with the other 3 scattered.

Equestrian — Germany looks good for 2, the United States 1, and others 2.

Fencing—this is Hungary's sport with 3, followed by Russia with 2 and other nations 3.

Gymnastics—here Russia scored its best, taking at least 10 gold medals with Japan picking up 4.

Field hockey—India should win as usual.

Modern pentathlon — Russia gets 2 gold medals.

Rowing — the surprising Germans should get at least 4 medals with the United States hoping to pick up 3.

Shooting — Russia gets 2, the United States 1, and others 5.

Soccer—this looks like Yugoslavia's championship.

Water polo—Hungary, always strong, is favored.

Weight lifting—Russia is expected to edge the United States, 4 championships to 3.

Greco-Roman wrestling—Russia can get 3, Turkey 2 and others 3.

Yachting—Denmark should win 2, the United States 1 and others 2.

DRUBS OPPOSITION

U.S. Track Team In Warm-Up Meet

BERN, Switzerland (AP)—The U.S. Olympic track team warmed up for next week's Rome Games Saturday night by swamping mediocre opposition from seven European countries without straining a muscle.

The Yanks performed just well enough to win every event except the 1,500 meters where Austria's Josef Ceglide crashed through. A capacity crowd of 18,000 in Bern Stadium cheered the Americans.

Best performance of the night came from Glenn Davis, America's gold medal hurdler who competed in the 200-meter hurdles for the first time in three years and recorded a time of 22.5 seconds in beating teammate Dick Howard.

Long after the meet ended, surprised officials said on consulting the record book they found he had matched the world mark of: 22.5 for the event around a curve set by West Germany's Marin Lauer.

"I was surprised to hear that," Davis said, "and I am very gratified."

Next to Davis' effort, the top American performance was made by the 400-meter relay team, which was timed in :40.2, only seven tenths of a second off the world mark. Hayes Jones, Paul Winder, Stone Johnson and Ray Norton handled the baton.

Meet officials decided to conduct the 100 meter and 400 meter races in two separate heats without finals.

In the century, Norton demonstrated his superiority with the best time of the night, 10.4 seconds. Dave Sime and Winder raced in :10.5, finishing the second race in a dead heat.

The Yanks smothered the competition in the 400-meter heats as well, led by Otis Davis in :45.6. He said he found "the track a little heavy and I could not really hit my stride but I'm satisifed and I'm ready."

An Austrian and a German crashed through the American supremacy in the 1,500 meters, Cegledi triumphing in 3:46.8. Cegledi's final burst took him past Germany's Herbert Missalla, who clocked an even 3:47.0. America's Pete Close coasted in third in 3:47.2, a step ahead of teammate Phil Coleman.

John Thomas, the world's record breaking high jumper who has consistently topped 7 feet, took it easy in winning the eight-man event with a best effort of 6-9⅛. Second was teammate Joe Faust of Culver City, Calif., with 6-7⅛.

Thomas commented that he feels "okay but it's the first time I've jumped in Europe. I feel fine for the Olympic Games."

Max Truex, pint-sized distance runner from Warsaw, Ind., lapped the field in the gruelling 10,000-meter run in the good time of 29 minutes, 35.8 seconds.

America's champion in the hammer throw, Harold Connolly, easily won the event in a field of five but did not extend himself with a best throw of 215-10½. Poland's Tedeusz Rut was second with 215-1.

Amateur Takes Golf Crown In Aussie Tourney

PERTH, Australia, (AP) — Bruce Devlin won the Australian Open Golf Championship Saturday, the first amateur to do so since 1939. His triumph also clinched a place for him on the Australian team to defend the Eisenhower Trophy at Ardmore, Pa., Sept 28 Oct. 1.

Devlin, who won the Eisenhower individual honors at St. Andrews two years ago, shot 282 although he zoomed to 75 on the first day after three previous rounds of 69. Ted Ball, Australian amateur champ, was second with 283.

After the tourney the Australian Eisenhower team was named. On it with Devlin and Ball are Jack Coogan and Eric Routley with Phil Billings as a reserve. Routley was designated captain.

Schaus Named To Coach Los Angeles Team

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Basketball Coach Fred A. Schaus of the University of West Virginia Saturday was named head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association.

The Lakers, formerly of Minneapolis, will play their first NBA game under their new franchise Oct. 23.

Schaus, 35, guided the Mountaineers of West Virginia to a Southern Conference championship during each year of his six-year reign.

In 1959 the Mountaineers reached the NCAA finals but lost to California 71-70. Schaus's overall record at West Virginia was 164-37.

Schaus, a native of Newark, Ohio, played four years with Fort Wayne and one with New York in the NBA.

He coached the U.S. team that won the 1959 Pan-American Games title in Chicago.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Jim Packard of Speedway, Ind., won the 100-mile U.S. Auto Club championship race at the Illinois State Fair Saturday on a muddy track before a capacity crowd of 35,000.

Packard lapped all of the 18 starters except second-place finisher, Eddie Sachs of Outer Valley, Pa. Packard won a purse of about $20,000.

Only eight of the Indianapolis 500-mile type cars finished the race.

Dodgers Nip Cards By 2-1 For 3rd Spot

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An inning away from their second straight 1-0 defeat, the Los Angeles Dodgers came to life on Gil Hodges' two-run ninth-inning double to the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, and slip past them into third place in the National League Saturday.

Until the ninth the Redbirds and lefty Curt Simmons had the game won on rookie Charley James' first major league homer. James' homer was a first-inning drive off southpaw Danny McDevitt in a game then delayed nearly two hours by rain.

The veteran Hodges followed with a line drive which was fair by less than a foot down the right field line, scoring Gilliam and the fleet Davis.

St. Louis, which won last night on three hits and had this one apparently on the same slim total, threatened briefly in the ninth when Walt Moryn opened with a single for the fourth Redbird hit. But Larry Sherry, third L. A. pitcher, choked off the rally to preserve his 12th victory in 20 decisions. Simmons now is 4-3.

Davis' 20-game streak ties the longest in the National League so far this season, by Pancho Herrera of Philadelphia.

Tickets For Northeast Grid Games On Sale

Northeast Louisiana State College Monday begins its sale of season tickets for the Indians' four home football games this fall.

Athletic Director Jack Rowan said the tickets will be on sale at the college and at three local businesses. Tickets may be bought at the college from the Athletic Office in Brown Hall. The business firms which will sell tickets are Simmons' Esso Servicenter, 21 Louisville Ave.; Calvert Drug Store, 308 Trenton, West Monroe; and R&A Jewelers, 323 DeSiard.

Season tickets will sell for $7 — $1 less than a fan would pay for a $2 reserve ticket to each of the four games.

Northeast opens its season Sept. 17 in Brown Stadium against Arkansas State College in a Parents' Day contest. The next home game is against Northwestern Oct. 8 as a climax to Northeast's Homecoming activities. The final two home games come Nov. 12 against Jacksonville state College of Alabama and Nov. 19 against Louisiana Tech.

JENA (Special) — Jena high school football coach Jim Gilbert reports 37 young men have begun drills this week in preparation for the 1960-61 football season.

The team includes nine returning lettermen from last year's squad and two men who lettered the year before.

A breakdown by grade shows eleven seniors, seven juniors, nine sophomores and ten freshmen.

Snce practice started Monday, Coach Gilbert, assisted by Gayle Dick, junior high coach Billy Harper and head basketball coach Winberry, has put the team through fundamentals and conditioning calisthenics. The boys will start popping leather early next week in scrimmage practice.

The team will open the season on September 3 playing Menard in the Cosmopolitan Bowl in Alexandria. The first regular season game will be against Block high at Jonesville on September 9.

AFL Group To Hold Meeting In New York

DALLAS (AP) — Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League announced Saturday that the league's executive committee will meet Thursday and Friday in New York to discuss such items as the championship playoff, the next player draft and the television contract.

Also they will talk about a post-season all-star game between top players of the Eastern and Western divisions.

The AFL's 10 million dollar anti-trust suit against the National League will get a progress report from the lawyers.

Group insurance for AFL players, this to be paid by the member clubs, is planned.

Foss said some policy changes may come out of the meeting. "We're almost through our pre-season schedule," he said, "and we may want to iron out things that could not be foreseen four weeks ago, but have cropped up during the pre-season games."

The executive committee is made up of the presidents of the eight clubs in the league—Oakland Dallas, Houston, Boston, Buffalo, Los Angeles, Denver and New York.

Schoendienst On Sidelines

MILWAUKEE (AP)—John McHale, general manager of the Milwaukee Braves, said Saturday he did not know when Red Schoendienst, veteran second baseman sidelined with a groin injury, would be able to rejoin the team.

Schiendienst went to St. Louis a week ago for a checkup with his physician after he sustained the groin injury. The infielder planned to rejoin the Braves Thursday. McHale said, however, he had received no word from Schoendienst when he would be able to report.

CHEVROLET

Few trucks are subjected to the body-wracking beatings that are part of a day's work for this Chevrolet Series 60 pulpwood hauler. It's owned by J. E. Fox, North Carolina logging contractor. As Bobby Fox, a partner in the business says, "Loaded with pulpwood, we drive over stumps and potholes you'd think would tear the truck to pieces. These trails would shake the cab off an ordinary truck, but not our Chevy. We can average an extra load a day . . . make $45 to $50 a day more with this Chevy than we can with the others."

In every weight class these Chevies are doing more work at less expense than trucks have ever done before. Drive one at your Chevrolet dealer's. It's an experience that could pay you big dividends.

"That 6-cylinder engine really performs," says Bobby Fox. "It's got the lugging power we need in the woods and walks right along with a full load on the highway."

British Village Loses Ghost, Regains Peace

BOREHAM WOOD, England (AP)—Residents of this Hertfordshire village lost a ghost Saturday but gained peace of mind after the spookiest summer any of them can remember.

On the whole they figure it was a poor trade, however. The ghostly reputation had made the area more interesting.

It all began with reports that a ghost was stalking nightly through All Saints' Churchyard.

First accounts were laughed down, but the testimony kept rolling in. Some residents, breathless and with eyes poping, rushed into the Green Man pub and told of seeing the spook dancing between tombstones. A few said they had heard it make a moaning sound. All agreed it was a deathly white.

"It's 'orrible as you can imagine," one man said as he reached for a pint.

Said the Rev. J. W. Larter, the vicar: "Stuff and nonsense. This church is only 50 years old. That's not nearly old enough for it to have a ghost. It's just not done. According to all tradition, ghosts haunt ancient places—scenes of tragedies of several hundred years ago."

The ghost was a goat.

British Village Loses Ghost, Regains Peace

BOREHAM WOOD, England (AP)—Residents of this Hertfordshire village lost a ghost Saturday but gained peace of mind after the spookiest summer any of them can remember.

On the whole they figure it was a poor trade, however. The ghostly reputation had made the area more interesting.

It all began with reports that a ghost was stalking nightly through All Saints' Churchyard.

First accounts were laughed down, but the testimony kept rolling in. Some residents, breathless and with eyes poping, rushed into the Green Man pub and told of seeing the spook dancing between tombstones. A few said they had heard it make a moaning sound. All agreed it was a deathly white.

"It's 'orrible as you can imagine," one man said as he reached for a pint.

Said the Rev. J. W. Larter, the vicar: "Stuff and nonsense. This church is only 50 years old. That's not nearly old enough for it to have a ghost. It's just not done. According to all tradition, ghosts haunt ancient places—scenes of tragedies of several hundred years ago."

The ghost was a goat.

Miss Johnston Mr. Fletcher Vows Spoken

Miss Rosemary Johnston and William Morris Fletcher, both of Shreveport, were married in Sunset Acres Baptist Church August 6 at eight in the evening.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Coday Johnston of Logansport and the late Mr. Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. James Roy Fletcher of Choudrant are parents of the groom.

Vows were spoken to the Rev. Jerry Schmucher in a setting of candle trees and white flowers against a background of palms. Music for the ceremony was provided by Miss Louise Manhein, organist, and John T. Laughlin, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, James Ray Johnston. Her traditional wedding gown of peau de soie and Alencon lace was fashioned with a stem bodice and full flowing skirt ending in a train. A pearl embroidered lace cap held her fingertip veil of illusion, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and English ivy.

Mrs. M. Raymond Burch of Logansport was her sister's matron of honor. Mrs. T. R. Brannon, Jr., of Carthage, Texas, was bridesmaid. They wore identical street length dresses of blue satin with fitted bodices and bell skirts. They wore satin hats and shoes, and carried arm bouquets of yellow roses.

Best man was the bridegroom's father. Ushers were James Roy Fletcher, Jr., Billy Ray Pesnell, Edward B. Andrews, and William Allen O'Neal, Jr.

Girls Will Win

The war between the sexes may soon be over in the United States. According to an article, if the issue ever comes to a vote the girls will win hands down.

On election day there will be 3,283,000 more women eligible to vote than men, the Census Bureau says.

And, depending on your point of view, things are going to get worse, or better, in the future, the Bureau predicts. By 1980 it is estimated that there will be 5,500,000 more women voting than men. "Women now hold the balance of power," Republican Party executive Mrs. Clare B. Williams has noted. But so far, says Coronet, they haven't exercised it fully.

Thursday afternoon Bayou DeSiard country club was scene of a welcome-home party honoring PAT GUERRIERO (MRS. W. T.) BROWN, home from over four years in Anchorage Alaska. W. T., who was stationed at Fort Richardson, is now en route to Fort Hood, Texas. The Browns are here visiting their parents, the GEORGE GUERRIEROS.

Several hundred guests attended Wilma's party honoring her daughter. MRS. THOMAS KELLER and MRS. G. F. BECKER greeted arrivals in the club foyer, which was decorated with a triangular arrangement of lavendar gladioli in a milk glass compote.

The receiving line formed in the main ballroom, with Wilma, Pat, TRUE GUERRIERO and BLANCHE MAXWELL. The honoree was wearing a sheath of pure white silk, with an aqua cummerbund. Her wrist corsage was of white chysanthemums.

Wilma chose an eyelet embroidered white pique, fashioned with a tiered tunic skirt. True was also in white: full skirted organdy, with a blue taffeta sash and blue taffeta sling with white chrysanthemum corsage on her broken arm.

A white cutwork cloth covered the refreshment table, which was centered with a long horizontal arrangement of lavender gladioli and white chrysanthemums, flanked by white tapers in silver candelabra. MRS. JOHN GUERRIERO and MRS. M. E. GROSS served punch at one end of the table, while MRS. A. M. GUERRIERO and Mrs. M. L. JOHNSON alternated at the silver coffee service at the other end.

Single glamellias decorated the refreshment trays. Those who served included MRS. F. E. MAXWELL, JR., of Delhi; MRS. RICHARD C. GUERRIERO, MRS. WILLIAM V. BOTTORFF, SUSAN STEWART, MRS. FRED CRENSHAW, MRS. JAMES USSERY, LINDA KELLER, and MRS. GILBERT HARKEY of Shreveport.

Music was provided throughout the party by ELOISE STANHOPE at the piano. Other members of the house party were MRS. E. M. BABER, MRS. C. P. GUERRIERO, JR., MRS. H. E. GUERRIERO, MRS. J. S. GUERRIERO, MRS. V. S. GARNETT, MRS. ROBERT GUERRIERO, EVA REED, MRS. LLOYD STEWARD, MRS. S. E. HODGES, MRS. H. G. COOPER, and MRS. B. W. MORRISON.

Pat will be given Monroe's red carpet treatment throughout her visit. Parties started this week, when Edell Guerriero and Joann Ussery entertained at lunch at the Paragon Monday. Tuesday Lil Becker invited an intimate group for luncheon in the Reef room at Bayou DeSiard country club. More parties are planned for the remainder of her stay.

BLANCHE LONG was here several days this week as the guest of the PETE MENEFEES. Wednesday night they entertained with a dinner party in her honor at Bayou DeSiard country club. Doris used all white flowers to decorate the porch, where the party was held. An epergne filled with chrysanthemums was the centerpiece, flanked by white candles in silver candelabra. Two silver compotes holding white chrysanthemums were placed at the ends of the table. Places were marked for twenty - eight guests.

Guest in the John MULLENS home this week and next will be Marge's sister, SUZANNE RENDER of Dallas.

It's a third child, third daughter for the BOB DOWNINGS. The new arrival, born August 10, has been christened MARGARET CLAYTON. Her two sisters, DENISE and RENEE, are visiting in Donaldsonville with their grandparents, MR. and MRS. C. J. DUGAS. Paternal grandmother is MARGARET DOWNING of Monroe.

PAUL GILMONT left on Friday to join KATHIE and their daughter SUELLEN, and JANE WHITTINGTON in California. The ladies have been visiting there for several weeks. They will enter Suellen in Mills college before returning home around Labor Day.

Special guests were those members who had birthdays this month: MAE FLANIGAN, KATIE M'GEE, KATIE RENAUD, and LILY WOOD. . . . .Cutwork cloth covered the two tables, which were centered with arrangements of roses and other garden flowers. Barbecued chicken was the main course of the meal, with birthday cake and ice cream for dessert. The group played samba after dinner. In appreciation for these lines, called "Hothouse Plant", author Norman Jaffray has been unanimously elected to membership in Athletics Anonymous:

Hearties who dote on a walk in the rain
Seem, in my jaundiced opinion, insane.
Campers preferring a tent to a bed
Palpably suffer from holes in the head.
Gathering kindling—the dullest of chores;
And nothing tastes better when cooked out-of-doors.
My hitch in the Army was tranquil and tame:
Unscathed from its mortal collisions I came,
But it taught me some lessons I'll know till I die:
Man's pleasantest state is quiescent and dry.
Don't sleep under canvas or shoulder a pack,
And the nicest position is flat on your back.
Let others delight in the wind in their face
And the rain down their neck, and a blistering pace:
No camping for me! I derived from the wars
A healthy distrust for the Great Out-of-Doors.
I'm not what I was in my militant heyday—
I haven't been out of the house since V-J Day.

MRS. WILLIAM THOMAS BROWN was honored at a reception given by Mrs. George Guerriero Thursday afternoon at Bayou DeSiard country club. Sgt. and Mrs. Brown, who are visiting here at this time, have recently returned from four years in Anchorage, Alaska.

Flower Advice

Plagued with drooping, wilting cut flowers? Here's some helpful adivce from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Grupp — a husband - wife team with 28 years of experience as florists.

The Grupps suggest making a slanting cut on the bottom of each stem with a knife, changing water and scrubbing vases and containers daily with suds, and keeping flower arrangements away from heat or drafts.

The wedding will be solemnized in the Free Methodist Church, West Monroe, at 8:00 p.m., September 3, with the Rev. Austin Smith officiating.

MRS. WILLIAN DEARL LEE

Church Wedding Unites Miss Roberts, Mr. Lee

Southern smilax, white chrysanthemums, carnations, and burning tapers created a background last night, in the First Methodist Church of Oak Grove, for the wedding of Miss Toni Sharlane Roberts and William Dearl Lee. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Odell Roberts of Oak Grove; and he is the son of Mrs. Marvin Lee of Hammond, and Willie Lee of Oak Grove.

Palm trees, baskets of white chrysanthemums and stock surrounded the white bridal arch before which the Rev. Wesley Otis Lynch heard their vows.

A pre - nuptial concert was given on the organ by Miss Carol Schuchs, who accompanied Jon Levy, as he sang "'Til The End of Time" and "The Lord's Prayer".

Donald Robert Lee was his brother's best man, and other attendants included James Ronald Posey of Ruston; James Sidney Tarro of San Antonia, Texas; Daniel George Wadsworth of Hammond; and Douglas Williams of Tallulah.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. James Ronald Posey, with Miss Charlene Shirley Podas of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Miss Nancy McCormick and Miss Mary Ethel Kelly, both of Oak Grove; and Miss Olivia Cecile Dodge of Mobile, Alabama. All wore white embroidered organza over taffeta, with bell skirts, scoop necklines and tiny sleeves. Romance blue satin under the scalloped midriff ended in wide back streamers. Their matching headdresses were bandeaux of blue organza centered with pearl pips and topped with prayer veils of matching silk illusion. They carried round bouquets of feathered white chrysanthemums surrounded with imported blue tulle and satin, with a white phlaenopsis orchid in the center and a cascade of stephonotis.

The bride, entering on the arm of her father, wore a gown of peau de soie, with a bodice of over - embroidered Chantilly lace, lightly pearled, featuring short, close sleeves and a Sabrina neckline. The lace continued in a wide appliqued front panel and bands which curved up to the top of the wide court train. A crown of pearls held the train - length veil of imported silk issusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white stephonotis, imported white tulle and wihte phlaenopsis orchids, with two orchids at the top of the bouquet. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom.

For the wedding, the bride's mother chose a light blue lace sheath, trimmed with satin. The mother of the groom wore a champagne lace sheath with matching accessories.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents at the American Legion Home in Lake Providence.

Miss Betty Kelly registered the guests at a table covered with white satin and net, centered with a wedding candle. At the base of the candle was a replica of the bride's bouquet, made of stephanotis, white tulle, and phlaenopsis orchids.

The bride's table was covered with a cloth of white satin with net overlay falling folds to the floor. The tiered wedding cake, topped with a silver nuptial cup was surrouned at the base with white roses and miniature white glamelias interspersed with maiden hair foliage. White candles were placed in silver branching candelabra entwined with foliage and miniature white roses.

Two long tables covered with white satin overlaid with identical Madeira cloths were used for serving punch and canapes. Each table was centered with a crystal and silver epergne of white carnations, roses, and peonies.

The groom's table was covered with white satin, centered with an old fashioned buggy filled with white carnations and gysophilia and a "Just Married" sign in silver on white satin ribbon. Boxes of groom's cake were given to the guests as they left, by Miss Kathleen Allen of Hammond.

Powder Hints

Face powder, compact make-up, and dusting powder are three of the most useful feminine beauty requisites.

Face powder should be used after you have applied your foundation make-up, erase stick, and creme rouge. It will not only set these creamy requisites, but will add a beautiful matte finish to your complexion, as well. Many women prefer the glamour merits of a creamy - base and powder compact make - up, which is applied with a puff. This dual purpose make-up may be used alone or over all foundation make-ups as a touch-up.

Dusting powder can save you time and energy in dressing, and also bring added comfort. After your bath, apply dusting powder to your hips, around your thighs, and to your legs. This will make it easier to slip on undergarments and hose, and will provide all-day comfort. In addition, your clothing will stay perspiration - free longer if you dust your back, chest, shoulders, and underarms with this luxurious powder.

Crushing Garlic

If you haven't a garlic crusher, place peeled garlic cloves on a cutting board with a little salt; bring the heavy blade of a chopping knife (or a small cleaver) down on the garlic, then mince. Alternating this mashing and mincing will do the trick.

Measuring Cup

A measuring cup that has a space above the 1 cup line should be used in measuring liquids for recipes. Cooks have a tendency to skimp in measuring liquids which this type of cup helps to prevent. It's spillproof, too!

Powder Hints

Face powder, compact make-up, and dusting powder are three of the most useful feminine beauty requisites.

Face powder should be used after you have applied your foundation make-up, erase stick, and creme rouge. It will not only set these creamy requisites, but will add a beautiful matte finish to your complexion, as well. Many women prefer the glamour merits of a creamy - base and powder compact make - up, which is applied with a puff. This dual purpose make-up may be used alone or over all foundation make-ups as a touch-up.

Dusting powder can save you time and energy in dressing, and also bring added comfort. After your bath, apply dusting powder to your hips, around your thighs, and to your legs. This will make it easier to slip on undergarments and hose, and will provide all-day comfort. In addition, your clothing will stay perspiration - free longer if you dust your back, chest, shoulders, and underarms with this luxurious powder.

Crushing Garlic

If you haven't a garlic crusher, place peeled garlic cloves on a cutting board with a little salt; bring the heavy blade of a chopping knife (or a small cleaver) down on the garlic, then mince. Alternating this mashing and mincing will do the trick.

Measuring Cup

A measuring cup that has a space above the 1 cup line should be used in measuring liquids for recipes. Cooks have a tendency to skimp in measuring liquids which this type of cup helps to prevent. It's spillproof, too!

To give freshly washed and ironed shirts or blouses a really professional look, fold them around newly "invented" plastic shirt forms.

The clean garments can be easily slipped off the forms — still neatly folded — for storage or packing.

Sour Cream

To make commercially - prepared sour cream, a lactic acid culture is added to sweet cream; the mixture is then allowed to incubate until the correct flavor and consistency have been reached.

Broiling Hint

Cream butter with a favorite herb and use this on fish you are broiling. Dust with paprika as the fish finish cooking.

Warm Climate

Do you dream of moving to a warmer climate someday? If you do, perhaps you should think twice — before you go. According to one article, you may not be able to think as well, once you get there.

Human thinking ability drops steeply when the temperature is over 70 degrees and is at its lowest in torrid weather. People are at their mental best when the temperature is around 40 degrees, the article says. Recently, a group of college students given intelligence tests in the summer and winter sessions scored 40 per cent lower in the steady heat than in the changeable winter weather.

A warm climate also has other disadvantages the article says. The human heart, even lying motionless in bed, is forced to work harder as temperature and humidity rise — so persons with acutely damaged hearts should think twice before heading for the warm weather.

The body's resistance to infection also seems to drop somewhat as temperatures climb. Colds are now known to be at least as frequent in warm climates as they are elsewhere. This is probably because people living in monotonous heat for long periods become highly sensitive to even the slightest dip in temperature. More over, severe diseases of the lungs have been known to run their most serious course where the climate is warmest.

On the other hand, people living in the constantly changing weather of the "temperate" zones grow faster, mature earlier, live longer, are more resistant to infections, and have probably the healthiest lives on earth, says the article. Perhaps you should stop dreaming and stay where you are.

Girl Scout News

Three girls from our council enjoyed this summer that many of our girls need and want, a need our council canot fulfill at present; that is, an established camp experience. Good as day camp program is, there should also be opportunity for the valuable living - in - camp experience.

Kyle Gregory, Troop 26, Carol Ullman, Troop 3, and Sue Speight Troop 32 attended a two - week session at Camp Wawbansee, The Pelican Council camp near Arcadia. All report a wonderful experience. They lived in a primitive unit, meaning that they pitched tents, lashed the necessary tables and other equipment, cooked morning and evening meals in their unit, joining other campers for the noon meal in the dining hall. It was easy to earn Outdoor Cook badge this way. One of the mothers was particularly impressed by the quadpod, the square table with seats, lashed by the campers. By the time parents arrived to take campers home, tents had been struck, drainage ditches, grease pit filled in, all trace of fires removed; only the lashing was left to show that a group of girls had camped in that particular spot.

Carol and Sue had completed Junior lifesaving courses during the June swimming classes, so they were allowed to take canoeing and to qualify as Advanced Swimmer, the highest rating in the Red Cross classification. They report a most impressive campfire. Each unit built a campfire in front of the cabins, close to the lake. With the six fires reflecting in the water, the units sang good night songs in turn, the last singing "taps." Doesn't it sound exciting? There's nothing like a campfire under a starry sky!

Progress in swimming is one accomplishment many Girl Scouts can look back upon for this summer. Proudest of all, are those girls who completed the Red Cross Junior Lifesaving course as part of the Girl Scout swimming course. The following, with Mrs. Janet Cash Russell as instructor, qualified for the Red Cross card and emblem and also for the Girl Scout proficiency badge: Julie Amman, Dianne Boyington, Jeanette Bush, Marilyn Daigle, Susan Ellington, Gretchen Haas, Mauren Halpin, Mary Tom Keller, Susan High, Paula Meek, Janna Rorex, Delane Ruddick, Sue Speight, Barbara Smith, Susan Turner, Carol Ullman, Kaki Stone.

Next week we'll have the names of girls in other classifications.

MRS. JOE ALBERT FORD, JR.

Sikes Scene Of McDaniel-Simmons Vows

Miss Jo Ann Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Simmons of Sikes, became the bride on August 12, of James Edwin McDaniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. McDaniel, also of Sikes.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the home of the groom's parents, by the Rev. Upton.

A fireplace, flanked by baskets of flowers, and centered with a floral arrangement, formed the background for the wedding party.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of white embossed taffeta, featuring a round neckline and fitted jacket. Her accessories were white.

For the ceremony, the bride's mother wore a dress of floral print with white accessories. The mother of the groom chose a navy blue model with white accessories.

A reception was held immediately following the wedding. The tiered wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom, and surrounded with tiny pink roses.

Assisting with the serving were: Mrs. Jack Womack, and Miss Velda Ray McDaniel, both sisters of the groom.

The couple will make their home in Sikes.

Many Garden Jobs To Do

By MILDRED SWIFT

It's still warm, but there are plenty of garden jobs to do this month. To take care of yourself, garden early in the morning. Then, you can stay in the cool of your house all day.

THE JOBS

Back in May, we said to transplant bearded iris immediately after they bloomed or wait until July or August. The in-between-months are the bloom setting times. Now you can divide and transplant those bulbs if they're too crowded. Work bone meal in the soil and plant shallow.

Many of your vines get out of bounds at this time of year. If such a situation exists at your house, cut them back. Don't cut back climbing roses or white blooming clematis. It's too late to prune your roses this year. If you prune the clematis now, you'll cut off all the blooms. Wait until it finishes blooming.

By the way — if you have a wedding coming up, that clematis is lovely for decorating the brides table. It holds up well too and the dainty white blossoms just remind you of a bride's veil.

Even your trailing periwinkle needs pruning every three or four years. It begins to climb all over itself — if that is possible. You can take the sling blade and do a good job pruning. This will not look pretty for a while, but if you'll water well it should come out again before winter. You'll be glad you pruned when you see how much neater the area looks.

It's time to cut the tops off your violet plants. This old foliage is unsightly and not needed. Soon new foliage will put out. You'll have longer stems on your violets, too.

Violets will use lots of fertilizer. Well rotted barnyard manure is excellent. Also cotton seed meal is good.

Violets are subject to red spider. If the foliage is all yellow and sick looking, he's probably there. Spray with malathion or dust with sulphur.

Cut back hydrangeas that have quit blooming, being sure to cut off the dead blooms. Do this at once — not later.

If you want large flowers on your camellias, start disbudding as soon as the buds begin to form. Where there are two buds to a stem, twist one off gently. This will increase the size of the bud that remains.

Prune poinsettias no later than this month. Cut back half of this season's growth.

If your early blooming bulbs need transplanting, do this now. It's time to plant the single old fashioned hyacinth bulbs, ranunculas and anemonies.

MORE

There's still time to plant some summer annuals to enjoy before frost comes. They are zinnias, marigolds, cleome, balsam, tithonia, snow on the mountain, sweet alyssum, coxcomb, late cosmos.

Get above seed in ground at once, and be sure they do not dry out. Make a tiny trench, fill it with water, then plant the seed. Cover the small seed lightly with soil — the larger ones a little deeper. If there's no rain for several days, water. These seed must have moisture to sprout.

CUTTINGS

The current season's growth has hardened on most plants, so this is a good time to root cuttings from azaleas, camellias and other evergreens. Cuttings may be rooted in the yard, in a flat or cutting box or in the green house. To root cuttings in the yard, select a well drained, shaded spot, preferably on the north side of the house.

Make cuttings from three to six inches in length using only healthy ones with no disease. Remove all leaves except the upper two. Using a commercial growth promoting preparation gives good results as root inducers. These materials hasten root formation. Roots are formed in a short length of time. Use according to instructions.

Good rooting media includes coarse builder's sand, mixture of sand and peat moss, or a mixture of sand and vermiculite. For full instructions on rooting cuttings call our office for a camellia bulletin written by Kimbrough, Hanchey and Roussel. What applies to camellias will apply to other evergreens, when it comes to information for cuttings.

HINTS

For those who are high waisted, try a contour belt. They seem to bring the waist line down.

The short skirt continues to be popular. Just an inch or two below the knee seems to be the favored length. "Never, no never," say the fashion designers, "should a woman wear a skirt just in the bend of the knee. This is an ugly and awkward length."

Late summer hosiery colors are white - washed tints and near-neutrals. Pale beige and cloudlike gray, both harmonize with the many neutrals.

White shoes and practically all other summer shoes can be kept clean and new looking for a long time if you use the right method. The dressing or polish used depends largely on the type of shoes. There is no one cleaner equally good for all white shoes. Read the label on the cleaner container carefully to be certain that it will be satisfactory for the type leather or fabric in the shoes you have.

White shoes should always be cleaned while off the feet. Wait until they are thoroughly dry to wear them, or they may stretch out of shape. Before cleaning shoes always put in shoe trees or stuff with tissue to prevent shrinkage. Before you apply the cleaner, brush off any dirt, dust, or mud or old cleaner.

If you're a button popper, here's a tip dental floss is as easy to use yet much stronger than thread. It's also tops for stringing beads and pearls.

To give gold or gold - plated jewelry a new look, immerse each piece for one-half minute in a solution of 2 parts hydrogen peroxide and one part household ammonia. Or buy one of those inexpensive prepared mixtures especially for this purpose.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday, Catherine Hoyt will make puppets; Tuesday, Rodney Ewing will show us women how to use hand tools properly; Wednesday, flower arrangements; Thursday and Friday, Harry Hathaway from Baton Rouge will show us, "egg quality" and "chick-n-queing."

Safety Urged In Charcoal Use On Picnic

Charcoal is a convenient fuel for barbecues, grills, picnics and campfire cooking. But safety measures are required for successful use.

This is the advice offered by officials of the Louisiana Agricultural Extension Service.

In a statement they said:

"Be sure to set up your grill or dig the barbecue pit in an open place, well away from buildings, trees, dry leaves, grass or brush. If you use a charcoal - lighting fluid be sure to use it according to directions. Soak a little into the briquets before lighting them, and be sure there is no liquid fuel that has not soaked in when you start the fire. Never use gasoline, paint thinner or any other highly combustible fluid to kindle charcoal."

SAFEST

Safest way to kindle charcoal is to use dry, crumpled paper, or a light substance - like excelsier, under the pile of charcoal. Then simply light the paper as in starting an ordinary wood fire. It may take a little fanning to get the charcoal kindled. When grey or whitish spots appear around the edge of charcoal, these mean that it is kindled. In 20 minutes or so it will be hot enough to grill.

The charcoal chef — and others who join in the cook-out — should wear heavy, fireproofed gloves both in building the fire and using it. A fireproof or fire-resistant apron is a safeguard, too.

"Have on hand a sprinkling can full of water — one with a long spout preferred — to douse the fire in an emergency or when leaving the picnic site," officials warn. "Cooking will be done more conveniently with long-handled forks, tongs, skewers, skillets and saucepans. It is easier, too, if you have long - handled swabs or brushes for barbecue sauce.

ANOTHER WAY to beat the summer's heat and humidity: live outdoors in the mountains where even the pictures can look cool and refreshing. This was shot by P. Damm, Stuttgart, Germany with an Ikoflex camera at 1/100th at f/16 with medium speed film.

CAMERA NOTES

Warm Weather Leaves Mark On Dark Room

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Has the hot, humid weather of summer left its mark on your photo equipment? Does your darkroom smell musty and is there mildew on your photo paper or rust on your paper cutter blade? They are the results of heat, excessive moisture and poor air circulation and are particularly noticeable in basement darkrooms.

EXPENSIVE

1. The most expensive answer to the problem is installation of an air conditioner. It's an answer most amateurs can not afford. A less expensive moisture remover is a dehumidifier. It's a small refrigerating unit which can condense up to three gallons of water from the air every 24 hours. An accessory humidistat, plus connection to a drain pipe, will make the dehumidifier automatic. However, it's still an expensive way to get rid of darkroom moisture.

2. Hang a drying agent in the darkroom. Silica gel, recommended for photographic uses, comes in 12 ounce bags which cost about $1.25 each, is obtainable in many hardware stores. About three bags are ample for average darkrooms. After absorbing an equal weight of water, 12 ounces, each bag can be dried out in the kitchen stove and used over again.

Silica gel can also be hung from a enlarger which is then covered and sealed with a plastic bag. It'll prevent rusting.

3. Dry the darkroom with heat. An electric heater can be run for a couple of hours during or after a rainy or humid spell. Or electric light bulbs can be left burning, day and night, in the darkroom or in a closet where materials are stored.

TANK COVERS

4. Don't leave solutions in uncovered trays or pools of water to stand in the sink. Make tight fitting tray and tank covers for solutions which are not in use.

5. Keep working areas dry. Bench tops and wood areas should be painted first to prevent moisture absorption and should be dried after working sessions. Place newspapers under trays before starting work to absorb splashes and spills. When they are discarded, they should be removed entirely from the room and thrown away.

6. Keep basement windows closed in hot, humid weather. The air outside contains more moisture, especially at night, than the air indoors, says Burnham. The hot, damp outside air gets into the cooler darkroom, and its temperature begin to drop. As its capacity to hold moisture decreases, the excess moisture condenses on cool surfaces. If there were continuous good air circulation throughout the basement, it would offset the air cooling process.

7. Don't let clothes dryers exhaust their hot, damp air indoors. You can install a venting system to the outside with flexible plastic pipe or a galvanized tin pipe.

8. If you have a ventilating fan in the darkroom, draw the air supply from indoors and let the exhaust go outdoors. The air indoors is drier than the air outdoors in humid weather.

9. Protect metal equipment with rust preventative or oil. Clean off any rust which may have started, apply a light coating of machine oil and wipe with a clean rag. A fine film will remain which will act as a rust preventative. This does not apply to internal camera parts, however! That's a job for a specialist.

10. Keep the darkroom door closed after you've taken any of the suggestions listed.

Fourth O'Neill Play

NEW YORK (AP) — "More Stately Mansions," the fourth in a planned cycle of nine Eugene O'Neill plays, will have its world premiere at the Royal Dramatic Theater in Stockholm in September.

The theater also was the one where three other posthumous O'Neill dramas were premiered. Two have been seen by American audiences — "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "A Touch of the Poet." Plans to present "Hughie," the third in the series, have been postponed.

O'Neill's widow, Mrs. Carlotta Monterey O'Neill, made it clear that the Swedish production of "More Stately Mansions" would be the only one.

The play, which would have taken some 10 hours on stage in its original form, has been adapted by Dr. Karl Gierow, who found the manuscript in the Yale University library. It now has been condensed to a playing time of four hours.

Green Thumb Club Exhibits

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The Green Thumb Garden Club of the Twin Cities exhibited an interesting flower show in the Garden Center.

Mrs. Suzee Gorman and Mrs. Ralph Newman designed a modified Hogarth curve in tones of rose. A grey pillow vase was placed on one end of a black plaque to give balance to the whole picture. Rose colored dahlias and perennial phlox were placed in the focal area of the curved design. Pink variegated caladium leaves were used to emphasize the "S" curve. Branches of Artemisa formed the curved line. This beautiful color combination was suitable for the daughters' room.

WHITE, GREEN

A white and green church arrangement was made by Mrs. Suzee Gorman. Beautiful white Philippeneses lilies, white and green variegated caladium and Snow on the Mountain (Euphorbia Marinata) formed a large mass triangle design against the green fronds of Woods fern. This arrangement was made in a white urn shaped vase.

Mrs. Earl Ferguson made a fruit and foliage composition in a tan, footed, pottery container placed on a tan mat. Oranges, pears, apples, and yellow grapes were grouped in the foreground of the design, with the yellow grapes extending over the rim of the container on one side. Varigated euonymus was placed in the crevices. Yellow banded sanseveria was used as spike material in back and above the fruit. This design was suitable for the buffet.

Mrs. T. E. Humphries chose a curved slab of an elm tree for her Oriental design. A Chinese fisherman was the basis of interpretation. The coloring in the figurine proclaimed its suitability. From the base of rocks and tree fungus placed at the feet of the figurine green hydrangea blossoms 'peeped out.' Driftwood and echeveria were effectively used in the composition.

FORMED

Branches of Winged Elm formed the tree under which the fisherman stood. A good arrangement for the television.

Mrs. J. W. Goldson made a mass vertical composition in tones of tan and green. It has a tan-green pottery vase placed on a tan base, which held the design made of the flowers of the Chinese Varnish Tree and dried aspidistria leaves.

The Green Thumb Garden Club also exhibited an interesting collection of horticulture.

Branches of Pala Verde, Arizona State Street and Peace roses by Mrs. T. E. Phumprhes.

Branches of Varigated hydrangeas of the viburnums and variegated Houseleek (Sempervivum Hawdrthi) by Mrs. Suzee Gorman.

Production rights for the Broadway hit have been sold to 16 countries and negotiations currently are underway to sell these rights to British and Australian interests.

Two Stamps Commemorate UN Founding

To honor the 15th anniversary of its establishment, the United Nations will issue a set of two new stamps on Oct. 24, United Nations Day. The 4-cent stamp will be blue and white and the 8-center will be black and white.

Featured on the stamps will be part of the United Nations' preamble, "We the peoples of the United Nations determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war . . ." The dates "Oct. 24, 1945-1960" appear below an outline of the United Nations building and the U. N. emblem.

To obtain first day cancellations of the stamps, send remittances and envelopes to the United Nations Postal Administrations, United Nations, N. Y. prior to Oct. 24.

The 1961 edition of the New World Wide Postage Stamp Catalog (Volumes I and II) and the New American Stamp Catalog by Minkus Publications will be on the market in September.

The New World Wide catalog includes more than 100,000 price changes, nearly all of them reflecting the upward trend of the stamp market. It contains complete listings of all major and many interesting minor varieties of all the stamps ever issued at present market values.

The New American Stamp Catalog for 1961 contains lists and prices of all U. S. issues, including revenues, postal stationary, duck stamps, postage dues, Confederates, U. S. Territories and Possessions, and the United Nations.

Japan has issued a new 10-yen stamp to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Japanese immigration to Hawaii. Depicted on the adhesive is a rainbow spanning the Pacific Ocean and the linking of cherry biossonms with pineapples.

The Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa has issued a set of stamps with three different designs to honor the Fifth World Forestry Congress to be held in Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 29. The designs depict forest breeding, forest protection and production of lumber.

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Lily Early Art Feature

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The Madonna lily is one of the oldest plants in cultivation. It is featured in the art of the Cretans of 1500 B.C. and from that period to the present in our church art as the symbol of innocence and purity. Throughout the centuries, artists have drawn and painted this pure white lily in association with the Madonna and Child.

Our open sunny winters and the drought we have at some time or other during most summers are to the liking of the Madonna lily. This and our own little native Catesbey's lily have a rosette of evergreen leaves that need the winter sunshine to develop properly. They go completely to sleep in summer and seem to need a good baking to mature the bulbs.

PLANTING TIME

Madonna lilies should be planted in August if possible. Soil that will raise good vegetables will be adequate for the lilies. Spread enough bone meal over the surface to make the ground white. Then spread a pound of 5-10-5 chemical fertilizer to each 100 square feet and dig these fertilizers in. The bulbs should be set out with only two inches of soil above the tops. Deeper planting may result in no flowers. Too deep or too late planting may have been the trouble if you have been unable to get this plant to flower.

The rosettes of evergreen leaves which appear in a week or so after you plant Madonna lilies are beautiful in themselves. This is why this lily is so often seen within a foot or so of the edge of flower beds. The long stems, crowned with their heads of beautiful white flowers are most effective rising from the lower plants near the edge of beds where they can be enjoyed intimately.

Madonnas are susceptible to Botrytis blight. Keep dead foliage picked off the plants. Air must circulate about the foliage at all times and the foliage of other plants must not crowd the leaf rosettes. It is well to clean out all dead foliage in spring before the flower stems arise and to spray the leaves with Bordeaux mixture at intervals of about 10 days. You will not have to do this very long because the foliage will all die down in early summer.

House Plants Revitalized In Garden Plots

The best place for houseplants to spend the summer is in clay pots buried rim-deep in garden soil.

The good light and natural growing conditions of the outdoors are what plants need after a winter living in the house. Natural soil nutrients pass through the sides of the clay pot; moisture conditions are uniform. Plants will thrive — double in size—and regain full vigor for another season beautifying the home next winter.

PLUNGING

The technique of setting pots in the garden for the summer is called "plunging." It is just as simple as scooping a hole in the earth, setting the pot in it, and firming the soil around the pot. There are, however, some refinements which benefit the plant — and make things simpler for you.

There is no point in plunging a plant unless it is in a clay pot. Other kinds don't allow the transmission of lifegiving moisture. So if a plant is in some other kind of a container, re-pot it into clay.

DEPTH

Don't sink the pot too deep. All or most of the collar around the top of the clay pot should be above ground. If it is flush with the earth, soil will wash into the pot, surround the stem and cause damage to the plant. Quite often, when this happens, roots will develop above the crown, spreading over a considerable distance. When the plant is lifted, these roots are lost — and the plant suffers for it, having become dependent on them.

EXTENSION NEWS

Lily Planting Time Is Here

By AUDREY DAWSON

There are many jobs that we need to do in our garden this month. If you want madonna lilies, they should be planted in August for best results. Day lilies, regal lilies and others may be planted now or during September and October, but do not delay planting the madonna lily. Plant them about two inches deep.

Plant perennials flower seed now for blooms next spring. Some of the best are hollyhock, daisy, candytuft and poppy. Plant these seed in a well prepared seedbed ... Keep watered but not soaking wet. In the fall, you may ... plant them to the place where they are to grow.

Dig gladiolus corms as soon after blooming as the leaves turn brown.

COLOR IN HOME

Our housefurnishing specialist, Mrs. Jessie Mae Hill, gives nine points for you, Mrs. Homemaker, to follow in choosing colors for your home. One definite pattern is enough. Don't confuse a color plan with a jumble of designs.

Some colors are cool — use these in a too sunny room. Some colors are warm — cheer up a dull cold room with these. Unequal areas of color are more pleasing. Plan about two - thirds of your room in one color to be safe. Wood is a color too, consider the tones of wood pieces as part of your whole color scheme.

Bold colors advance — seem to bring objects closer to you.

Pale colors recede — make a room look larger and lighter.

Color is affected by its neighbors. A white lamp blends into a pale beige wall, against black — it is dramatic — used with a medium value it both brightens and blends. A little poem will help you remember the elements of a well decorated room. Be sure to include: something dark; something light; something dull; something bright. Don't be afraid to use color as a home decorator, it's your best friend.

Mrs. C. D. Henderson, president of our Ouachita Home Demonstration Council, will leave August 25th to attend the National Home Demonstration Council meeting which will be held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. There will be some 3,000 delegates representing 7½ million homemakers.

The five - point program that will be discussed by the delegates consists of topics as family life, health, safety, citizenship and international relations.

Topping the list of speakers will be C. M. Ferguson, director of the Federal Extension Service, Washington, D. C.

The group of homemakers from Louisiana will go by bus and will visit historic points of interest en route to Wisconsin and parts of Canada. Mrs. Henderson will return September 9th.

KITCHEN PLANNING

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are planning to build a new home or to remodel, the kitchen is an important part of the house for you. As a final check in planning, you may find this list of dos and don'ts helpful. Don't install range and refrigerator side by side. Don't install a built-in oven too high. High mounting can result in burns and make it difficult to remove pans. Place it so that the open oven door is about three inches below elbow level. Don't put your range under a window, it's against many building codes and makes it difficult to open and close the window.

Do check door swing. Doors that open against the face of an appliance should be rehung on the other side of the door joint or hinge to swing out rather than in. Do see that when appliances face each other (refrigerator across the aisle from range) minimum clearance is 42 inches — 48 if possible.

I believe it is my duty to censor myself — to keep my mind free for the positive constructive thinking that makes every life worthwhile.

Safety Urged In Charcoal Use On Picnic

Charcoal is a convenient fuel for barbecues, grills, picnics and campfire cooking. But safety measures are required for successful use.

This is the advice offered by officials of the Louisiana Agricultural Extension Service.

In a statement they said:

"Be sure to set up your grill or dig the barbecue pit in an open place, well away from buildings, trees, dry leaves, grass or brush. If you use a charcoal - lighting fluid be sure to use it according to directions. Soak a little into the briquets before lighting them, and be sure there is no liquid fuel that has not soaked in when you start the fire. Never use gasoline, paint thinner or any other highly combustible fluid to kindle charcoal."

SAFEST

Safest way to kindle charcoal is to use dry, crumpled paper, or a light substance - like excelsier, under the pile of charcoal. Then simply light the paper as in starting an ordinary wood fire. It may take a little fanning to get the charcoal kindled. When grey or whitish spots appear around the edge of charcoal, these mean that it is kindled. In 20 minutes or so it will be hot enough to grill.

The charcoal chef — and others who join in the cook-out — should wear heavy, fireproofed gloves both in building the fire and using it. A fireproof or fire-resistant apron is a safeguard, too.

"Have on hand a sprinkling can full of water — one with a long spout preferred — to douse the fire in an emergency or when leaving the picnic site," officials warn. "Cooking will be done more conveniently with long-handled forks, tongs, skewers, skillets and saucepans. It is easier, too, if you have long - handled swabs or brushes for barbecue sauce.

Two Stamps Commemorate UN Founding

To honor the 15th anniversary of its establishment, the United Nations will issue a set of two new stamps on Oct. 24, United Nations Day. The 4-cent stamp will be blue and white and the 8-center will be black and white.

Featured on the stamps will be part of the United Nations' preamble, "We the peoples of the United Nations determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war . . ." The dates "Oct. 24, 1945-1960" appear below an outline of the United Nations building and the U. N. emblem.

To obtain first day cancellations of the stamps, send remittances and envelopes to the United Nations Postal Administrations, United Nations, N. Y. prior to Oct. 24.

The 1961 edition of the New World Wide Postage Stamp Catalog (Volumes I and II) and the New American Stamp Catalog by Minkus Publications will be on the market in September.

The New World Wide catalog includes more than 100,000 price changes, nearly all of them reflecting the upward trend of the stamp market. It contains complete listings of all major and many interesting minor varieties of all the stamps ever issued at present market values.

The New American Stamp Catalog for 1961 contains lists and prices of all U. S. issues, including revenues, postal stationary, duck stamps, postage dues, Confederates, U. S. Territories and Possessions, and the United Nations.

Japan has issued a new 10-yen stamp to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Japanese immigration to Hawaii. Depicted on the adhesive is a rainbow spanning the Pacific Ocean and the linking of cherry blossomns with pineapples.

The Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa has issued a set of stamps with three different designs to honor the Fifth World Forestry Congress to be held in Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 29. The designs depict forest breeding, forest protection and production of lumber.

ANOTHER WAY to beat the summer's heat and humidity: live outdoors in the mountains where even the pictures can look cool and refreshing. This was shot by P. Damm, Stuttgart, Germany with an Ikoflex camera at 1/100th at f/16 with medium speed film.

Warm Weather Leaves Mark On Dark Room

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Has the hot, humid weather of summer left its mark on your photo equipment? Does your darkroom smell musty and is there mildew on your photo paper or rust on your paper cutter blade? They are the results of heat, excessive moisture and poor air circulation and are particularly noticeable in basement darkrooms.

EXPENSIVE

1. The most expensive answer to the problem is installation of an air conditioner. It's an answer most amateurs can not afford. A less expensive moisture remover is a dehumidifier. It's a small refrigerating unit which can condense up to three gallons of water from the air every 24 hours. An accessory humidistat, plus connection to a drain pipe, will make the dehumidifier automatic. However, it's still an expensive way to get rid of darkroom moisture.

2. Hang a drying agent in the darkroom. Silica gel, recommended for photographic uses, comes in 12 ounce bags which cost about $1.25 each, is obtainable in many hardware stores. About three bags are ample for average darkrooms. After absorbing an equal weight of water, 12 ounces, each bag can be dried out in the kitchen stove and used over again.

Silica gel can also be hung from a container which is then covered and sealed with a plastic bag. It'll prevent rusting.

3. Dry the darkroom with heat. An electric heater can be run for a couple of hours during or after a rainy or humid spell. Or electric light bulbs can be left burning, day and night, in the darkroom or in a closet where materials are stored.

TANK COVERS

4. Don't leave solutions in uncovered trays or pools of water to stand in the sink. Make tight fitting tray and tank covers for solutions which are not in use.

5. Keep working areas dry. Bench tops and wood areas should be painted first to prevent moisture absorption and should be dried after working sessions. Place newspapers under trays before starting work to absorb splashes and spills. When they are discarded, they should be removed entirely from the room and thrown away.

6. Keep basement windows closed in hot, humid weather. The air outside contains more moisture, especially at night, than the air indoors, says Burnham. The hot, damp outside air gets into the cooler darkroom, and its temperature begin to drop. As its capacity to hold moisture decreases, the excess moisture condenses on cool surfaces. If there were continuous good air circulation throughout the basement, it would offset the air cooling process.

7. Don't let clothes dryers exhaust their hot, damp air indoors. You can install a venting system to the outside with flexible plastic pipe or a galvanized tin pipe.

8. If you have a ventilating fan in the darkroom, draw the air supply from indoors and let the exhaust go outdoors. The air indoors is drier than the air outdoors in humid weather.

9. Protect metal equipment with rust preventative or oil. Clean off any rust which may have started, apply a light coating of machine oil and wipe with a clean rag. A fine film will remain which will act as a rust preventative. This does not apply to internal camera parts, however! That's a job for a specialist.

10. Keep the darkroom door closed after you've taken any of the suggestions listed.

Fourth O'Neill Play

NEW YORK (AP) — "More Stately Mansions," the fourth in a planned cycle of nine Eugene O'Neill plays, will have its world premiere at the Royal Dramatic Theater in Stockholm in September.

The theater also was the one where three other posthumous O'Neill dramas were premiered. Two have been seen by American audiences — "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "A Touch of the Poet." Plans to present "Hughie," the third in the series, have been postponed.

O'Neill's widow, Mrs. Carlotta Monterey O'Neill, made it clear that the Swedish production of "More Stately Mansions" would be the only one.

The play, which would have taken some 10 hours on stage in its original form, has been adapted by Dr. Karl Gierow, who found the manuscript in the Yale University library. It now has been condensed to a playing time of four hours.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Green Thumb Club Exhibits

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The Green Thumb Garden Club of the Twin Cities exhibited an interesting flower show in the Garden Center.

Mrs. Suzee Gorman and Mrs. Ralph Newman designed a modified Hogarth curve in tones of rose. A grey pillow vase was placed on one end of a black plaque to give balance to the whole picture. Rose colored dahlias and perennial phlox were placed in the focal area of the curved design. Pink variegated caladium leaves were used to emphasize the "S" curve. Branches of Artemisa formed the curved line. This beautiful color combination was suitable for the daughters' room.

WHITE, GREEN

A white and green church arrangement was made by Mrs. Suzee Gorman. Beautiful white Philippeneses lilies, white and green variegated caladium and Snow on the Mountain (Euphorbia Marinata) formed a large mass triangle design against the green fronds of Woods fern. This arrangement was made in a white urn shaped vase.

Mrs. Earl Ferguson made a fruit and foliage composition in a tan, footed, pottery container placed on a tan mat. Oranges, pears, apples, and yellow grapes were grouped in the foreground of the design, with the yellow grapes extending over the rim of the container on one side. Variegated euonymus was placed in the crevices. Yellow banded sansevieria was used as spike material in back and above the fruit. This design was suitable for the buffet.

Mrs. T. E. Humphries chose a curved slab of an elm tree for her Oriental design. A Chinese fisherman was the basis of interpretation. The coloring in the figurine proclaimed its suitability. From the base of rocks and tree fungus placed at the feet of the figurine green hydrangea blossoms 'peeped out.' Driftwood and echeveria were effectively used in the composition.

FORMED

Branches of Winged Elm formed the tree under which the fisherman stood. A good arrangement for the television.

Mrs. J. W. Goldson made a mass vertical composition in tones of tan and green. It has a tan-green pottery vase placed on a tan base, which held the design made of the flowers of the Chinese Varnish Tree and dried aspidistria leaves.

The Green Thumb Garden Club also exhibited an interesting collection of horticulture.

Branches of Pala Verde, Arizona State Street and Peace roses by Mrs. T. E. Phumprhes.

Lily Early Art Feature

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The Madonna lily is one of the oldest plants in cultivation. It is featured in the art of the Cretans of 1500 B.C. and from that period to the present in our church art as the symbol of innocence and purity. Throughout the centuries, artists have drawn and painted this pure white lily in association with the Madonna and Child.

Our open sunny winters and the drought we have at some time or other during most summers are to the liking of the Madonna lily. This and our own little native Catesbey's lily have a rosette of evergreen leaves that need the winter sunshine to develop properly. They go completely to sleep in summer and seem to need a good baking to mature the bulbs.

PLANTING TIME

Madonna lilies should be planted in August if possible. Soil that will raise good vegetables will be adequate for the lilies. Spread enough bone meal over the surface to make the ground white. Then spread a pound of 5-10-5 chemical fertilizer to each 100 square feet and dig these fertilizers in. The bulbs should be set out with only two inches of soil above the tops. Deeper planting may result in no flowers. Too deep or too late planting may have been the trouble if you have been unable to get this plant to flower.

The rosettes of evergreen leaves which appear in a week or so after you plant Madonna lilies are beautiful in themselves. This is why this lily is so often seen within a foot or so of the edge of flower beds. The long stems, crowned with their heads of beautiful white flowers are most effective rising from the lower plants near the edge of beds where they can be enjoyed intimately.

Madonnas are susceptible to Botrytis blight. Keep dead foliage picked off the plants. Air must circulate about the foliage at all times and the foliage of other plants must not crowd the leaf rosettes. It is well to clean out all dead foliage in spring before the flower stems arise and to spray the leaves with Bordeaux mixture at intervals of about 10 days. You will not have to do this very long because the foliage will all die down in early summer.

House Plants Revitalized In Garden Plots

The best place for houseplants to spend the summer is in clay pots buried rim-deep in garden soil.

The good light and natural growing conditions of the outdoors are what plants need after a winter living in the house. Natural soil nutrients pass through the sides of the clay pot; moisture conditions are uniform. Plants will thrive — double in size—and regain full vigor for another season beautifying the home next winter.

PLUNGING

The technique of setting pots in the garden for the summer is called "plunging." It is just as simple as scooping a hole in the earth, setting the pot in it, and firming the soil around the pot. There are, however, some refinements which benefit the plant — and make things simpler for you.

There is no point in plunging a plant unless it is in a clay pot. Other kinds don't allow the transmission of lifegiving moisture. So if a plant is in some other kind of a container, re-pot it into clay.

DEPTH

Don't sink the pot too deep. All or most of the collar around the top of the clay pot should be above ground. If it is flush with the earth, soil will wash into the pot, surround the stem and cause damage to the plant. Quite often, when this happens, roots will develop above the crown, spreading over a considerable distance. When the plant is lifted, these roots are lost — and the plant suffers for it, having become dependent on them.

Lily Planting Time Is Here

By AUDREY DAWSON

There are many jobs that we need to do in our garden this month. If you want madonna lilies, they should be planted in August for best results. Day lilies, regal lilies and others may be planted now or during September and October, but do not delay planting the madonna lily. Plant them about two inches deep.

Plant perennials flower seed now for blooms next spring. Some of the best are hollyhock, daisy, candytuft and poppy. Plant these seed in a well prepared seedbed [illegible]. Keep watered but not soaking wet. In the fall, you may [illegible] plant them to the place where they are to grow.

Dig gladiolus corms as soon after blooming as the leaves turn brown.

COLOR IN HOME

Our housefurnishing specialist, Mrs. Jessie Mae Hill, gives nine points for you, Mrs. Homemaker, to follow in choosing colors for your home. One definite pattern is enough. Don't confuse a color plan with a jumble of designs.

Some colors are cool — use these in a too sunny room. Some colors are warm — cheer up a dull cold room with these. Unequal areas of color are more pleasing. Plan about two - thirds of your room in one color to be safe. Wood is a color too, consider the tones of wood pieces as part of your whole color scheme.

Bold colors advance — seem to bring objects closer to you.

Pale colors recede — make a room look larger and lighter.

Color is affected by its neighbors. A white lamp blends into a pale beige wall, against black — it is dramatic — used with a medium value it both brightens and blends. A little poem will help you remember the elements of a well decorated room. Be sure to include: something dark; something light; something dull; something bright. Don't be afraid to use color as a home decorator, it's your best friend.

Mrs. C. D. Henderson, president of our Ouachita Home Demonstration Council, will leave August 25th to attend the National Home Demonstration Council meeting which will be held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. There will be some 3,000 delegates representing 7½ million homemakers.

The five - point program that will be discussed by the delegates consists of topics as family life, health, safety, citizenship and international relations.

Topping the list of speakers will be C. M. Ferguson, director of the Federal Extension Service, Washington, D. C.

The group of homemakers from Louisiana will go by bus and will visit historic points of interest en route to Wisconsin and parts of Canada. Mrs. Henderson will return September 9th.

KITCHEN PLANNING

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are planning to build a new home or to remodel, the kitchen is an important part of the house for you. As a final check in planning, you may find this list of dos and don'ts helpful. Don't install range and refrigerator side by side. Don't install a built-in oven too high. High mounting can result in burns and make it difficult to remove pans. Place it so that the open oven door is about three inches below elbow level. Don't put your range under a window, it's against many building codes and makes it difficult to open and close the window.

Do check door swing. Doors that open against the face of an appliance should be rehung on the other side of the door joint or hinge to swing out rather than in. Do see that when appliances face each other (refrigerator across the aisle from range) minimum clearance is 42 inches — 48 if possible.

Mental Illness Number 3

New Psychiatric Drugs Said To Be Excellent

Editor's Note — Even in the grim "back wards" of America's mental institutions, the new psychiatric drugs have imposed a measure of calm and order. But the illness itself remains unconquered, and hope is still distant for many thousands of chronic patients. In this third of four aritcles an AP reporter provides a sobering close-up.

By ROGER GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Critics of the new psychiatric drugs are relatively few in number among those who have witnessed the astonishing transformation in U.S. mental hospitals since the drugs were introduced five years ago.

But some doctors complain that the tranquilizers merely mask the symptoms of mental illness and that behind the mask, ready to explode when the drug wears off the dangerous sickness still exists.

Dr. Paul Feldman, research director at Topeka State Mental Hospital in Kansas, cites the case of Max - - - -, long known as the most dangerous patient ever admitted to the hospital.

FIVE YEARS

For five years, Max terrorized a whole ward. Although kept in handcuffs, he attacked patients, doctors and nurses.

Today, under treatment with psychiatric drugs, Max has calmed down sufficiently so that he has complete freedom of the hospital grounds.

"But tranquilizers haven't cured Max," says Dr. Feldman. "Deep inside him lies the same violence he always had. The drug has only controlled his aggressiveness. Take away the drug and he would revert to violence."

Critics contend, too, that some mental hospitals are discharging patients too fast — often simply to make way for the ever-growing tide of new arrivals.

Convalescent mental patients, improved enough to be discharged or sent home on furlough, are normally instructed to continue taking the drugs. Often they forget, or cannot afford to buy the expensive pills, or are deceived by their own quietude into believing they have fully recovered and no longer need medication.

The danger of premature release was dramatically illustrated on Nov. 23, 1959, when Grace Thrailkill, 31, of Rossville, Ga., a former mental patient, beat her four small children to death with a claw hammer.

Worried by this risk factor, mental hospital authorities repeatedly emphasize the necessity of post - hospital supervision—by community clinics, social workers, and so-called "halfway houses" where discharged patients spend a few weeks or months before returning to full-scale community life.

One of the many sad statistics of mental illness is that more than one-third of all patients who are released as cured or improved suffer relapses and must return for further treatment.

Dr. Henry Brill, chief of New York's mammoth Pilgrim State Mental Hospital at Brentwood, L.I., who pioneered the mass use of tranquilizing drugs in 1955, has little patience with those who scoff at the drugs as just another fad.

Sixty per cent of New York's 88,000 state mental hospital patients are now on one or more of the 79 different "mood control" pills as part of their daily regimen.

"There is absolutely no question that the drugs have revolutionized our mental hospitals," Dr. Brill said in an interview.

"Our basement storerooms are jammed to the ceiling with folded-up beds we no longer need—1,200 of them here at Pilgrim alone. Our patients are still sick, but they're not assaultive and we do not have really disturbed wards any more.

"Even some of the chronics are now going home after 20 years in the hospital."

Dr. Brill, 54, a gentle, kind-eyed man who has been at Pilgrim since 1932, unlocked the heavy wooden door to a women's violent ward.

"This is the most disturbed ward in the entire hospital 240 psychotic women," he said. "Five years ago, before we started using the drugs, it was pandemonium. Women screaming, tearing off their clothes, fighting. Today you won't hear a sound."

In two full days of trudging through ward after ward, I heard only one muffled scream among Pilgrim's 16,000 mental patients. Less than 30 patients in the entire institution were under restraint—in strait jackets or locked in seclusion rooms. Many hundreds seemed to be enjoying TV or strolled peacefully on the tree-shaded grounds.

As Dr. Brill walked slowly through the wards, patient after patient approached him to discuss their illness. Again and again they asked, "When can I go home, doctor?"

Dr. Brill motioned a tall, rawboned man of 37 to sit down for a private talk. In a dull, listless voice, like a man in a dream, the patient, a former well-paid draftsman, said he had been there six years and thought he was getting better, though he still heard voices.

"I like to get out, doctor."

Very slowly—because you don't make sudden movements in the presence of disturbed mental patients—Dr. Brill took the man's wrists and pushed back the sleeves. Both wrists were criss-crossed at least a dozen times with the thin white scars of attempted suicide. "A chronic schizophrenic—there is about one chance in five that he'll ever get out," Dr. Brill said.

Later, the doctor paused to speak to Jim—, a patient with "a typical Mona Lisa smile," as Dr Brill described him. A huge, bulge-muscled Negro, Jim looked up with stormy eyes and a beaming smile when Dr. Brill asked him his name.

"I dunno—it might be—is it Jim?" he sounded dubious.

"How do you feel, Jim?"

"Mixed up. I can't think no more." He shook his head, laughing a peculiar mirthless laugh.

Farther on we came to "The Pacer," 25, a stocky youth whose black paratroop boots thudded harshly as he strode rapidly up and down the long ward.

"Why do you walk so fast, Mike?" Dr. Brill said.

"I don't know. Seems like I've always been running," Mike said. "I ran away from home when I was 17. Guess I never stopped running."

At Georgia's Milledgeville State Hospital, I visited some of its back wards where chronic psychotics, beyond hope of recovery, wait to die.

Accompanied by Dr. Edwin W. Allen, 63, a staff psychiatrist, we stopped to listen to a skinny, pixie-faced old man, naked except for trousers, who sat on a narrow wooden bench and babbled a torrent of incoherent words.

"Fruit salad" talk, the psychiatrists call it. Dr. Allen asked the old man how long he had been there. "Three years." He had been there since 1920.

In a nearby cell, sitting on the cement floor with crippled legs twisted under him, an old man smiled feebly and asked, "Where's my baby?"

Years ago, soon after arriving at Milledgeville, the old man had "adopted" an idiot baby who had been placed in the same ward.

Year after year the old man mothered the baby as it grew through childhood and manhood. finally they took the idiot away and put him in another ward, but the old man always asks for his baby.

As we left the drab old building with its 560 chronic patients, Dr. Allen said: "Of course you pity them, but they're about as happy as most of us. There's a lot of talk about putting the worst cases out of their misery—euthanasia, mercy death — but they wouldn't agree to that.

"Their families wouldn't, either. It's wonderful to see the devotion of families to these unfortunates. They come on visits year after year, long after all hope is gone."

Of the 560 patients, Dr. Allen said "one or two of them might get out some day." Some have been there since 1900.

For many of these chronic schizophrenics, paranoiacs and manic depressives, the new "wonder drugs" came too late.

"There's not much you can do about the chronics except custody. Few of them respond to the drugs," said Dr. Irville H. MacKinnon, 62, distinguished former New York psychiatrist, now $25,000-a-year superintendent at Milledgeville.

About one-third of all psychotics—those with acute mental disorders — recover spontaneously, Dr. MacKinnon said.

But the victims of mental affliction who shun treatment, perhaps hidden away for years in an attic or secluded backroom by families ashamed of the "stigma" of insanity, are generally beyond help by the time they reach a mental hospital.

Paradoxically, the more violently disturbed a new patient is, the better the chances for recovery.

"The patient we like to see is the one who comes through the door fighting, kicking and screaming and dragging three or four attendants with him," Dr. MacKinnon said.

"Then we know he's got a good chance to go home. It means he hasn't withdrawn from life and we can still reach him with therapy."

Dr. Robert H. Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health and president of the American Psychiatric Association, estimates a new patient has about a 50-50 chance of leaving a mental hospital within 12 months. After two years, the odds against leaving rise to 16-1, after five years 99-1.

Urological Society Elects New Officers

BILOXI, Miss. (AP)—The Louisiana State Urological Society Saturday announced the election of Dr. Willouthby Kittredge of New Orleans as president.

He succeeds Dr. Robert K. WoMack of Shreveport.

Other officers named during the two-day convention were Dr. Holly Grimm, vice president, and Dr. John Lally, secretary - treasurer, both of New Orleans.

U.S Denies Charges By Communists

BERLIN (UPI) — Communist East Germany Saturday accused the U.S. Army of transporting war materials allegedly manufactured in West Berlin to West Germany over Soviet zone highways.

American Army authorities branded the charge as an outright lie. "We are not in the commercial trucking business," an Army spokesman said.

The Communist charges again raised the threat of Communist attempts to interfere with Western shipping lifelines.

The East German news agency ADN said information from "workers at West Berlin factories producing armaments for NATO" said that a "great part" of the "war materials" were shipped to the West by U.S. Army trucks on East German routes.

It said the goods included special radar equipment and radio directional finders.

The West has had similar charges lodged against it in recent weeks in a move apparently designed to put pressure on the United States to get its troops out of the isolated city. It was the first time the Army has been charged with transporting the goods.

Friday night, Hans Seigewasser, head of the Berlin branch of the Communist National Front told an East Berlin forum that a separate peace treaty between East Germany and the Russians might be signed if the West German government goes through with plans to convene Parliament in West Berlin next fall.

The Western Allies and the West Berlin government have repeatedly denied that war goods are being produced in the free part of the city.

Saturday's accusation by ADN made no threats about halting or harassing U.S. convoys on East German roads. The last time such action was taken was Feb., 1959, when Soviet border guards held up four West bound U.S. trucks for 56 hours claiming the right to search them. Their claim was thwarted by U.S. diplomatic officials and the trucks were allowed to continue.

ALONG BROADWAY

34 Theaters Will Start Fall Season

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway has 34 theaters available for the start of the new season — two more than last fall — thanks to recovery of the Hudson and the Mansfield (now named the Brooks Atkinson) from the radio-television people.

And, if you suddenly came up with a guaranteed hit that employed the biggest names in show business, you couldn't get into one of them. There's the usual fall booking jam, which actually exists, on paper at least, from the prevoius spring when the producers begin nailing down homes for their fall projects.

The major factor in this annual fall theater jam, which has become increasingly dominant in the past decade, is the fact that there are many hold-over hits, the shows that run one, two or three seasons.

The long - long run attraction is a phenomenon that began to develop during the World War II years, and it has waxed during a period when the number of legitimate houses has waned.

Back in the 1920's, before talkies, radio and TV, there were well over 200 Broadway productions a season as against an average of 55 to 60 in recent years, and at the peak there were some 80 houses to put them in.

But as important the number of houses was the fact that in those days, and into the 1930's, the biggest hit seldom lasted a calendar year. A nine - month run, except in rare cases, was sensational. So, you could exect to have a majority of the houses available at the start of each new season.

But this fall at least a dozen of the 34 available houses will be occupied already by hold-over attractions that promise to last well into the new season. That leaves 22 theaters available for new stuff, and it just happens that there are 22 attractions booked to open in them during September, October and November.

It is true that some of the theaters are empty now and will not get their new tenants in certain cases until November. But in view of current theater economics, and the desirability of heavy advance sales, it is a desperate producer who will take an interim booking of a few weeks in one of these already committeed houses.

If he should come up with a hit, where does he move? The show that has the prior booking for the theater may be a one-week flop, but a contract is a contract. There's a saying that "a hit never goes homeless," but that's not as true as it may have been when coined. It is not always a question of getting a theater, but often success depends on getting a "desirable" one.

Air National Guard Gets High Praise

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Gov. John Patterson of Alabama saluted the Air National Guard Saturday night as a combat-ready force fully equal to the challenge of push-button warfare.

He told the officers and men on the 117th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, in a prepared speech, that their organization "now stands at the highest point of combat readiness in its history."

Patterson's address, at a banquet for military and civic leaders, climaxed a review of the wing encampment by himself and Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

The Air Guard unit in training here is composed of squadrons from Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Patterson reminded the Guardsmen that "in this day of instant, push-button warfare, there won't be time to train after the bell rings.

"We must be able to move instantly, and by your efforts, I believe we will be able to do just that."

He said part of the success of the 117th wing has come from "the close cooperation and relationship between the various states and organizations."

He described the Air Guard as "only one of the many ties" that bind Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi together.

Mental Illness Number 3

New Psychiatric Drugs Said To Be Excellent

Editor's Note — Even in the grim "back wards" of America's mental institutions, the new psychiatric drugs have imposed a measure of calm and order. But the illness itself remains unconquered, and hope is still distant for many thousands of chronic patients. In this third of four aritcles an AP reporter provides a sobering close-up.

By ROGER GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Critics of the new psychiatric drugs are relatively few in number among those who have witnessed the astonishing transformation in U.S. mental hospitals since the drugs were introduced five years ago.

But some doctors complain that the tranquilizers merely mask the symptoms of mental illness and that behind the mask, ready to explode when the drug wears off the dangerous sickness still exists.

Dr. Paul Feldman, research director at Topeka State Mental Hospital in Kansas, cites the case of Max - - - -, long known as the most dangerous patient ever admitted to the hospital.

FIVE YEARS

For five years, Max terrorized a whole ward. Although kept in handcuffs, he attacked patients, doctors and nurses.

Today, under treatment with psychiatric drugs, Max has calmed down sufficiently so that he has complete freedom of the hospital grounds.

"But tranquilizers haven't cured Max," says Dr. Feldman. "Deep inside him lies the same violence he always had. The drug has only controlled his aggressiveness. Take away the drug and he would revert to violence."

Critics contend, too, that some mental hospitals are discharging patients too fast — often simply to make way for the ever-growing tide of new arrivals.

Convalescent mental patients, improved enough to be discharged or sent home on furlough, are normally instructed to continue taking the drugs. Often they forget, or cannot afford to buy the expensive pills, or are deceived by their own quietude into believing they have fully recovered and no longer need medication.

The danger of premature release was dramatically illustrated on Nov. 23, 1959, when Grace Thrailkill, 31, of Rossville, Ga., a former mental patient, beat her four small children to death with a claw hammer.

Worried by this risk factor, mental hospital authorities repeatedly emphasize the necessity of post - hospital supervision—by community clinics, social workers, and so-called "halfway houses" where discharged patients spend a few weeks or months before returning to full-scale community life.

One of the many sad statistics of mental illness is that more than one-third of all patients who are released as cured or improved suffer relapses and must return for further treatment.

Dr. Henry Brill, chief of New York's mammoth Pilgrim State Mental Hospital at Brentwood, L.I., who pioneered the mass use of tranquilizing drugs in 1955, has little patience with those who scoff at the drugs as just another fad.

Sixty per cent of New York's 88,000 state mental hospital patients are now on one or more of the 79 different "mood control" pills as part of their daily regimen.

"There is absolutely no question that the drugs have revolutionized our mental hospitals," Dr. Brill said in an interview.

"Our basement storerooms are jammed to the ceiling with folded-up beds we no longer need—1,200 of them here at Pilgrim alone. Our patients are still sick, but they're not assaultive and we do not have really disturbed wards any more.

Dr. Brill, 54, a gentle, kind-eyed man who has been at Pilgrim since 1932, unlocked the heavy wooden door to a women's violent ward.

"This is the most disturbed ward in the entire hospital 240 psychotic women," he said. "Five years ago, before we started using the drugs, it was pandemonium. Women screaming, tearing off their clothes, fighting. Today you won't hear a sound."

In two full days of trudging through ward after ward, I heard only one muffled scream among Pilgrim's 16,000 mental patients. Less than 30 patients in the entire institution were under restraint—in strait jackets or locked in seclusion rooms. Many hundreds seemed to be enjoying TV or strolled peacefully on the tree-shaded grounds.

As Dr. Brill walked slowly through the wards, patient after patient approached him to discuss their illness. Again and again they asked, "When can I go home, doctor?"

Dr. Brill motioned a tall, raw-boned man of 37 to sit down for a private talk. In a dull, listless voice, like a man in a dream, the patient, a former well-paid draftsman, said he had been there six years and thought he was getting better, though he still heard voices.

"I like to get out, doctor."

Very slowly—because you don't make sudden movements in the presence of disturbed mental patients—Dr. Brill took the man's wrists and pushed back the sleeves. Both wrists were criss-crossed at least a dozen times with the thin white scars of attempted suicide. "A chronic schizophrenic—there is about one chance in five that he'll ever get out," Dr. Brill said.

Later, the doctor paused to speak to Jim—, a patient with "a typical Mona Lisa smile," as Dr Brill described him. A huge, bulge-muscled Negro, Jim looked up with stormy eyes and a beaming smile when Dr. Brill asked him his name.

"I dunno—it might be—is it Jim?" he sounded dubious.

"How do you feel, Jim?"

"Mixed up. I can't think no more." He shook his head, laughing a peculiar mirthless laugh.

Farther on we came to "The Pacer," 25, a stocky youth whose black paratroop boots thudded harshly as he strode rapidly up and down the long ward.

"Why do you walk so fast, Mike?" Dr. Brill said.

"I don't know. Seems like I've always been running," Mike said. "I ran away from home when I was 17. Guess I never stopped running."

At Georgia's Milledgeville State Hospital, I visited some of its back wards where chronic psychotics, beyond hope of recovery, wait to die.

Accompanied by Dr. Edwin W. Allen, 63, a staff psychiatrist, we stopped to listen to a skinny, pixie-faced old man, naked except for trousers, who sat on a narrow wooden bench and babbled a torrent of incoherent words.

"Fruit salad" talk, the psychiatrists call it. Dr. Allen asked the old man how long he had been there. "Three years." He had been there since 1920.

In a nearby cell, sitting on the cement floor with crippled legs twisted under him, an old man smiled feebly and asked, "Where's my baby?"

Years ago, soon after arriving at Milledgeville, the old man had "adopted" an idiot baby who had been placed in the same ward.

Year after year the old man mothered the baby as it grew through childhood and manhood. finally they took the idiot away and put him in another ward, but the old man always asks for his baby.

As we left the drab old building with its 560 chronic patients, Dr. Allen said: "Of course you pity them, but they're about as happy as most of us. There's a lot of talk about putting the worst cases out of their misery—euthanasia, mercy death — but they wouldn't agree to that.

"Their families wouldn't, either. It's wonderful to see the devotion of families to these unfortunates. They come on visits year after year, long after all hope is gone."

Of the 560 patients, Dr. Allen said "one or two of them might get out some day." Some have been there since 1900.

For many of these chronic schizophrenics, paranoiacs and manic depressives, the new "wonder drugs" came too late.

"There's not much you can do about the chronics except custody. Few of them respond to the drugs," said Dr. Irville H. MacKinnon, 62, distinguished former New York psychiatrist, now $25,000-a-year superintendent at Milledgeville.

About one-third of all psychotics—those with acute mental disorders — recover spontaneously, Dr. MacKinnon said.

But the victims of mental affliction who shun treatment, perhaps hidden away for years in an attic or secluded backroom by families ashamed of the "stigma" of insanity, are generally beyond help by the time they reach a mental hospital.

Paradoxically, the more violently disturbed a new patient is, the better the chances for recovery.

"The patient we like to see is the one who comes through the door fighting, kicking and screaming and dragging three or four attendants with him," Dr. MacKinnon said.

"Then we know he's got a good chance to go home. It means he hasn't withdrawn from life and we can still reach him with therapy."

Dr. Robert H. Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health and president of the American Psychiatric Association, estimates a new patient has about a 50-50 chance of leaving a mental hospital within 12 months. After two years, the odds against leaving rise to 16-1, after five years 99-1.

Urological Society Elects New Officers

BILOXI, Miss. (AP)—The Louisiana State. Urological Society Saturday announced the election of Dr. Willouthby Kittredge of New Orleans as president.

He succeeds Dr. Robert K. WoMack of Shreveport.

Other officers named during the two-day convention were Dr. Holly Grimm, vice president, and Dr. John Lally, secretary - treasurer, both of New Orleans.

U.S Denies Charges By Communists

BERLIN (UPI) — Communist East Germany Saturday accused the U.S. Army of transporting war materials allegedly manufactured in West Berlin to West Germany over Soviet zone highways.

American Army authorities branded the charge as an outright lie. "We are not in the commercial trucking business," an Army spokesman said.

The East German news agency ADN said information from "workers at West Berlin factories producing armaments for NATO" said that a "great part" of the "war materials" were shipped to the West by U.S. Army trucks on East German routes.

It said the goods included special radar equipment and radio directional finders.

The West has had similar charges lodged against it in recent weeks in a move apparently designed to put pressure on the United States to get its troops out of the isolated city. It was the first time the Army has been charged with transporting the goods.

Friday night, Hans Seigewasser, head of the Berlin branch of the Communist National Front told an East Berlin forum that a separate peace treaty between East Germany and the Russians might be signed if the West German government goes through with plans to convene Parliament in West Berlin next fall.

The Western Allies and the West Berlin government have repeatedly denied that war goods are being produced in the free part of the city.

Saturday's accusation by ADN made no threats about halting or harassing U.S. convoys on East German roads. The last time such action was taken was Feb., 1959, when Soviet border guards held up four West bound U.S. trucks for 56 hours claiming the right to search them. Their claim was thwarted by U.S. diplomatic officials and the trucks were allowed to continue.

ALONG BROADWAY

34 Theaters Will Start Fall Season

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway has 34 theaters available for the start of the new season — two more than last fall — thanks to recovery of the Hudson and the Mansfield (now named the Brooks Atkinson) from the radio-television people.

And, if you suddenly came up with a guaranteed hit that employed the biggest names in show business, you couldn't get into one of them. There's the usual fall booking jam, which actually exists, on paper at least, from the prevoius spring when the producers begin nailing down homes for their fall projects.

The major factor in this annual fall theater jam, which has become increasingly dominant in the past decade, is the fact that there are many hold-over hits, the shows that run one, two or three seasons.

The long - long run attraction is a phenomenon that began to develop during the World War II years, and it has waxed during a period when the number of legitimate houses has waned.

Back in the 1920's, before talkies, radio and TV, there were well over 200 Broadway productions a season as against an average of 55 to 60 in recent years, and at the peak there were some 80 houses to put them in.

But as important the number of houses was the fact that in those days, and into the 1930's, the biggest hit seldom lasted a calendar year. A nine - month run, except in rare cases, was sensational. So, you could exect to have a majority of the houses available at the start of each new season.

But this fall at least a dozen of the 34 available houses will be occupied already by hold-over attractions that promise to last well into the new season. That leaves 22 theaters available for new stuff, and it just happens that there are 22 attractions booked to open in them during September, October and November.

It is true that some of the theaters are empty now and will not get their new tenants in certain cases until November. But in view of current theater economics, and the desirability of heavy advance sales, it is a desperate producer who will take an interim booking of a few weeks in one of these already committeed houses.

If he should come up with a hit, where does he move? The show that has the prior booking for the theater may be a one-week flop, but a contract is a contract. There's a saying that "a hit never goes homeless," but that's not as true as it may have been when coined. It is not always a question of getting a theater, but often success depends on getting a "desirable" one.

Air National Guard Gets High Praise

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Gov. John Patterson of Alabama saluted the Air National Guard Saturday night as a combat-ready force fully equal to the challenge of push-button warfare.

He told the officers and men on the 117th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, in a prepared speech, that their organization "now stands at the highest point of combat readiness in its history."

Patterson's address, at a banquet for military and civic leaders, climaxed a review of the wing encampment by himself and Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

Patterson reminded the Guardsmen that "in this day of instant, push-button warfare, there won't be time to train after the bell rings.

"We must be able to move instantly, and by your efforts, I believe we will be able to do just that."

He said part of the success of the 117th wing has come from "the close cooperation and relationship between the various states and organizations."

He described the Air Guard as "only one of the many ties" that bind Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi together.

Raging Forest Fire Razes Small Town

FORESTHILL, Calif. (UPI)—An explosive forest fire destroyed the town of Michigan Bluff late Saturday after its 100 residents fled hastily, leaving all their belongings.

About 50 homes were destroyed in Michigan Bluff, seven miles west of here. Two other communities were also evacuated ahead of the racing flames. They were Bath, with 20 residents and Baker Ranch with a population of 25.

Foresthill itself, which has a population of 500, was endangered as the fast-moving fire raced up the western slopes of the Sierra.

The American Red Cross set up emergency headquarters in the Foresthill Memorial Hall to care for the fire refugees.

Residents from Michigan Bluff said they had to leave their homes with no time to take any belongings.

California Division of Forestry officials said the fire, which was man-caused, broke out late Saturday afternoon and quickly spread through the dry timber. Some witnesses said whole canyons full of trees seemed to explode into flames as the fire spread. By 7 p.m. (10 p.m. edt) 1,000 acres were ablaze and there was no hope for control, officials said.

"Back fires" were deliberately set around Foresthill to clear a buffer around the town to protect it from the main fire. Barring a wind change, the town was not in immediate danger.

Witnesses said smoke shot 15,000 feet into the sky over the area. Smoke from this fire and several others in the Sierra blackened the sky over Reno, Nev., more than 50 miles east.

One of the other flash fires broke out Saturday afternoon near Donner Lake and was also out of control Saturday night, after it grew to 1,000 acres.

Texas Woman Slain In Store At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—Police said they suspended search Saturday night for W. B. Dupree, 61, who was sought for questioning in connection with the pistol slaying of a 43-year-old Texas woman in Dupree's grocery and market here.

Officers said Dupree fled from his store after Mrs. Betty Jean Norman, Houston, Tex., a former employe, was shot to death. Dupree's truck was found near a wooded area here, and officers planned to resume the search for him Sunday.

Mrs. Norman was found dead on the floor of Dupree's store. She had been shot in the chest three times with a .38-caliber pistol. Officers said apparently two shots were fired after she had been felled by the first shot; two bullet holes were found in the flooring beneath her body.

Mrs. Norman, who formerly was employed by Dupree, had gone to Texas and had married. She returned to Shreveport Friday on a visit.

A 12-year-old girl, Arnell Anderson, who had been in the Dupree store, told police that Dupree told her to leave, that as she left the store she heard shots fired and she saw Dupree, with a pistol in his hand, go toward his truck.

Powers Family Tours Moscow

"Ida was opposed, but she went anyway, finally," her doctor told reporters.

They went first to Lenin Stadium, to Moscow University, and then drove to the site in Gorky Park where the remains of Powers' U2 plane had been on public display.

They lunched at an outdoor pavilion in the park and drove through Red Square past the Kremlin on the way back to their hotel.

MAP SUMMARY

The pattern of thunderstorm activity again covered a broad section of the nation during the late afternoon and evening Saturday. The principal area of widespread activity was located in the upper and central Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and into the middle Atlantic states. Widely scattered showers also dotted portions of northern New England and the Gulf Coast states and extended from western Kansas and the south plains of Texas through the central and southern Rockies and plateaus. Many of the more vigorous thunderstorms brought local gusty winds, hail, and substantial rainfall deposits. Funnel clouds or tornadoes were reported in western Kansas, Wisconsin and Iowa and moderate hail in Kansas, Oklahoma and Michigan during the afternoon.

Hail 1½ inches in diameter pelted Joplin, Missouri, and over 1½ inches of rain was measured at Nowata, Oklahoma, in about 30 minutes. Some afternoon and early evening rainfall totals included Caribou, Maine, 1.54 inches; Cleveland, Ohio, 1.25 inches; Dodge City, Kansas, 0.47 inch; and Presidio, Texas, and Evansville, Indiana, 0.38 inch. Numerous stations in central and southern areas from the Rockies eastward recorded somewhat lighter amounts.

Late afternoon and early evening temperature readings in the mid 80s and low 90s were the most frequent across the nation. Cooler 70s were maintained in the northern Rockies and Pacific northwest and in shower cooled sections of the Mississippi Valley, Great Lakes and New England. Some 60s were felt along the Pacific coastline while 100s covered portions of Utah, the desert southwest and the interior valleys of California.

The forecast for today includes the possibility of scattered mostly afternoon and evening thundershowers from the Mississippi Valley and Texas eastward to the middle and south Atlantic states. Widely scattered thundershowers are also forecast from the southern and central sierras eastward to the southern Rockies and the western plains. Low clouds and fog will be general along the Pacific coastline in the morning and late afternoon showers may dampen the Washington coast. Temperatures should be a little cooler than Saturday in the northwestern plains, in the desert southwest and slightly warmer and more humid in the northeastern states. Little significant change is expected elsewhere.

Ike To Receive Post-Presidency Bid For Speech

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will receive Monday his first publicly announced invitation for a speaking engagement after he leaves the White House.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Saturday Finis E. Davis, president of Lions International, has a White House appointment Monday at which he will ask Eisenhower to speak at the Lions' 44th annual convention in Atlantic City in June 1961.

Hagerty did not say whether Eisenhower would accept the date. He said that while this is the first publicly announced post-presidency speaking invitation to Eisenhower, other invitations have been received by Eisenhower privately.

Report Issued On Communist Spy Activities

BONN (UPI)—Western intelligence organizations have estimated the Communists have 500,000 espionage agents throughout the world and spend 2 billion dollars a year on propaganda, spying and infiltration activites, an official West German report said Saturday.

The bulletin, the official government organ, published the report. It also said some intelligence experts estimate the money the Communists spent on these activities might even run as high as $4 billion annually.

Communist spies are trained at 20 schools in Prague, Czechoslovakia; Warsaw, Poland, Budapest, Hungary, and Tashkent in the Soviet Union, the bulletin said.

"The top spies are trained in schools in Moscow and Leningrad," it reported.

It said the Czech school trains for underdeveloped nations particularly in Africa, while spies for the Near East and Arab countries are schooled in Tashkent. Peiping is the training center for agents going to the Far East and Budapest trains agents with the special task of infiltrating labor unions. All the schools are camouflaged, the bulletin said.

It said there are an estimated 12,000 Communist agents in France alone, with 20,000 each in Italy, Indonesia and India. The West German Interior Ministry previously had said there were 16,000 spies in West Germany. Tens of thousands of others were reported spread through the rest of the world.

"There is no need for further proof that the cold war. . .has a far higher classification in the East than in the West," the bulletin said.

Vice Premier's Forces Seize Mali's Capital

DAKAR, Mali Federation (AP) — The newly independent Mali Federation was threatened with partition Saturday night after a tense day that found Acting President Modibo Keita a virtual prisoner in his own capital.

In a day that saw bloodshed threatened, followers of his archrival, Vice Premier Mamadou Dia, seized control of this capital and major port city.

Keita is from the former French Sudan. Dia is from the former French Senegal, most populous of the two states in the federation formed only last year. The federation became independent June 20.

In a bid to become a strongman, Keita dismissed Dia Friday and declared a state of urgency —corresponding to martial law.

Keita was at a disadvantage in the struggle since Dakar, seat of the federation government, is in Senegal. He thus tried his coup in the heart of Dia's territory.

Surrounded by his supporters, Keita was reported to be closely confined at Government House. His hand-picked army chief, Col. Soumare, was arrested by Dia's men.

Keita also is premier of Sudan, and Dia is premier of Senegal. Keita dismissed Dia in a move to strengthen his position before the Mali presidential elections scheduled for Aug. 27. Dia responded by withdrawing Senegal from the federation, and Keita countered with a declaration of a state of urgency.

Both Radio Senegal and Radio Mali are now in the hands of Senegalise authorities. Previously the two stations broadcast contradictory directives and reports since Radio Mali had been operated by Keita supporters. The two stations reported Saturday night that Keita had called for intervention of French troops and that the request had been denied.

Congolese Court Accuses Belgian Of Kidnap Try

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — A Congolese court Saturday accused Gaston Dieu, Belgian manager for Sabena Airlines here, of trying to kidnap a cousin of Premier Patrice Lumumba. Dieu was released in $10,000 bail after denying the charge.

Later at the French Embassy where Dieu sought refuge, armed Congolese police seeking to re-arrest him left quietly after a French embassy official gave them a case of beer.

During his arraignment, Dieu said he had nothing to do with the fact that the plane with Lumumba's cousin, identified only as Monombe, aboard failed to make a scheduled stop at Luluabourg where Monombe was to disembark, it landed instead at Elisabethville in secessionist Katanga Province where Monombe allegedly was arrested by Belgian paratroopers.

Dieu countercharged that the Congolese held him in jail for five days without benefit of counsel and had beaten him. He stripped off his shirt to show the judge his bruises.

Tropical Storm Cleo Heading Over Atlantic

BOSTON (UPI)—Tropical storm Cleo, no longer a hurricane, whirled northeastward over the Atlantic Ocean Saturday after never touching the United States mainland.

The little storm which for a time had threatened New England's south coast early Saturday passed harmlessly out to sea without causing even abnormally high winds.

Government agencies paid more attention to the hurricane watch called by the weather bureau than did the general public in southern New England.

Cape Cod was jammed with tourists and though the area was a likely target for Cleo, most visitors and residents adopted a wait-and-see attitude and went about their normal pursuits. Summer theaters reported a thriving business last night.

Kidnap-Murder Suspect's Trial May Be Delayed

BALTIMORE (UPI)—The trial of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., charged with the kidnap-murder of a Virginia couple and their two young daughters, may not be held before December.

Leon H. A. Pierson, U. S. attorney for Maryland, said lawyers for Rees have indicated they will be unable to try the case Sept. 19 as he suggested.

Rees, 31, of Hyattsville, Md., is in custody in U.S. District Court here on federal charges of kidnaping and murdering Mrs. Carroll Jackson, 27, of Apple Grove, Va. and her youngest daughter, Susan Ann, 5. Virginia authorities have charged him with killing Carroll Jackson, 29, and the couple's other daughter, Janet, 18-months.

The family disappeared from their automobile on a Virginia highway in January, 1959. Federal charges applied only to the mother and one daughter since only those two victims allegedly were transported from Virginia into Maryland where they were killed.

He Learns While He Earns

WORDS SHE WILL NEVER HEAR...

A great deal is being said and printed these days about juvenile delinquency. Many prominent educators, judges, statesmen, clergymen, and others are saying that a better use of leisure time by young people could greatly reduce the delinquency. One neighbor of Johnny Green's said this: "Kids don't know how to work these days." Another commented: "Some teenagers don't grow up; they just sit."

There may be much truth in what these people say. But the comments which they are making are not directed to the mother of Johnny Green. For Johnny is a newspaperboy. He has a business of his own — and work to do. He keeps busy—building his route, keeping accurate records, figuring out better ways to serve his customers. He's learning to accept responsibility as a way of everyday living. He's using his leisure time to grow up!

RESIDENTS FLEE

Raging Forest Fire Razes Small Town

FORESTHILL, Calif. (UPI)—An explosive forest fire destroyed the town of Michigan Bluff late Saturday after its 100 residents fled hastily, leaving all their belongings.

About 50 homes were destroyed in Michigan Bluff, seven miles west of here. Two other communities were also evacuated ahead of the racing flames. They were Bath, with 20 residents and Baker Ranch with a population of 25.

Foresthill itself, which has a population of 500, was endangered as the fast-moving fire raced up the western slopes of the Sierra.

The American Red Cross set up emergency headquarters in the Foresthill Memorial Hall to care for the fire refugees.

Residents from Michigan Bluff said they had to leave their homes with no time to take any belongings.

California Division of Forestry officials said the fire, which was man-caused, broke out late Saturday afternoon and quickly spread through the dry timber. Some witnesses said whole canyons full of trees seemed to explode into flames as the fire spread. By 7 p. m. (10 p. m. edt) 1,000 acres were ablaze and there was no hope for control, officials said.

"Back fires" were deliberately set around Foresthill to clear a buffer around the town to protect it from the main fire. Barring a wind change, the town was not in immediate danger.

Witnesses said smoke shot 15,000 feet into the sky over the area. Smoke from this fire and several others in the Sierra blackened the sky over Reno, Nev., more than 50 miles east.

One of the other flash fires broke out Saturday afternoon near Donner Lake and was also out of control Saturday night, after it grew to 1,000 acres.

Texas Woman Slain In Store At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—Police said they suspended search Saturday night for W. B. Dupree, 61, who was sought for questioning in connection with the pistol slaying of a 43-year-old Texas woman in Dupree's grocery and market here.

Officers said Dupree fled from his store after Mrs. Betty Jean Norman, Houston, Tex., a former employe, was shot to death. Dupree's truck was found near a wooded area here, and officers planned to resume the search for him Sunday.

Mrs. Norman was found dead on the floor of Dupree's store. She had been shot in the chest three times with a .38-caliber pistol. Officers said apparently two shots were fired after she had been felled by the first shot; two bullet holes were found in the flooring beneath her body.

Mrs. Norman, who formerly was employed by Dupree, had come to Texas and had married. She returned to Shreveport Friday on a visit.

A 12-year-old girl, Arnell Anderson, who had been in the Dupree store, told police that Dupree told her to leave, that as she left the store she heard shots fired and she saw Dupree, with a pistol in his hand, go toward his truck.

Powers Family Tours Moscow

"Ida was opposed, but she went anyway, finally," her doctor told reporters.

They went first to Lenin Stadium, to Moscow University, and then drove to the site in Gorky Park where the remains of their son's U2 plane had been on public display.

They lunched at an outdoor pavilion in the park and drove through Red Square past the Kremlin on the way back to their hotel.

MAP SUMMARY

The pattern of thunderstorm activity again covered a broad section of the nation during the late afternoon and evening Saturday. The principal area of widespread activity was located in the upper and central Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and into the middle Atlantic states. Widely scattered showers also dotted portions of northern New England and the Gulf Coast states and extended from western Kansas and the south plains of Texas through the central and southern Rockies and plateaus. Many of the more vigorous thunderstorms brought local gusty winds, hail, and substantial rainfall deposits. Funnel clouds or tornadoes were reported in western Kansas, Wisconsin and Iowa and moderate hail in Kansas, Oklahoma and Michigan during the afternoon.

Hail 1½ inches in diameter pelted Joplin, Missouri, and over 1½ inches of rain was measured at Nowata, Oklahoma, in about 30 minutes. Some afternoon and early evening rainfall totals included Caribou, Maine, 1.54 inches; Cleveland, Ohio, 1.25 inches; Dodge City, Kansas, 0.47 inch; and Presidio, Texas, and Evansville, Indiana, 0.38 inch. Numerous stations in central and southern areas from the Rockies eastward recorded somewhat lighter amounts.

Late afternoon and early evening temperature readings in the mid 80s and low 90s were the most frequent across the nation. Cooler 70s were maintained in the northern Rockies and Pacific northwest and in shower cooled sections of the Mississippi Valley, Great Lakes and New England. Some 60s were felt along the Pacific coastline while 100s covered portions of Utah, the desert southwest and the interior valleys of California.

The forecast for today includes the possibility of scattered mostly afternoon and evening thundershowers from the Mississippi Valley and Texas eastward to the middle and south Atlantic states. Widely scattered thundershowers are also forecast from the southern and central sierras eastward to the southern Rockies and the western plains. Low clouds and fog will be general along the Pacific coastline in the morning and late afternoon showers may dampen the Washington coast. Temperatures should be a little cooler than Saturday in the northwestern plains, in the desert southwest and slightly warmer and more humid in the northeastern states. Little significant change is expected elsewhere.

Ike To Receive Post-Presidency Bid For Speech

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will receive Monday his first publicly announced invitation for a speaking engagement after he leaves the White House.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Saturday Finis E. Davis, president of Lions International, has a White House appointment Monday at which he will ask Eisenhower to speak at the Lions' 44th annual convention in Atlantic City in June 1961.

Hagerty did not say whether Eisenhower would accept the date. He said that while this is the first publicly announced post-presidency speaking invitation to Eisenhower, other invitations have been received by Eisenhower privately.

John Boettiger Weds In N. Y.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — John Roosevelt Boettiger, a grandson of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Miss Deborah Ann Bentley of suburban De Witt were married Saturday.

Boettiger's grandmother, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, attended the ceremony in the De Witt Community church.

The Rev. Alexander C. Carmichel officiated.

Boettiger's mother is Mrs. James E. Halsted of Lexington, Ky. She and her husband formerly lived in the Syracuse suburb of Lafayette.

Mrs. Halsted, nee Anna Roosevelt, is the only daughter of the former president and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The couple plan to live in New York City.

Vice Premier's Forces Seize Mali's Capital

DAKAR, Mali Federation (AP) — The newly independent Mali Federation was threatened with partition Saturday night after a tense day that found Acting President Modibo Keita a virtual prisoner in his own capital.

In a day that saw bloodshed threatened, followers of his archrival, Vice Premier Mamadou Dia, seized control of this capital and major port city.

Keita is from the former French Sudan. Dia is from the former French Senegal, most populous of the two states in the federation formed only last year. The federation became independent June 20.

In a bid to become a strongman, Keita dismissed Dia Friday and declared a state of urgency —corresponding to martial law.

Keita was at a disadvantage in the struggle since Dakar, seat of the federation government, is in Senegal. He thus tried his coup in the heart of Dia's territory.

Surrounded by his supporters, Keita was reported to be closely confined at Government House. His hand-picked army chief, Col. Soumare, was arrested by Dia's men.

Keita also is premier of Sudan, and Dia is premier of Senegal. Keita dismissed Dia in a move to strengthen his position before the Mali presidential elections scheduled for Aug. 27. Dia responded by withdrawing Senegal from the federation, and Keita countered with a declaration of a state of urgency.

Both Radio Senegal and Radio Mali are now in the hands of Senegalse authorities. Previously the two stations broadcast contradictory directives and reports since Radio Mali had been operated by Keita supporters. The two stations reported Saturday night that Keita had called for intervention of French troops and that the request had been denied.

Congolese Court Accuses Belgian Of Kidnap Try

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — A Congolese court Saturday accused Gaston Dieu, Belgian manager for Sabena Airlines here, of trying to kidnap a cousin of Premier Patrice Lumumba. Dieu was released in $10,000 bail after denying the charge.

Later at the French Embassy where Dieu sought refuge, armed Congolese police seeking to rearrest him left quietly after a French embassy official gave them a case of beer.

During his arraignment, Dieu said he had nothing to do with the fact that the plane with Lumumba's cousin, identified only as Monombe, aboard failed to make a scheduled stop at Luluabourg where Monombe was to disembark, it landed instead at Elisabethville in secessionist Katanga Province where Monombe allegedly was arrested by Belgian paratroopers.

Dieu countercharged that the Congolese held him in jail for five days without benefit of counsel and had beaten him. He stripped off his shirt to show the judge his wounds.

Local Resident's Mother Dies At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT (Special) — Mrs. J. D. Aldridge, 89, died in a Shreveport hospital Saturday morning following a long illness.

Interment will be in the Fillmore Cemetery under the direction of Roseneath's.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Brown, and Mrs. Carol A. Brown, both of Shreveport; three sons, V. D. Aldridge, Shreveport, Harvey Aldridge, Haughton, and Kelly Aldridge, West Monroe, and three grandchildren.

Report Issued On Communist Spy Activities

BONN (UPI)—Western intelligence organizations have estimated the Communists have 500,000 espionage agents throughout the world and spend 2 billion dollars a year on propaganda, spying and infiltration activites, an official West German report said Saturday.

The bulletin, the official government organ, published the report. It also said some intelligence experts estimate the money the Communists spent on these activities might even run as high as $4 billion annually.

Communist spies are trained at 20 schools in Prague, Czechoslovakia; Warsaw, Poland, Budapest, Hungary, and Tashkent in the Soviet Union, the bulletin said.

"The top spies are trained in schools in Moscow and Leningrad," it reported.

It said the Czech school trains for underdeveloped nations particularly in Africa, while spies for the Near East and Arab countries are schooled in Tashkent. Peiping is the training center for agents going to the Far East and Budapest trains agents with the special task of infiltrating labor unions. All the schools are camuflaged, the bulletin said.

It said there are an estimated 12,000 Communist agents in France alone, with 20,000 each in Italy, Indonesia and India. The West German Interior Ministry previously had said there were 16,000 spies in West Germany. Tens of thousands of others were reported spread through the rest of the world.

"There is no need for further proof that the cold war. . .has a far higher classification in the East than in the West," the bulletin said.

Tropical Storm Cleo Heading Over Atlantic

BOSTON (UPI)—Tropical storm Cleo, no longer a hurricane, whirled northeastward over the Atlantic Ocean Saturday without ever touching the United States mainland.

The little storm which for a time had threatened New England's south coast early Saturday passed harmlessly out to sea without causing even abnormally high tides.

Government agencies paid more attention to the hurricane watch called by the weather bureau than did the general public in southern New England.

Cape Cod was jammed with tourists and though the area was a likely target for Cleo, most visitors and residents adopted a wait-and-see attitude and went about their normal pursuits. Summer theaters reported a thriving business last night.

Kidnap-Murder Suspect's Trial May Be Delayed

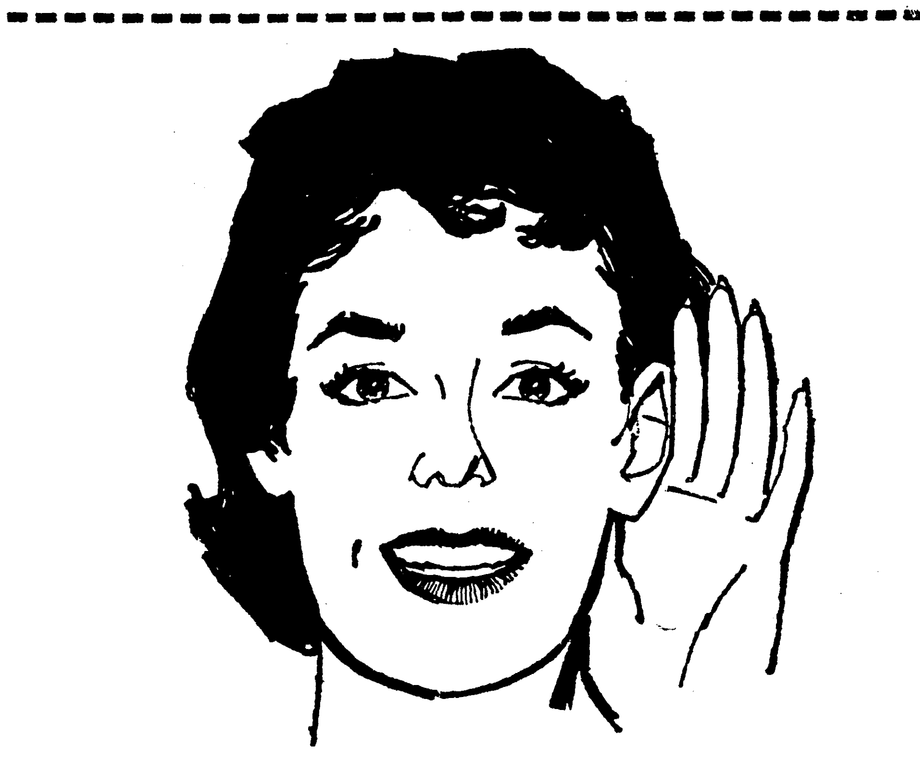
BALTIMORE (UPI)—The trial of Melvin Davis Rees Jr., charged with the kidnap-murder of a Virginia couple and their two young daughters, may not be held before December.

Leon H. A. Pierson, U. S. attorney for Maryland, said lawyers for Rees have indicated they will be unable to try the case Sept. 19 as he suggested.

Rees, 31, of Hyattsville, Md., will be tried in U.S. District Court here on federal charges of kidnapping and murdering Mrs. Carroll Jackson, 27, of Apple Grove, Va. and her daughter, daughter, Susan Ann, 5. Virginia authorities have charged him with killing Carroll Jackson, 29, and the couple's other daughter, Janet, 18-months.

The family disappeared from their automobile on a Virginia highway in January, 1959. Federal charges applied only to the mother and older daughter since only those two victims allegedly were transported from Virginia into Maryland where they were killed.

He Learns While He Earns



WORDS SHE WILL NEVER HEAR...

A great deal is being said and printed these days about juvenile delinquency. Many prominent educators, judges, statesmen, clergymen, and others are saying that a better use of leisure time by young people could greatly reduce the delinquency. One neighbor of Johnny Green's said this: "Kids don't know how to work these days." Another commented: "Some teenagers don't grow up; they just sit."

There may be much truth in what these people say. But the comments which they are making are not directed to the mother of Johnny Green. For Johnny is a newspaperboy. He has a business of his own — and work to do. He keeps busy—building his route, keeping accurate records, figuring out better ways to serve his customers. He's learning to accept responsibility as a way of everyday living. He's using his leisure time to grow up!

HOLLYWOOD NOTES

Star Julie Newmar Scared Of Height

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Julie Newmar takes sun baths under a blanket; believes movie acting is better than stage acting, thinks of gay Paris to feel sadness; relaxes by hurrying and is so tall her legs measure 38 inches from thigh to heel —yet is scared of height.

In a word, Julie is somewhat of a screwball, but delightfully so.

She has been a screwball since she first danced in movie musicals eight years ago. Reporters didn't quote her then.

They do now. Like another chorus girl of those days—Gwen Verdon, Julie went to New York and became a star.

Julie, 24, daughter of a Los Angeles State College professor, is back in her home town as the star of "Marriage-Go-Round," with Susan Hayward and James Mason.

SAME PART

She is playing the same part that got her Broadway's Tony award—and wearing the same scanty wardrobe.

Julie is a tall girl of exquisite architecture. She says she is 5 feet 10 but she looks much taller. That's because she likes 4½-inch heels. She has no complex about her height.

"I can breathe in elevators. I can watch parades," she says. "I find most men, whether short or tall, prefer big girls. We remind them of their mothers, I guess.

"Tall people don't have to waste energy trying to look important. Little people get ahead because of frustration. We get ahead because of superiority."

Julie is big all over. For the statistic-minded, she is 39-23-39 and doesn't know her exact weight.

She drives the smallest car on the 20th Century-Fox lot and usually commands a goodly male audience every time she crawls into it.

Physically, her size doesn't do her any good fighting off men. That's why she thinks Paris is so depressing.

"A little man on the street there once hit me on the ear. I landed in the hospital for three days and couldn't hear for a month."

SHIELDED

She takes sunbaths by the pool with a blanket over her because "I like to feel blonde. It's a feminine color. Men look great dark but women don't. Blondes always need protection.

Julie owns 200 pairs of shoes and wears clinging jersey dresses when she wants to look sexy—or sexier. She never wears lipstick.

"I might want to kiss someone," she explains.

She has never been married. "I've never been that much in love with anyone. When I do, it will be a rich, handsome genius. I think they make ideal husbands."

Julie, an exceptional dancer, might have gone along for years portraying showgirls or sexpots like "Stupeyfin' Jones" in 'L'il Abner," which she did in both movie and stage versions.

Then her agent asked her to read for Joe Anthony, the director of "Marriage-Go-Round."

"I don't lie but I exaggerate so I told him I was Swedish and could speak Swedish."

The part called for a sexy Swede who wants a happily married man to father her baby eugenically—her body and beauty plus his brains.

"Mr. Anthony has hypnotic eyes. He gave me something to read in Icelandic. I thought it was Swedish. He didn't know either—so I got the part."

Investigate Two Thefts In Monroe

Monroe police are investigating two thefts and two attempted thefts that were reported to them yesterday.

Officers arrested a 10-year-old Negro boy for shoplifting in a downtown store. The boy was accused of taking an item valued at $1.50 from Morgan and Lindsey.

He is being held in the juvenile detention home, and will be tried in juvenile court.

The theft of a fan from the Christian Children's Fund Headquarters at 721 DeSiard St. is still unsolved.

A worker at the establishment told police that she placed a 16-inch, oscillating fan in the front part of the building yesterday morning and went to the back of the building. She said that when she returned, the fan was gone.

Mrs. Roy, of Frosty Kream, 1701 Jackson St., reported to police that someone tried to gain entrance to a cigarette machine which was situated just outside the building.

Investigating ofifcers stated that the lock had been pried off the door of the machine, but that nothing had been taken from it.

In another theft attempt, it was reported that someone tried to break into a drink machine at the Lion Service Station at 1000 Jackson St. Friday night. A quarter-inch blade screwdriver was found near the machine, and police believe that it was used to pry the door of the machine.

Officers said that nothing was taken from the machine.

Man Injured In Two-Car Collision

A West Monroe man fell asleep behind the wheel of his car yesterday morning, causing a two-car collision which brought minor injuries to the driver of the second vehicle.

Injured was Ellis B. Peddy Jr., 38, of 102 Gulpha Drive, and the "sleepy" driver, Howard L. Hobson, 22, of 1110 Arkansas Rd., was charged with reckless driving.

The accident occurred at 5:20 a.m. at the intersection of Slack and Trenton streets, according to police. Damages amounted to over $100.

Hobson was traveling south on Trenton Street when he stated that he fell asleep and his automobile strayed into the northbound traffic lane.

His vehicle struck the Peddy car, which was going south on Trenton Street.

Peddy was taken to the St. Francis hospital by a Kilpatrick's ambulance where he was treated and released yesterday afternoon.

Gen. Lemnitzer Wins Approval As Staff Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer won unanimous approval Saturday from the Senate Armed Services Committee for the top military post of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The committee also recommended confirmation for Gen. George Henry Decker, 58, as Army chief of staff to succeed Lemnitzer in that post.

It also approved retirement of Air Force Gen. Nathan F. Twining, present chairman of the military chiefs, as a four-star general. The exact retirement date is undetermined.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga), chairman, said the favorable committee actions would be reported to the Senate this week, after lapse of the week of time the group always has observed before approving nominations.

Lemnitzer, 60, and Decker, one of the few Army chiefs who is not a West Point graduate, testified in person before the committee approved their promotions.

Negro Held In Valve Theft

Monroe Dixon, 34, of Route Three, Swartz, was arrested at noon yesterday in Monroe for the theft of a water valve.

Dixon allegedly picked the valve up, valued at less than $20, and was trying to sell it. The valve had been dug up by the city, and when workers came to pick it up, the valve was missing.

Dixon is being held on a $200 bond.

Consider Meeting

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President William V. S. Tubman says African nations are considering a meeting of chiefs of state or foreign ministers on the Congo situation. He told his weekly news conference he shuddered when he heard that Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba said the Congo regime had lost confidence in U. N. Secretary.

IT'S HERE! OPEL

By The Buick Division of General Motors

The Car You've Been Waiting For

IT'S German Made WITH American Styling

OPEL REKORD

Opel's trim 5-passenger Rekord sedan makes good motoring sense from every point of view. The styling is smooth and pleasant to the eye—nothing faddish about it. Performance is smart with especially good response at low speed as well as effortless cruising at higher speeds. All this plus gas mileage up to 30 M.P.G. makes Opel the "Luxurious Economy Car".

OPEL CARAVAN

Probably the most unusual thing about the Opel Caravan station wagon—aside from its economy of price and operation is the amount of cargo it can carry in relation to its size and weight . . . better than 2000 pounds. Opel pioneered in the use of utilized body construction. The present strength, rigidity, quietness and durability of the Opel body is the result of continuous design improvements over a period of more than 20 years.

We invite you to see and drive the OPEL soon.

HOLLYWOOD NOTES

Star Julie Newmar Scared Of Height

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Julie Newmar takes sun baths under a blanket; believes movie acting is better than stage acting, thinks of gay Paris to feel sadness; relaxes by hurrying and is so tall her legs measure 33 inches from thigh to heel —yet is scared of height.

In a word, Julie is somewhat of a screwball, but delightfully so.

She has been a screwball since she first danced in movie musicals eight years ago. Reporters didn't quote her then.

They do now. Like another chorus girl of those days—Gwen Verdon. Julie went to New York and became a star.

Julie, 24, daughter of a Los Angeles State College professor, is back in her home town as the star of "Marriage-Go-Round," with Susan Hayward and James Mason.

SAME PART

She is playing the same part that got her Broadway's Tony award—and wearing the same scanty wardrobe.

Julie is a tall girl of exquisite architecture. She says she is 5 feet 10 but she looks much taller. That's because she likes 4½-inch heels. She has no complex about her height.

"I can breathe in elevators. I can watch parades," she says. "I find most men, whether short or tall, prefer big girls. We remind them of their mothers, I guess.

"Tall people don't have to waste energy trying to look important. Little people get ahead because of frustration. We get ahead because of superiority."

Julie is big all over. For the statistic-minded, she is 39-23-39 and doesn't know her exact weight.

She drives the smallest car on the 20th Century-Fox lot and usually commands a goodly male audience every time she crawls into it.

Physically, her size doesn't do her any good fighting off men. That's why she thinks Paris is so depressing.

"A little man on the street there once hit me on the ear. I landed in the hospital for three days and couldn't hear for a month."

SHIELDED

She takes sunbaths by the pool with a blanket over her because "I like to feel blonde. It's a feminine color. Men look great dark but women don't. Blondes always need protection.

Julie owns 200 pairs of shoes and wears clinging jersey dresses when she wants to look sexy—or sexier. She never wears lipstick.

"I might want to kiss someone," she explains.

She has never been married. "I've never been that much in love with anyone. When I do, it will be a rich, handsome genius. I think they make ideal husbands."

Julie, an exceptional dancer, might have gone along for years portraying showgirls or sexpots like "Stupeyfin' Jones" in 'L'il Abner," which she did in both movie and stage versions.

Then her agent asked her to read for Joe Anthony, the director of "Marriage-Go-Round."

"I don't lie but I exaggerate so I told him I was Swedish and could speak Swedish."

The part called for a sexy Swede who wants a happily married man to father her baby eugenically—her body and beauty plus his brains.

"Mr. Anthony has hypnotic eyes. He gave me something to read in Icelandic. I thought it was Swedish. He didn't know either—so I got the part."

Investigate Two Thefts In Monroe

Monroe police are investigating two thefts and two attempted thefts that were reported to them yesterday.

Officers arrested a 10-year-old Negro boy for shoplifting in a downtown store. The boy was accused of taking an item valued at $1.50 from Morgan and Lindsey.

He is being held in the juvenile detention home, and will be tried in juvenile court.

The theft of a fan from the Christian Children's Fund Headquarters at 721 DeSiard St. is still unsolved.

A worker at the establishment told police that she placed a 16-inch, oscillating fan in the front part of the building yesterday morning and went to the back of the building. She said that when she returned, the fan was gone.

Mrs. Roy, of Frosty Kream, 1701 Jackson St., reported to police that someone tried to gain entrance to a cigarette machine which was situated just outside the building.

Investigating ofifcers stated that the lock had been pried off the door of the machine, but that nothing had been taken from it.

In another theft attempt, it was reported that someone tried to break into a drink machine at the Lion Service Station at 1000 Jackson St. Friday night. A quarter-inch blade screwdriver was found near the machine, and police believe that it was used to pry the door of the machine.

Officers said that nothing was taken from the machine.

Man Injured In Two-Car Collision

A West Monroe man fell asleep behind the wheel of his car yesterday morning, causing a two-car collision which brought minor injuries to the driver of the second vehicle.

Injured was Ellis B. Peddy Jr., 38, of 102 Gulpha Drive, and the "sleepy" driver, Howard L. Hobson, 22, of 1110 Arkansas Rd., was charged with reckless driving.

The accident occurred at 5:20 a.m. at the intersection of Slack and Trenton streets, according to police. Damages amounted to over $100.

Hobson was traveling south on Trenton Street when he stated that he fell asleep and his automobile strayed into the northbound traffic lane.

His vehicle struck the Peddy car, which was going south on Trenton Street.

Peddy was taken to the St. Francis hospital by a Kilpatrick's ambulance where he was treated and released yesterday afternoon.

Gen. Lemnitzer Wins Approval As Staff Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer won unanimous approval Saturday from the Senate Armed Services Committee for the top military post of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The committee also recommended confirmation for Gen. George Henry Decker, 58, as Army chief of staff to succeed Lemnitzer in that post.

It also approved retirement of Air Force Gen. Nathan F. Twining, present chairman of the military chiefs, as a four-star general. The exact retirement date is undetermined.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga), chairman, said the favorable committee actions would be reported to the Senate this week, after lapse of the week of time the group always has observed before approving nominations.

Lemnitzer, 60, and Decker, one of the few Army chiefs who is not a West Point graduate, testified in person before the committee approved their promotions.

Negro Held In Valve Theft

Monroe Dixon, 34, of Route Three, Swartz, was arrested at noon yesterday in Monroe for the theft of a water valve.

Dixon allegedly picked the valve up, valued at less than $20, and was trying to sell it. The valve had been dug up by the city, and when workers came to pick it up, the valve was missing.

Dixon is being held on a $200 bond.

Consider Meeting

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President William V. S. Tubman says African nations are considering a meeting of chiefs of state or foreign ministers on the Congo situation. He told his weekly news conference he shuddered when he heard that Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba said the Congo regime had lost confidence in U. N. Secretary.

OPEL REKORD

Opel's trim 5-passenger Rekord sedan makes good motoring sense from every point of view. The styling is smooth and pleasant to the eye—nothing faddish about it. Performance is smart with especially good response at low speed as well as effortless cruising at higher speeds. All this plus gas mileage up to 30 M.P.G. makes Opel the "Luxurious Economy Car".

OPEL CARAVAN

Probably the most unusual thing about the Opel Caravan station wagon—aside from its economy of price and operation is the amount of cargo it can carry in relation to its size and weight . . . better than 2000 pounds. Opel pioneered in the use of utilized body construction. The present strength, rigidity, quietness and durability of the Opel body is the result of continuous design improvements over a period of more than 20 years.

We invite you to see and drive the OPEL soon.

SEGREGATION ROUNDUP

Spotlight This Fall Is On Situation At New Orleans

ATLANTA, (UPI) — The nation's school desegregation spotlight this fall is on New Orleans where a serious crisis could develop and involve both major presidential candidates in a few weeks, the Southern regional council said today.

In New Orleans, the council said, "the Deep South at last faces the demand that it comply with the law."

It warned of a danger of riots and violence attending the controversy in Louisiana.

But the council sad that "when desegregation breaches the Deep South the myth of Southern ability to defy the law will have been fatally punctured; the consequence could be an emotional release in the upper South to move without the lash of the law.

"If, on the other hand, the imminent (school closing) crisis in New Orleans is not overcome, or even if New Orleans treads the bitter path of Little Rock between 1957-59, the prospects will be gloomy for the South and for national self-respect."

The council is an organization of white and Negro Southerners interested in "equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Its annual report tonight on school desegregation for 1960-61 underscored the gravity of the New Orleans situation. It forecast a "distinct possibility" that under Louisiana's school closing laws public classrooms will be shuttered not only in New Orleans but in each parish of the state.

The city is under orders by Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright to desegregate its public schools beginning with the first grade at the 1960-61 term opening little more than a week away.

"What lies ahead in the next few weeks for New Orleans no one can forecast," it said. But it cited responsible beliefs that the city's schools would be closed. "And if the governor does not extend the closure throughout the state the federal courts, under the Norfolk precedent (equal protecton clause of the U. S. Constitution) almost certainly will."

"Within the existing claimate of Louisiana politics, there is also a danger of riots and violence.

"A serious crisis in New Orleans, especially if prolonged or violent, would almost force the presidential candidates to state what they would do about it if in office, and would surely involve the present national administration. The attendant controversy would be an omnipresent issue of the presidential campaign."

Louisiana's Gov. Jimmie H. Davis this week seized the New Orleans public school system from the school board and directed them to open Sept. 7 on a segregated basis until the legislature votes otherwise.

The NAACP previously asked Wright to enjoin Davis and state attorney general Jack Gremillion from any action to block the desegregation order.

Gremillion said Davis' seizure order was designed to let the legislature alone come up with a plan for integration and "leave to them what is deliberate speed in desegregating schools.

"The people of Louisiana are dead set on being left alone to run their schools as they see fit," he said.

New Orleans is the third largest segregated school system in the country, behind Houston and Dallas, Tex., neither of which were regarded in the report as Deep South locations. Atlanta, Ga., has been given until September, 1961, to come up with a desegregation plan.

"In a way," SRC said, "there is cause to regret that New Orleans, rather than Atlanta, wll be the first city of the Deep South to meet the test of desegregation. Unlike Atlanta, where the problem has been under vigorous citizen discussion since at least January, 1959, New Orleans has steadily, almost determinedly, ignored the likelihood that it would be affected."

It said a few citizens groups have been formed to defend open schools. But it said anti-integration sentiment in the city is strong and "there seems little doubt that extreme segregationist forces will, for a time at least, dominate opinion in the state at large, and will press the state government toward intransigence."

Other highlights of the SEC report:

—Houston, Tex. (under orders by Federal Judge Ben C. Connally to desegregate ts public schools system, sixth largest in the nation, this September) Houston's "defense of segregation...has been marked in ingenious procrastination" but unless the Court of Appeals decides differently, Houston schools will be desegregated in September. "The city has been curiously quiet, even in recent weeks."

Knoxville, Tenn. (faces the prospect of desegregation next term wth a stairstep integration plan.) "Community opinion does not seem to be particularly aroused, but it is believed to be willing to accept desegregation in stride."

—Pine Bluff, Ark. (where the Dollarway school district may be desegregate next month.) "The history of its conflict to date would suggest the possibility of another challenge to law and order."

—Florida. It is the state "where the most varied and most demanding challenges on school segregation are being carried out."

For the South as a whole, the report cited nearly 50 school desegregation cases on federal court dockets.

Dairy Princess Receives Crown

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana's dairy pricess for 1960 is 17-year-old Martha Ann Burford of Gloster.

She was crowned Friday night at the climax of pageant ceremonies.

The brown-eyed Grand Cane High School graduate was selected from a field of seven in the competition sponsored by the American Dairy Assn., of Louisiana.

Miss Burford was crowned by the 1959 dairy pricess, Sandra Girouard of Kaplan, who will represent the state in the American Dairy Assn. contest in Chicago this fall.

Dorothy Williams, Keithville, was chosen first runner-up. Margaret Troth, 19, Zachary, was second runner-up. Shirley Ann Vincent of New Iberia won the Miss Congeniality title.

SEGREGATION ROUNDUP

Spotlight This Fall Is On Situation At New Orleans

ATLANTA, (UPI) — The nation's school desegregation spotlight this fall is on New Orleans where a serious crisis could develop and involve both major presidential candidates in a few weeks, the Southern regional council said today.

In New Orleans, the council said, "the Deep South at last faces the demand that it comply with the law."

It warned of a danger of riots and violence attending the controversy in Louisiana.

But the council sad that "when desegregation breaches the Deep South the myth of Southern ability to defy the law will have been fatally punctured; the consequence could be an emotional release in the upper South to move without the lash of the law.

"If, on the other hand, the imminent (school closing) crisis in New Orleans is not overcome, or even if New Orleans treads the bitter path of Little Rock between 1957-59, the prospects will be gloomy for the South and for national self-respect."

The council is an organization of white and Negro Southerners interested in "equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Its annual report tonight on school desegregation for 1960-61 underscored the gravity of the New Orleans situation. It forecast a "distinct possibility" that under Louisiana's school closing laws public classrooms will be shuttered not only in New Orleans but in each parish of the state.

The city is under orders by Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright to desegregate its public schools beginning with the first grade at the 1960-61 term opening little more than a week away.

"What lies ahead in the next few weeks for New Orleans no one can forecast," it said. But it cited responsible beliefs that the city's schools would be closed. "And if the governor does not extend the closure throughout the state the federal courts, under the Norfolk precedent (equal protecton clause of the U. S. Constitution) almost certainly will."

"Within the existing claimate of Louisiana politics, there is also a danger of riots and violence.

"A serious crisis in New Orleans, especially if prolonged or violent, would almost force the presidential candidates to state what they would do about it if in office, and would surely involve the present national administration. The attendant controversy would be an omnipresent issue of the presidential campaign."

Louisiana's Gov. Jimmie H. Davis this week seized the New Orleans public school system from the school board and directed them to open Sept. 7 on a segregated basis until the legislature votes otherwise.

The NAACP previously asked Wright to enjoin Davis and state attorney general Jack Gremillion from any action to block the desegregation order.

Gremillion said Davis' seizure order was designed to let the legislature alone come up with a plan for integration and "leave to them what is deliberate speed in desegregating schools.

"The people of Louisiana are dead set on being left alone to run their schools as they see fit," he said.

New Orleans is the third largest segregated school system in the country, behind Houston and Dallas, Tex., neither of which were regarded in the report as Deep South locations. Atlanta, Ga., has been given until September, 1961, to come up with a desegregation plan.

"In a way," SRC said, "there is cause to regret that New Orleans, rather than Atlanta, wll be the first city of the Deep South to meet the test of desegregation. Unlike Atlanta, where the problem has been under vigorous citizen discussion since at least January, 1959, New Orleans has steadily, almost determinedly, ignored the likelihood that it would be affected."

It said a few citizens groups have been formed to defend open schools. But it said anti-integration sentiment in the city is strong and "there seems little doubt that extreme segregationist forces will, for a time at least, dominate opinion in the state at large, and will press the state government toward intransigence."

Other highlights of the SEC report:

—Houston, Tex. (under orders by Federal Judge Ben C. Connally to desegregate ts public schools system, sixth largest in the nation, this September) Houston's "defense of segregation...has been marked in ingenious procrastination" but unless the Court of Appeals decides differently, Houston schools will be desegregated in September. "The city has been curiously quiet, even in recent weeks."

Knoxville, Tenn. (faces the prospect of desegregation next term wth a stairstep integration plan.) "Community opinion does not seem to be particularly aroused, but it is believed to be willing to accept desegregation in stride."

—Pine Bluff, Ark. (where the Dollarway school district may be desegregate next month.) "The history of its conflict to date would suggest the possibility of another challenge to law and order."

—Florida. It is the state "where the most varied and most demanding challenges on school segregation are being carried out."

For the South as a whole, the report cited nearly 50 school desegregation cases on federal court dockets.

Dairy Princess Receives Crown

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana's dairy pricess for 1960 is 17-year-old Martha Ann Burford of Gloster.

She was crowned Friday night at the climax of pageant ceremonies.

The brown-eyed Grand Cane High School graduate was selected from a field of seven in the competition sponsored by the American Dairy Assn., of Louisiana.

Miss Burford was crowned by the 1959 dairy pricess, Sandra Girouard of Kaplan, who will represent the state in the American Dairy Assn. contest in Chicago this fall.
